ALLIES DRIVE WEDGE INTO VALMONTONE LINE NIGHT BOMBERS BLAST INVASION RAIL CENTRES

Velletri Reported Abandoned By German Troops

Canadians Advance Steadily Along Via Casalina After Taking Frosinone

BITTER RESISTANCE

By NORAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, June 1 — (AP) — The Allies have driven a deep wedge into the enemy's Valmontone line, occupying strategic high points in the historic Alban hills northeast and northwest of Velletri, and now are fighting within sight of Rome.

The advances were won against the strongest kind of German resistance, a communique said today.

The Allied command was silent on Velletri itself, but German radio reports indicated the shell and bomb-battered town had been left after hot street fighting.

The 5th Army — with which at least one division of the Canadian corps is fighting—is advancing mainly up highway 6, via Casalina, capturing mountain positions within 24 miles by road from Rome. Frosinone, with a population of more than 20,000, is the most important town and communications centre yet seized in the drive along highway 6.

It fell to British infantry and armor after a sharp battle.

Capture High Ground

Other elements pressing forward in the vicinity of the Appian Way captured prominent high ground on the lake shore west of Velletri.

The 5th Army gains from Valmontone to the Tyrrhenian coast were officially called "limited but important."

Three miles west of the fortified town of Lanuvio armored units crossed into Poso IX Campoleone and maintained steady pressure on the enemy in that area interlaced with canals and ditches.

An official spokesman said all the gains in the Lanuvio sector were made in difficult terrain against such enemy strongholds as dugouts, concrete pillboxes, and well-laid gun emplacements. The enemy had concentrated self-propelled artillery east of shattered Lanuvio.

Advance Astride Road

British troops nearer the coast advanced astride a road north of Ardea, the capital of their gains was not disclosed. They encountered strong machine-gun and artillery fire.

Field Marshal Kesselring continued to increase his defensive forces in the Valmontone area to keep highway 6 open for German units massing fleeing from the southern battle sector. It was officially announced that the Allies made some gains in that area despite the stubborn resistance.

The enemy stepped up the pace of his withdrawal out of the mountain area where the 5th Army's French troops have been steadily driving back from the Pontine Marsh area.

French units reached northward from Carpineto and the last Nazi defenders fled from the Lepini hills, which had been a bulwark guarding the Casilina from the south. Other French units advanced four miles and occupied the village of Patrica, 8 1-2 miles southwest of Frosinone, and Monte Placciano-lia, the same distance southwest of Perentina.

"French troops are maintaining contact with German rearguard detachments falling back toward Frosinone and Arcenaso, where it is deemed almost certain that a determined stand will be made," an official announcement said.

Occupy Sora

Eighth army troops occupied the town of Sora, northeast of Frosinone and 13 miles up highway 82 from its junction with highway 6 at Arce. Sora fell to a column of New Zealanders driving toward Avezzano 34 miles beyond.

British forces also overran the towns of Ripi, four miles southeast of Frosinone, and Torrice, two miles to the east—both north of highway 6.

San Giovanni, four miles northwest of Arce, was taken as the 5th army pressed against the last enemy positions near the junction of the Liri and Sacco rivers.

Jap Strongpoint Of Malakawng Taken By Allies

Kandy, Ceylon, June 1 (AP) — Allied troops have captured the Japanese stronghold of Malakwng on the main Mogaung Valley road in North Burma, wiping out resistance, headquarters announced today.

Other forces established a line south of Warong and Sharaw in the valley and were declared making progress against pillboxes and entrenchments guarding the heleaguered enemy base of Mytikyina.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique said that "our troops are continuing their assault from the north, south and west . . . and make satisfactory progress" at Mytikyina, a major Japanese base in North Burma.

He described Malakawng as "the centre of Japanese resistance" in the Mogaung Valley, which lies just to the west of the Mytikyina area. The Allies advanced on the strongpoint from south of the main road.

Two American destroyers supported the British operations on the 5th Army's left flank yesterday, bombarding enemy positions in the Sperlonga area north of Gaeta, Allied Soldiers Liken.

By night, Allied aircraft made attacks on Allied supply lines, but the largest of these involved only air planes.

In what was described as the largest close-co-operative attack on the large-scale attack on Castello, Allied medium bombers yesterday supported the battle for Rome by raiding by low-flying formations on the Lake Albano area, near Pascati and between Lanuvio and Velletri.

The Allied air forces last 14 hourly bombers and nine other sorties yesterday's 2,500 sorties, including raids against the German rail yards at Piccesi and objectives in Yugoslavia. Two-hundred-three enemy planes were destroyed.

3,657,000 U.S. Troops Overseas, Period of Decisive Action at Hand —Stimson

Washington, June 1—(AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson said today that with 3,657,000 United States Army troops already overseas, the deployment of air and service forces is practically completed "and the period of decisive action is at hand."

The bulk of forces now moving out of the United States to combat areas is composed of ground troops prepared to use the bases and take advantage of the preliminary air assaults for the final blow against the enemy, the Secretary told a Press Conference, adding:

"By the end of 1944, the number of troops overseas will be increased by more than 3,000,000 men, a approximately two-thirds of total strength."

CANADIAN TROOPS TAKE FROSINONE IN SHARP FIGHT

British And Canadian Armor Race Virtually Side By Side For Honor of Being First APPROACHES MINED

By ASTLEY HAWKINS
(Reuter's War Correspondent)

With the 8th Army in Italy, June 1 (C.P.) (Reuter)—Canadian troops occupied the important road junction town of Frosinone this morning against little resistance from the Germans whose rearguards were withdrawn after fighting against delaying action.

Canadian and British armor had been racing virtually side by side for the town, 54 miles from Rome, which the Germans have held for about 10 miles to the southeast, since Prime Minister Churchill's fall from the west.

Canadian infantry reached the outskirts of the town last night and sent in a four-man patrol. The whole convoy entered the town today, followed later by a battalion.

Doug Ferrier, a Canadian Press war correspondent, reported Westcan Canada battalions were advancing on the right flank while Eastcan Canada battalions were moving up on the left. He reported also that tanks of a Western regiment were operating with Eastern Canadians Tuesday. This, possibly, was the Ontario regiment.

Some Opposition

In Frosinone some opposition was met from isolated snipers left in the town and there was some anti-tchine-gun fire. All approaches to the town had been heavily mined.

Amongst the mines was a concrete picket type made up of a concrete covered charge of shrapnel on the end of a long, spiked-driven close in to the ground. A wire was then stretched from the detonator to a tree and when exploded the mine threw out a furious mixture of shrapnel, concrete and fragments.

Booby mines in this area of operations are being met in a greater number than at any time since the beginning of the present offensive.

New German delaying action is set a new, intensified line between snipers to pick off Allied sappers who come to clear it. Germans are using a simulation of retreat over before to harass the Allied advance, many of them being perched in trees in what turn out to be camouflaged machine-guns. The advance in some places moves so fast that snipers frequently overrun the line of their own men. Nor can snipers afford to give immediate fire, as this would bring now other than de-mining roads and reconnoitring parties to carry on the army's move.

Choked with Traffic

On the roads leading to Frosinone the Germans had concentrated on sidetracks warning traffic of unclaimed mines. The routes leading to the north were choked with Allied traffic moving through dust clouds so thick that drivers quickly become unrecognizable behind masks of mud, sweat and dust caked by burning sunshine.

The Luftwaffe is still conspicuous by its absence but every 15 minutes relays of Allied fighter-bombers attack and strafe the Germans' chief escape routes where hundreds of transport vehicles have been destroyed.

"WATER BUFFALO" REHEARSE FOR COMING INVASION

These "Water Buffalo" amphibian tanks are spreading out over the water to their rendezvous at sea, as they will do in the actual invasion of Europe. Second and third from the left are turret tanks with 37 mm. cannon and heavy machine-guns. Others shown here are cargo and personnel-carrying "amtracks" or "Water Buffalo" tractors, which are also used in the actual invasion. Soldiers are seen entering the surf in rehearsal tactics. When attacking, army drivers and gunners scoot underneath their hatches. Only scarf machine-gunners are visible.

U.S. HESITANCY IN RECOGNIZING COM. PUZZLING

States Fears Group in France Not Supporting Gen. De Gaulle

UNDERGROUND'S VIEW

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 1 (CP) — Allied and neutral diplomats in Washington, and many high government authorities seem puzzled by the United States government's hesitancy to give full, if temporary recognition to the French Committee of National Liberation.

The general opinion today seems to be that President Roosevelt alone has the answer and that he has revealed it only to his intimate aides.

It is believed that if the United States granted such recognition, Britain, Russia and Canada would quickly, and gladly follow suit.

The Canadian Press asked a Fighting French official, comparatively fresh from the European and North African scene, if he could explain it. He said he did not even have a theory.

It has been suggested—and Prime Minister Churchill mentioned it in his last parliamentary review—that the United States fears there is a substantial group in France which does not support Gen. Charles de Gaulle, 53-year-old leader of the Fighting French.

May Replace Unknown

President Roosevelt may feel the French underground, necessarily silent as it has been, may produce some "unknown" with popular support, when the fight comes into the open and a political ruler is to be chosen.

This possibility was suggested to the French Committee's spokesman here and he agreed it might be a reason for Mr. Roosevelt's reluctance, but he said it was not a sound one.

The French underground, the spokesman said, was more than 90 per cent behind de Gaulle. There was not the slightest doubt of that, he said, because the Committee's strength was constantly increasing from the resistance movement.

JUNE -- PERHAPS MOST FATEFUL MONTH OF WAR

Turkey Reported Likely to Move Into War at Allies' Signal

TITO ORDERS DRIVE

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 1 (AP)—June—perhaps the most fateful month of the war—looms with an air attack on the Germans' channel front defences so terrific it shook the English coast, while at the opposite end of Hitler's unsure European siege stand, Marshal Tito ordered his Yugoslavs into an all-out attack and Turkey was reported likely to move into war at the Allies' invasion signal.

Marshal Tito's order of the day called for a decisive assault "particularly now when the last blow of the Red army and Anglo-American Allied troops is approaching," and his communique announced capture of an enemy base in Dalmatia and hard blows along the whole Nazi line.

Across the Adriatic, Allied troops fought their way into sight of the towers of Rome as Field Marshal Albert Kesselring continued his retreat, and his call upon reserves for which Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rurolf Gerd Von Rundstedt has first priority along the tense western front.

Across the murky channel, where thunderstorms added to the extensive "fury" of the Allied air onslaught on the Nazis' front line, the German Command tightened their control of France to active operations basis.

The latest move in breaking up all gatherings was a Vichy radio announcement that all horse racing had been cancelled "owing to the present situation."

Opening a London photographic exhibition, Sir William James, the admiralty's chief of naval information, said "we are going to have a month of work" and declared "before long we shall reach that stage when we begin to launch a great Amphibious expedition."

Penicillin May Be Available For Civilian Use By End of July

Montreal, June 1—(CP)—The rumor in medical circles that penicillin was likely to be available for civilian use in Canada before the end of July was declared well founded by Dr. Donald Fraser, professor of hygiene at the University of Toronto yesterday, in an address addressing la societe medicale de Montreal here.

Reserved up to now for use among the armed forces, he said penicillin was being produced in sufficient quantity today to allow for limited distribution through selected hospitals.

Tank Repair Men Perform Heroic Work in Battle of Gustav Line

By DOUG HOW
(CP War Correspondent)
With the 8th Army in Italy, June 1, (CP)—The Canadian Tank repairmen fought in the battle of the Gustav Line came out of it with more tanks than they had at the start.

Behind that achievement are the men of the Royal Canadian mechanical and electrical engineers. In those hectic hours and days when the Rapido River bridgehead was the hinge of dubious strength they fought a war of recovery and repair that never slackened under the heaviest fire.

Lloyd Patton of Edmonton, was one of those men. He is a captain, the regimental electrical and mechanical engineer of an Ontario armored regiment. He commands the unit's light aid detachment.

Ontario tanks had crossed a Bailey Bridge that morning of May 12 and one after one they became mired in the mud on the far side. Some were bogged hopelessly, took one look and reported that things were too hot for recovery.

But Capt. Patton went down and he didn't come back for hours. Between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. he directed the first recovery tanks at his disposal in an operation that put 14 of a floundering 20 back into an action that vitally needed them.

A 15th was struck by a shell and burst into flames. Patton's men tried to beat out the fire, failed and dumped the Sherman into the river. It was recovered days later.

A 16th was struck by a shell and was a total loss. Three others were recovered the next day by Capt. E. J. Richardson, Oshawa, Acting E.M.E. of the Western Canada regiment, and his light aid crews.

From 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. Capt. Patton and his men did repairs, then their own tanks bogged down. They spent the night there and other stranded soldiers came to seek the protection of their armor until there were ten men to each tank, among them two wounded Indians. A Bren gun carrier had been lying all day. In that one long night the second hit on those 20 crippled Shermans.

But the only casualty was a man who lost his little finger.

The sappers of R.C.E.M.E. in the Rapido fight was a triumph of courage and of organization and training.

From front to rear men did jobs that in civilian life would call for previous actions. The light aid detachments of the armored units shattered by mines, put in-bogey assemblies weighing 400 pounds; the tanks weren't brought back to them. They drove up to them, got what shelter they could from their own tanks and went to work.

About six per cent of the Canadian tank casualties in the Gustav battle were total losses. Patton's repairable 70 per cent were back with their units by May 18, the rest two were under repair.

Nazi Installations On French Channel Coast Blasted

No Sign of Daylight Aerial Operations From Britain Due To Murky Weather

2,240 TONS DROPPED

By GLADWYN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 1—(AP)—In simultaneous overnight assaults, powerful forces of R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. bombers hammered Nazi coast defe installations along the French Channel coast and fanned out over a 300-mile front in France to blast those of the largest railroad centres through which the Germans are shuttling their forces to meet the impending Allied invasion.

Murky weather prevailed over the English Channel early today, however, and there were no signs of daylight aerial operations from Britain—the first lull in the Allied offensive in two weeks, although heavy bombers did not go out last Friday. At 9 a.m. (3 a.m. E.D.T.) The German radio reported the night was free of enemy planes and one hour later broadcast that "single enemy planes were approaching"—apparently on reconnaissance missions.

In the mid-centre attacks last night some 500 night bombers pinned the longer yards 16 miles outside Paris, Tergnier 75 miles northeast of Paris and Saumur 100 miles southwest of Paris. Eight British planes failed to return from the operations, which included mine-laying in enemy waters, the Air Ministry announced.

Precisely 2,240 tons of bombs were dropped in the night attacks. Hailfaxes and Wellingtons of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force pinched railroad ties tracks in the Danube river's from gate canal on the Romania-Yugoslavia border in the night.

Some Planes Over Britain

After a one-night interval the Germans again sent planes against Britain. These raiders droned over East Anglia and dropped a few bombs, but there were no alerts nor mainly reconnoitering. It was officially reported no one was hurt by the German visits and only slight damage was caused.

The Air Ministry's report on the big French coast bombardment said simply a number of military objectives were attacked." This operation began just before midnight and was resumed until 3 o'clock today. Crews days of bombers passing each other

Acting P-C Leader Praises King's London Speech

Ottawa, June 1 (CP) — Senator John Hair, acting Progressive Conservative leader, yesterday in the Senate praised Prime Minister Mackenzie King's address to the British parliament on the occasion of the Prime Ministers' Conference in London.

Senator Haig's comment followed mention by Dr. J. H. King, government Senate leader, of the part played by the Prime Minister at the London conference. Senator Haig said he was speaking mainly on his own behalf rather than as acting leader, but he had listened "with a great deal of pleasure" to the Prime Minister's address in London.

Senator King made the reference in announcing that the Senate today would join the Commons in addressing a message to Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia.

going and coming. "Hell, let loose," an English coast observer said.

So accurate was the bombing at Trappes that the Paris barrage knocked out the ground flare indicator and the Pathfinder had to swoop in again to drop another set.

All three rail yards last were attacked before. Trappes was one of the first targets when the campaign against communications started. With the great damage done in the operations on the other side of Paris, rail facilities around the German-occupied capital undoubtedly are at a low ebb.

Fly 143,000 Sorties in Month

The operations yesterday provided a thunderous finale for the month of May, which saw Allied planes fly a record-breaking 143,000 sorties. United States bombers and their fighter escorts flying from British bases destroyed 2,362 enemy aircraft during the month. This was a record, the previous high monthly toll being 784 in October, 1943. A total of 287 American heavy bombers and 153 fighters were lost in May. The latter exceeded by seven the previous all-time high of 146 lost in April.

Heavy bombers of the U.S. 8th Air Force dropped 12,000 individual sorties during the past month and Liberators of the 9th and 15th Forces made 16,000 additional sorties in escorting them.

R. A. F. heavy bombers were estimated to have flown 19,000 sorties from Britain, losing 263 planes. Additional thousands of sorties were flown by the tactical units of the Allied expeditionary air force.

While the weather of the Mediterranean air force's activities last month are not known to have been, it is known to have flown more than 30,000 sorties of all types of planes, losing at least 171 and destroying at least 176 Nazi aircraft.

D-DAY SERVICE AT ARMOURIES SET FOR 12.45 P.M.

With arrangements now virtually complete for religious observances of "D-Day" municipal authorities and members of the Belleville Association are requested to assemble in the armouries regular department while it is expected another will be taken on to bring the personnel up to full strength season.

Appointed as firemen are Barney Smith, who last year acted as relief fireman during the summer holiday season. Mr. Smith lives at 36 Parker St. The two others are Stanley Longhurst, Victoria Road, and Roy Wardle, of West Moira Street. Mr. Wardle formerly operated a shoe repair stand at the Upper Bridge.

Fire Chief William Lynch in announcing that the new firemen had started work, stressed that they could not be termed as an increase to the fire department staff but would be considered as replacements for men who have left the department since the war began. Mr. Longhurst has already started to serve and has served in an attempt to avoid striking a child, who was knocked to the pavement, where the little fellow sustained painful bruises, abrasions and lacerations. Assisted by members of the Belleville Fire Department, witnessed by Fire Accident, Mr. Slavin placed the injured child in his motor car and rushed him to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. G. S. Cronk was in attendance. The force of the impact was so heavy that it broke the headlight glass on Mr. Slavin's car. The accident later modified police of the accident.

J. Clare Hayes, Tweed, Appointed Inspector on City Police Force

Belleville Police Commission created a new position on the Police Department to be known in the future as Inspector of Investigation, and today it was announced that Chief J. Clare Hayes, of Tweed, had been appointed to the new detective inspector post. Upon assuming his new position Inspector Hayes will come directly under the supervision of Chief R. W. Probert or Deputy Chief Cummings.

A native of Enterprise, Ont., Inspector Hayes joined the police employment of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1918 as an constable, a position he held until transferred to Tweed where in October of 1925 he resigned to accept the position as chief of police in the village. During the period when a great storm at Tweed Mr. Hayes has conducted several major investigations with good results and considered by heads of much larger departments as experienced detective. Recently he has been named county constable while at the same time additional appointment to be may carry into his local police work. Chief Hayes comes to Belleville well recommended by the municipal officials of Tweed, who personally endorsed his application for his position as constable, his promptness, intelligence and ability to perform his duties.

A married man Inspector Hayes has one son, 15-year-old John Hayes, who recently successfully concluded his first year at Queen's University, where he has attended the Canadian Officers' Training Corps from which he has gained his high standing, as well as in his academic accomplishments. He has also an call for the Canadian Active Army and is eligible to attend the Brockville C. O. T. C.

"Naturally we are pleased to obtain the services of such a well experienced police officer as Chief Hayes, as I feel he will be a distinct asset to our department," asserted Chief R. W. Probert after the Police Commission had announced the creation of the new position on the Police Department. The full commission, consisting of Judge Cameron, chairman, Magistrate Lloyd and Mayor Ellis, conducted a brief discussion that led to the new post and also to the appointment of Chief Hayes to the position of Inspector of Investigation in Belleville Police Department. His will assume office as soon as his business association with the village of Tweed is concluded.

O.S.D. Pupils Enjoy Afternoon Outing As Guests of No. 5 I.T.S. Personnel

Although it was but for the afternoon, pupils attending classes at the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville roamed through halls and class rooms of their former school here being met by personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School, when on Wednesday they were the guests of the local Kiwanis club and of the staff and personnel of No. 5 I.T.S. for an afternoon's picnic holiday.

Escorted by courteous officers the children and their teachers were guided on conducted tours of the various buildings of the training station, saw a moving picture show and then were entertained during the sporting events of the annual Field Day at the Exhibition Park where, provided by the Kiwanis club.

It was an afternoon of real enjoyment for the kiddies, the majority of whom had not been at their former class rooms, and gave them an opportunity of seeing how their former school is being utilized for the training of Canada's fighting personnel. In September it is expected the school will again be turned over to the Ontario Department of Education for occupancy by the O. S. D. Only three children attending O. S. D. in the city were unable to enjoy the afternoon holiday, Wilfred Reid and Ronald Lee other having during the morning hurt her leg. Greeted by Sgdn. Ldr. Fa-tone.

Squadron Leader Pan Fortune, commanding officer of No. 5 I.T.S. staff, added his word of welcome to the party and with the assistance of Wor. Bro. Wm. Ponsford, chairman of the Under-privileged Child and Welfare committee, the entire committee was present to lend a hand in the direction of the program.

Many were the changes in the school and grounds noted by the older pupils who remember the classrooms of the former O.S.D. started work, it was stated that they could not be termed as an increase to the fire department staff but would be considered as replacements for men who have left the department since the war began. Mr. Longhurst has already started to serve and has served in an attempt to avoid this morning with the day shift, while Mr. Wardle will go on duty this evening with the night shift.

Jap Bombs "Boomerang" On Retreating "Nips"

Somewhere in the Southwest Pacific, June 1 — (AP) — Retreating enemy troops in Netherlands New Guinea are being rocked by bombs made in Japan. The bombs, found in a supplied ammunition dump at Hollandia, were re-rigged by Capt. John R. Crandell of Arlington, Va., and are being used by U. S. planes. Crandell, an ordnance officer, armed the "boomerang" bombs with Japanese fuses, tail fins and arming wires.

Drew Says He Does Not Share Fear Of Post-War Over Producing Food

Toronto, June 1 (CP)—County and district agricultural representatives in Ontario today continued their study of wartime and post-war problems during the second day of a two-day meeting which began yesterday with a discussion of farm labor, marketing and other questions.

Premier Drew told a dinner meeting of the representatives last night that he did not share fear that because of the high production of foodstuffs to meet wartime needs would create post-war problems, providing plans were made in advance for the orderly procedure in which agricultural production would fall.

"If sanity prevails after the war and intelligence is applied to the problems of peace, we do not need to fear over-production in our lifetime, he said. "It is impossible for us, so far removed from the impact of war, to realize that today there are 25,000,000 people on the verge of starvation, or actually starving, and that the destruction of the productive capacity of countries like Canada will stand between these people and a return to the dark ages.

"But assuming that the distribution of food is organized, when these countries are fed, there will be a demand for our foodstuffs such as has never been contemplated in the past."

Agriculture Minister Kennedy, who urged the agricultural representatives to keep in close touch with the farmers in their counties, said that the government proposed to continue its research and experimentation to assist farmers. In the maintaining of high standards of products. He expressed amazement at the volume of wartime production and said there were great problems ahead in disposing of the volume of produce that could be produced on Ontario farms after the war.

The minister also voiced concern over soil depletion and said active steps would be taken to institute a program of restoration of soil fertility in existing areas and of soil conservation.

North Bay Lads Seeing Sights Held in City

On Sunday two North Bay lads boarded a C. P. R. freight train with intentions of visiting the Lakehead. Out, the home of the famed Dionne Quintuplets, they got as far as Belleville, didn't stop at Callander and before the lads could be taken off the train by Provincial Sentinels Fails. Exploring that town for a couple of days the two boys, Canada at an early age. For some 16 and 17 years of age respectively, boarded another train at Sentinels Falls, evidently thinking they would return them to North Bay and home. Yes, they were indeed surprised when they got off the freight and walked directly into the hands of railway police and information they were in Belleville. Local police authorities notified their parents and railway tickets were sent to them in order that they could return riding the cushions instead of the rods.

Firemen's Efforts Save Boy's Life

Although he is expected to remain in the hospital until Monday, 12-year-old Robert Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howard, 19 Bridge Street East, who escaped drowning when his playmate George Weeks died at the Quinte Bay on Tuesday evening, is coming along splendidly, it was stated by hospital authorities this morning. His condition is reported today that he would be coming home Friday.

Unconscious when brought out of the water by his father, the lad's life was saved by the prompt action of the crew of the Belleville Fire Department, who applied artificial respiration for 26 minutes before signs of life appeared, according to Fire Chief Lynch. Some of the accident stated, that without question the boy's life had been saved by the firemen's efforts.

Artificial respiration was also given the boy Weeks, but his body was brought from the quarry after the firemen had been working for two hours, but after an hour's continuous effort the boy was pronounced dead by the doctor.

Station Record For 100-YardDash Broken By Smylie

With AC2. Douglas Smylie of Belleville and Pilot Officer Earnest McAdam supplying the driving force between them, the almost clear sweep of the final track meet to be held at No. 5 Initial Training School on Thursday afternoon, three track records and the shot put discus records were the lads.

Making a clean sweep in the 100-yard running distance, Smylie swept down the 100-yard dash course in ten seconds flat to lower the station record for this distance. Smylie was far ahead of the field in the event, which was run with yards to spare. And he repeated in the 220-yard running distance in 25 seconds.

The 440 record was broken when the 440 dash with LAC. McDonough doing the distance in 56.2 seconds. Following the twelve pound weight a close finish.

Course No. 108 piled up a total of 71 points to lead with the field day meet, while X-Flight was second with 41 points and Course 102 fourth with seven points. The officers' event was won by Pilot Officer Cuttriss and Sgt. Fox.

Events were as follows:

Shot Put: AC2 Smylie, 10 seconds; AC2 Watson and AC2 Parnsale.

Pole vault dash: Smylie, 25 seconds; Watson and LAC. Weary.

440 yard dash: LAC. McDonough, 56 1-5 seconds; AC3. Semenciw and AC3. Parnsale.

High Jump: AC2. Pennycook, 5' 5"; AC3. Hilborn and LAC. Usher.

Broad Jump: AC2. Smylie, 18' 5"; Opl. Thropp and LAC. Pidcock.

Shot Put: Pilot Off. Ken McAdam, 45'; LAC. Sharron and LAC. Usher.

Discus: Pilot Off. McAdam 127; LAC. Sharron and LAC. Usher.

Log Jump: Pilot Off. McAdam 20'; AC2. Cameron and Flt. Sgt. Moore.

The tug of war was won by Course 101.

Hugh McKenzie, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Thursday morning in his eighty-three years of age and was a patient in the hospital two days.

Dr. E. O. Platt, Former Mayor Of City, Dies

Dr. E. O. Platt, a former mayor of the city, died at his home, 251 Bridge Street East, on Wednesday afternoon, following a prolonged illness. In his death this city has lost a prominent citizen and physician, who was and to many friends here and throughout the district his passing will be regretted.

The late Dr. Edward O. Platt was born in Brighton and came to Canada at an early age. For some 16 and 17 years of age respectively, after teaching school for some years, he entered as a student at Queen's University, Kingston. At this institution he remained one year during which he obtained his degree of Bachelor of Arts and completed the first year in medicine. He then entered the University of Toronto from which he eventually graduated in medicine. Practised in City 18 years.

For fifteen years Dr. Platt practised his profession in this city and then retired. After retiring he practised for eighteen years. He was a member of the medical staff at the Clifton Springs Sanitarium, Clifton Springs, New York, where he took post graduate studies in the hospitals in New York City during 1913 he went to the Old Country, accompanied by his wife, where he took post graduate studies in London at the hospitals.

During the time Dr. Platt practised here he took a keen interest in municipal affairs and was returned from the Old Country the latter part of 1919, he offered his services as an alderman and was elected to the city council for the years of 1914, 1915 and 1916. In 1918 he was elected to the office of mayor and was re-elected for the year 1919.

Retired in 1927.

In 1927 Dr. Platt returned to this city and lived retired since then. He was a member of the United Church, Bridge Street East, for a time, the former Edna Carrison, and one son, Mr. Stewart Platt, Hamilton.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Bridge Street East, this evening, then at his home, 251 Bridge Street East; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

$290 Out of $876 Is Recovered By Local Police

Here's a story about a thief stealing from a thief.

Earlier in the week city police apprehended to teen aged Toronto lad here in the city, who had run away from his home for three weeks. Incidentally as had some $290 in his possession. He had also a trunk at the lad's uncle's home. Now, this trunk was apprehended in Belleville last Monday he was "broke".

However, Belleville police delved into the matter and yesterday recovered $290 of the $876 which had been stolen by a Prince Edward County lad after restitution was made.

So the story ends with the Toronto boy allegedly stealing money to spend in Belleville while a local youth stole from a thief. Both were apprehended which proves—"crime does not pay".

O.S.D. Move To Former Quarters Is Now Confirmed

Staff and pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf will be back in familiar surroundings when the school reopens in September, it was learned from an authoritative source today.

The announcement made a few days ago by Premier Drew, Minister in a cable from Premier Geo. A. Drew, who is also Ontario Minister of Education, to the effect that the buildings now occupied by No. 5 I.T.S. would be made available for occupation by O.S.D. staff and pupils this fall, has now been confirmed by official communication.

Due to a Provincial-Federal agreement whereby the school has been used by the armed forces as a training unit for the past three years, it is understood the school will be "back to normalcy" until quite late in the fall.

While another source has it that certain buildings now occupied by I.T.S. have received "notice" that their services will be required after June 15, R.C.A.F. officials today would make no statements for publication.

Seven Men Fined For Buying Stolen Gas Ration Books

Trenton, (Special)— J. MacDonald was fined in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday afternoon by Magistrate J. L. Mayo, $100 in default of payment of which he will be required to serve six months in jail. J. MacDonald appeared on a charge of theft of fifteen AA gasoline ration books from an employer's store, where the ration books are issued. He sold the books from $5 each to $10. Seven who bought the books appeared on a charge of receiving stolen goods and six, A. Shenker, P. Jones, G. Arthur, W. Craig, R. DePape and R. Turner, were each fined $135 default of payment, five months.

G. Windover, being the second offence, was fined $150; default six months. Nine of the books were recovered by the Trenton Police.

In sentencing MacDonald, Magistrate J. Lloyd said: "This is not the same as stealing some ordinary article. You have committed theft and have also injured the cause our men are fighting for by taking these gasoline coupons and selling them and causing more gasoline to be used than should be. I think that indicates I cannot be too easy with you. I think you should easily pay $360 including costs, or should serve six months in jail".

He gave a similar lecture to the receivers of the coupon books, and stated if there were no receivers, there would be fewer thieves.

L. Griffith, L. McIntosh, J. Reid, Harold Walker, R. Cossop, were all charged with disorderly conduct and were assessed $7.50 each.

K. Beckwith and Charles Ellis, charged with breaking and entering and theft were remanded a week.

Samuel Boland who pleaded guilty to begging in Trenton was given one month in jail.

J. Rushnal for assaulting an airman was given one year suspended sentence, ordered to keep the peace, and ordered to pay $13.50 costs.

Two cases under the Wartime Prices and Trade Board were engaged for next week.

R. Lester and C. Bell were each fined $50 and costs for careless driving. Both were involved in accidents.

M. Crosby was fined $4.50 for failing to obey traffic signals.

K. Collins was assessed $17.50 for speeding, under the War Measure's Act.

Three were fined the usual $13 for intoxication, and W. Buck was fined $100 and costs for having liquor not purchased on a permit. Two others paid $25 for having liquor in a public place. One paid $1 for breach of the traffic by-law.

His Second Attempt At Suicide Succeeds

Los Angeles, May 31 — (AP) John Beck, 37, sent a money order to an undertaker to pay his funeral expenses. To police who went to his home, Beck explained Monday he had turned on the gas and fallen asleep, but awakened two hours later.

"I must have been an act of God," he added. "How can I get my money back?"

Undertaker Beck's body was found at the home of a friend in Santa Monica with a pistol beside it. Detective E. L. Hicks reported a note nearby read:—

"I want to finish what I started. This is my birthday. I've had enough of this life."

San Diego, Calif., May 31 (AP)— The United naval fliers were killed yesterday when a fighter and a heavy bomber collided over Palomar mountain, 65 miles north of here, it was announced last night.

Japanese Grimly Holding Off U.S. Troops on Island

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, May 31 — (AP)— Dec. 7 held the scales today tank battle shelled from the sea and bombed from the air, unyielding Japanese were reported today—fifth day of the Schouten Islands invasion—still grimly holding off American soldiers two miles from a prized airfield.

The battle of Biak fast as becoming the stoutest of the Netherlands New Guinea campaign. The Japanese on that bigest island of the Schoutens were flinging men and armor in furious counter-attacks in defence of three airfields within bombing range of the Philippines, 580 miles to the northwest.

The present fight is for Mokmer airfield, approached along Biak's south coast by a coastal road dominated by a plateau on which the Japanese have long-prepared defensive positions.

Near Mokmer the Japanese called on medium tanks, firing 75mm. cannons Monday when their 36th Division soldiers suffered heavy losses trying to push the invaders back along the road toward Bosnek where the invaders landed Saturday. Australian army tanks accepted the challenge, destroying eight enemy armored units.

Associated Press war correspondent Spencer Davis reported the Japanese lost 11 of their estimated 30 tanks.

Nearly 200 miles southeastward along the New Guinea coast, other counter-attacking Japanese were repulsed but still clung to Maffin Bay airfield which a comparatively small American force has been trying to capture since landing in that area May 17.

There and at Hollandia, 100 miles to the southeast, the enemy death toll mounted. It was pushed above 5,000 by reports from those two sectors today.

45,000 Germans From Denmark To Italian Front

New York, May. 31 —(CP)— A total of 45,000 Nazi soldiers has been sent to the Italian front from their posts in Denmark, the Swedish newspaper Goteborgs Handels-Och Sjoefartstidning said in an article reported today to the United States Office of War Information.

According to the Swedish newspaper only "seven (Nazi) divisions now remain in Denmark, five of which are stationed in Jutland, one in Sjaelland and one in Fyn."

When the news spread that the troops were being sent to Italy, "many attempts at desertion occurred" and "suicides were committed," the newspaper said.

The fact that the "German commander at Saeby was among those who committed suicide caused a great stir among the troops," the newspaper added.

German Radios Sing 'Watch on The Channel'

London, May 31 — (CP)—German radios apparently have given up as an outworn jest their old hymn of hate, "We Sail Against England."

More realistically they now sing "Die Wacht am Kanal"—The Watch on the Channel. It goes like this:—

We stand in the west; we are fully prepared.
Let the enemy come today.
Yesterday Seville last Saturday after the spread of German inspired rumors that the Allies were about to land from Corsica, and a report reaching here yesterday. The report said more than 500 strikers were arrested.

"When D-Day Comes, Go to a Church and Pray"

Prime Minister Curtin

Prime Minister the Rt. Hon. John Curtin of Australia and Mrs. Curtin are the guests of Canada on their way home from London where Mr. Curtin attended the conference of Prime Ministers and Premiers of the Commonwealth of Nations. Canadians have read much in the news for some years of this leader of the Commonwealth of Australia and his sturdy reliance and confidence which with the spirit of the Australians have done so much to bring about the present satisfactory position of the United Nations in their fight against the outlaw Germans and Japanese.

Australia has been very close to the war and her effort has been one of which that Commonwealth and the whole Empire as well as the other United Nations can take great pride. With the improving condition of affairs as the Nipponese lose step by step the empire in the Pacific which Japan snatched with treachery, Australia continues her war effort at the peak and plans to take her place in the planning for the future security of the world. The story of Australian troops fighting in their own theatre of war as well as in other theatres as in Africa and Europe is proof of the spirit of the people of that young nation which is destined to be one of the greatest of democracies.

Canadians admire the spirit of Australia and her prime minister as that of a sister nation which looks forward to the future with the greatest hopes sure of realization.

The people of Canada through their Government and Prime Minister King are glad to do honor to the representative of the great sister nation of the South West Pacific. They know that the stay of the Prime Minister and his wife in this country will be a happy one.

Plane Figures Tell Story

Meaning of the great bombing raids over Hitler Reich and occupied Europe grows on the reader as he is told of the production of planes by the United Nations. Britain, Canada and the United States contributed well to the magnificent total of plane output since the war began.

Yesterday United States figures were released showing 171,257 planes produced since entering the war and it was stated by the War Production Board that 100,000 planes will be produced this year by the United States. Further illuminating figures are the ratios of U. S. production to that of Germany and Japan, the U. S. ration to German output being raised to 4 to 1 and to that of Japan being raised to 10 to 1 majority in favor of the United States.

When Hitler's folk look upon the Allied armadas, they can read industrial and peacetime strength of the United Nations as well as wartime strength. They have an advantage of American over German and Japanese production tells in a large way the success of the Allied raids over Germany and German targets. It also should mean the protection of Britain and possibly other lands because the United Nations' air strength has been so powerful.

From a small Allied beginning in September, 1939, when Hitler was thrilled with what he thought was the prospect of world conquest by means of his air strength and his army power crossed the borders of Poland, Allied air power has grown greatly that it is becoming his way to doom and the elimination of German aggression from the world.

Britain has done an amazing thing in the production of planes and other implements of war. The British Commonwealth and the United States are credited with producing 300,000 planes as against the German and Japanese output of about 151,000.

It is worth noting that Germany has been holding up aircraft as an implement of war since 1935 and it is believed that German air strength was 24,000 planes when the war started.

The United States is turning out one plane every five minutes of the six days of the week excepting Sunday.

Germany's weakness is that while the United Nations have been increasing output the Germans have been forced to lower theirs, the present Nazi make being about 75 per cent of that of 1942. Her weakness is further emphasized by the destruction by bombs of 40 per cent of the fighter output of Germany. Germany is producing only 1,800 planes a month currently, it is estimated.

Forest Fires

News of many forest fires in various parts of Canada can be a warning to everyone who has occasion to enter the woodlands whether far back in the hinterlands or in the vicinity of the front townships to take care that no lighted matches are dropped and that any camp fires which have been started are quite extinguished. Loss of forest wealth is always serious as everyone knows, particularly in war time when the need of lumber and timber is imperative. Wood has many purposes to which it can be put and timber is one of the greatest resources of a nation. No country can afford to lose its forest wealth through fire.

But there are other dangers in forest fires, danger to settlements, towns and cities, and grave danger to human life.

So extreme care should be taken that no lighted match is allowed to drop into dry grass or into the leaves beneath trees because a forest fire, once gaining a start, may rage long and wide before it is halted and may cause a vast amount of destruction.

It Happened in Crete

(New York Herald Tribune)

If Hollywood had done it (and if Hollywood hasn't done it yet, Hollywood will) it would have been dismissed as the rankest melodrama. In an adventure story it would have been impossible. But it happened on Crete. A small group of British soldiers and civilians and a German general, passed through twenty-two Nazi controlled posts in his car and safely embarked on a vessel which carried them and their prisoner to Allied territory.

The act was dashing enough in itself. But the cream of the jest lay in the note which the invaders left behind, carefully explaining the state of the captive to the Nazi authorities who clearly are also addicted to exploits of this kind, against Nazi reprisals. There was a nice touch in the postscript which told of the raiders' regret over the necessity of leaving the general's car behind, and the appropriate note of menace in the final "See you soon."

Strictly as a deed of rare impudence and finesse, this raid on Crete ranks high. But the implications clustering about it are even more impressive. Evidently the Germans maintain a very slender garrison system, even if its efficiency is questionable. The twenty-two posts through which the car passed, in less than thirty miles, would indicate that. This, plus the state of mind which leads the occupying forces automatically to assume that a missing general had been made away with by the natives, supplies its own commentary on Nazi rule—if any more are required at this late date. And, finally, the intelligence work which permitted the careful planning and perfect execution of the coup should give hope and joy to all men in slavery, hundreds of thousands of them, from Crete to northernmost Norway —to stay.

Robber Birds

(Renfrew Mercury)

In the battle for the extermination of starlings in Ontario, Professor Buchanan, in charge of the campaign, is urging the organization of groups for the purpose of destroying the eggs of the pests marooned by the recommends traps rather than shooting in eradicating the pests. The professor evidently recognizes he has a big fight on his hands. Yet we have Renfrew folk encouraging these robber birds.

NEW DAY

New day, and songbirds singing,
But I to a dead past clinging!
These fresh delights disdaining,
Still fretful and complaining,
Whimpering at care and sighing,
While the bright hours are flying.

New day, and I begin it:
As if good can't be in it;
As if tomorrow may
Be richer than today;
As if all that is pleasant
Is future—not present.

New day, and I mistrust it
And into dullness thrust it.
Fooled by suspicions dreary,
Worn by the world and weary,
Past today's joy I wander,
Thinking more lies off yonder.

New day—and in its story
May run a thread of glory;
Now—for believer, scoffer,
Comes all one day can offer:
Friendship, achievement, laughter,
Beauty—nor more hereafter.

We'd Better Fatten Up The Workhorse Again

(The Northern Miner.)

The idea is that within the next fifteen years or more, has been to hold back from the good old faithful horse a little more each year, of the hay and oats he helps grow. The government has gone on the assumption that by the year 1960 the agricultural it is withdrawn in small if increasing amounts, and replaced by the well worked out and will provide his accustomed fuel to the national welfare. But yet by bit this useful work animal has in many places come to the point of starvation. He's been getting skinnier and skinnier. His old bones are beginning to show here and there. By making a warmore out of him and putting him on extra delivery jobs, we've pursued the process of wasting him to death, and on diminished rations.

Because he relies his drop-headed and frisky gambols among the drillings in the Irish golden fields of Quebec and Ontario is a sign that there's a spark of life in his old frame still. But it doesn't go that he can stand the long hard pull ahead unless he's permitted to feed regularly, and well.

Remembering that it was the hungry horse that pulled this country out of the depression, and that we shall need his full and faithful services in the years to come, we'd better fatten up. Otherwise time will have to be dragged along in this country, as elsewhere, by the weak and puny. Bodies have been passing resolutions requesting the Ottawa government to see to it. please, that the mining workhorse be handled more kindly. The requests follow the lines recommended by the Ontario Mining Commission. And now the Ontario government itself, we are happy to say, has made the same request to Ottawa. Besides being a compliment to the Commission—in this

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By A. L. G.

"Love-apples" was the romantic name given to the humble red tomato by our forefathers of the early 19th. century. And, stranger still, this fruit was not eaten, but merely admired as a decoration, until the century had reached the halfway mark! From all of this the famous C that went to waste when Mary Grieve first left dangling in the windows in strong sunlight! Prejudices against the tomato died hard. The "Dictionary of Useful Recipes and Every-Day Information" published towards the end of the 19th century remarks that "We many parents there is some thing unpleasant, not to say offensive, in the flavour of the acrid tomato fruit. . . When used as an article of diet, it is almost a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion".

Artistic souls who took "time off" from domestic duties to arrange "love-apples", garden blooms "and house plants to best effect, also devoted loving care to the preservation of the "pretty red fruit". It was fashionable to take impressions of leaves and petals on black oil cloth. What it was preparation, according to old directions: "Take a sheet of white paper, oil it well with sweet oil, brushing lightly over with a feather. Immerse or two to soak, then remove superfluous moisture with blotting paper, and hang up the paper in the air, but not in the sunshine, to dry. When it is tolerably dry, take a lighted candle and hold the paper in it horizontally, that the oil may flame till it is perfectly blackened; this prevents the paper from fear of burning. Lay leaves carefully on the oiled paper and cover with other paper. Rub this with finger for about 1-3 of a minute, remove the paper, leaves, etc. Place leaves very carefully with same side downwards on white paper on which impression is to be made and cover with other paper, over which press with finger well. On removing leaves and paper, a delicate impression of the leaves will be found.

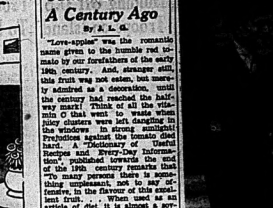
Life Depends on the Liver



The old expression, "Life depends on the liver" is now considered as a truthful saying, because the liver produces bile and because the gall bladder affects both our health and happiness. An adult liver should produce a pint of bile daily. The gall bladder that empties at a normal rate when food is entering the duodenum gives freedom from gas formation and distress in all forms, dizziness, nausea and lightness of spirit. When the liver does not function as it should and bile is slow in emptying, there is the abdominal distress, gas formation and depression of spirits.

For the average individual the proper working of the liver and gall bladder for many years has been a puzzle. An autopsy will show. They both act by causing a flushing action. The gall bladder although some research workers state that the cause of stimulation is not definite.

While the emptying of the gall bladder is due to a rather quick relief of symptoms, physicians are now concerned about keeping the liver become more active, so that the bile does not stay too long (which may not be very rich in bile salts) and become thicker, more sluggish, more rich bile. For this reason the giving of drugs to stimulate the liver is much use for biliousness, indigestion, and constipation. Also the drugs that call bladder bile that causes these symptoms.

Before the days of modern medicine, bile salt preparations available, manufactured by reliable drug firms, patients should first consult their physician as to the gall bladder test is not expensive and the need of bile salts and other medicines ordered are taken.

Sometimes what is needed is just a drug that will relax the gall bladder. At other times a preparation to cause the liver cells to pour out more bile. And finally there are cases where the liver needs a drug to supply the liver with materials from which it can make bile, and also make the liver manufacture bile more rapidly.

The War Today—

Allies Will Do Best to Shield Rome; World Waits to See What Nazis Do

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

With fortune fighting on unending only 15 miles from Rome—so close that at one point both Allied troops could see the dome of Old St. Peter's—it's small wonder that the world waits for the Italian capital's welfare should intensify.

The Allies have made it clear they will do their utmost to preserve the Eternal City. "What the Nazis may do is another matter.

When Pope Pius appealed to the United and German leaders March 12 to spare Rome from becoming a battleground, State Secretary Cordell Hull said the Allies hoped this could be done. He didn't add that the blame would be on the Germans if Rome did suffer. President Roosevelt a few days later, in a note to Premier De Valera of Eire, put substantially the same thing. The latest Allied statement was by Prime Minister Churchill last week when he declared:

Churchill's Forecast

"We have great hopes that the city of Rome will be preserved from the struggle of our armies."

Mr. Churchill didn't explain this strongly worded statement but we know the Allies will do their best to shield Rome but, as he remarked, it is impossible to forecast what the Germans will do on their retreat from Italy "in the way of destruction, to a people they hate and despise."

Whatever German field Marshal Kesselring may intend to do about holding Rome, he has no choice at present but to defend his approaches to the city until he has gained as many as he can of his manied forces which are retreating along bombed roads, all of which lead to Rome. The capital is the hub of Italy's highways and railways. A small clear bie army through there to reach new defenses to the north. If the Allies should occupy Rome now, great numbers of German troops would be cut off.

Hitler's propagandists are finding their public prepared for the word that the Nazis will withdraw to the north of Rome—that its occupation by the Allies doesn't matter. One reason why they are preparing minds for crashes in central Europe is that this might mean what it says. One good reason may lie in Berlin itself.

Berlin itself is predicting a possible Allied landing on the Italian coast north of Rome from the Island of Corsica. Such an invasion, if successful, would cut Kesselring off from the north and might lead to his being forced out of virtually his entire force. Hitler couldn't afford that.

MORE VICTORY GARDENS

Toronto, June 1 (CP)—There are about 15 per cent more victory gardens in Ontario this year than last, it was estimated today by Clarence Decatur, director of agriculture vegetable specialists. He said the increase was largely in addition to towns and cities with many city residents taking over plots of land outside city limits for gardening purposes.

JOHN DOE

A general legal warrant that does not contain the name of the person to be arrested, the place to be searched or the character of the goods to be seized is commonly called a John Doe warrant.

In old English common-law proceedings John Doe was the name given to a fictitious or unknown plaintiff, and Richard Roe was the name given to a fictitious or unknown defendant.

These names, which were common in the time of Lord Coke and which were probably adopted because they happened to be employed in some important cases, were originally used in the ancient law action of ejectment, the lessor setting forth a demise by ostensible lessee, John Doe and the lessee acting as defendant by being demised to Richard Roe.

In time the names came to be used generally as fictitious designations for any parties, real or imaginary, in any action or proceeding at law.

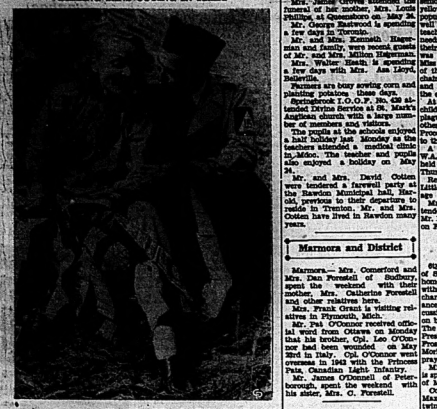
Lawyers, in place of the more impersonal A and B, employed John Doe and Richard Roe.

It was only another step to the application of the names to any imaginary person, a man of straw, the average citizen, or Tom, Dick and Harry.

The use of these sham or dummy names adopted as a rather clumsy device to preserve certain fictions of the common law, was abandoned in Britain in 1830, and they are now seldom heard of in that country, although John Doe survives in connection with warrants and blanket investigations by grand juries into public offices, especially graft cases, which are often referred to as John Doe proceedings.

At one time John-a-Stiles and John-a-Nokes were widely used in legal pleadings in the same sense as John Doe and Richard Roe.

About 1581 Sir Philip Sidney, in his "Apologia for Poetrie," wrote: "Poets give names to men they write of, which name is aocoction of any actual truth, and do not being true, bewray any falsehood. Who readeth an Amadis de Gaule, which name betokeneth one that wandereth like a knight, doth he not delight?"



THEN NEIGHBOR'S DOG BITES

Tulsa, Okla., June 1 (AP) — Mrs. Ruth Hall, stenographer in the city legal department, has been busy for two weeks nursing a neighbor's dog bit her.

Mrs. Roy Clarke, 94 Chatham Street, received a bouquet of roses on Wednesday from her two sons, Roy and Earl, who are with the armed forces in Italy.

Pte. William M. Gannon, 317 Coleman Street, Belleville, Ont., now serving with the Irish Regiment of Canada, in Italy, was recently promoted to the rank of lance-corporal. It is announced.

The last dates before No. 8 I.T.S. class in June was held on Wednesday night following the Field Meet at the school in the afternoon. Featured band of the evening was the Trenton Navy Band, who played delightful music for the dancers. Members of the dance and music boxes reported as in attendance. Mrs. J. Cornish, convener of the committee was Squadron Leader Perrone who presented prizes to the winners of the various field events. A basket of hot-dogs and punch was served during the dance in the canteen and lounge room.

A shower was held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Kellar, Bleecker Ave., on Friday night last in honor of their daughter, who was a recent bride of Strathbroy bloesome.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Kellar, Sr., Mrs. A. J. W. Myers and Mrs. Ernest Kellar.

The tea table was attractively arranged with a lace cloth and was centred with tall ivory tapers in crystal candlesticks and a crystal bowl of centred with pastels and snapdragons in all their colorful shades.

Pouring tea were Mrs. H. Mason, Mrs. R. Cross, Mrs. O. Mott and Mrs. R. Grandell.

Carrying out the theme Mrs. J. C. Wardner, and in charge of the Home Cooking booth was Mrs. Ernest Kellar.

Another delightful hour of the evening was contributed by Mrs. M. P. Duff at the piano playing several instrumental numbers. Mrs. Bradley rendered a vocal solo, and Mrs. Ernest Kellar, Sr., played with a duet. A "tit of glee" was also given by the daughters of the late tea cup reading of Mrs. Crawford.

Eighty gratifying proceeds were realized which are to be used to went supplies and packing for the mess boxes for the boys in the service.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Long-Distance Love-Making

There's something deeply flattering, I must admit, in a girl's having a boy friend in the air force. He's pretty dear, one light laughing talk about nothing in particular and about nothing I want to decide that I'm willing to spend the rest of his life with.

No wonder that "Daffodil", as she calls herself, is flattered by the unique experience that she considers a distinction. All letters from boys are that is anything but.

"Pity's sake," she writes, "why round the world, besides, "who spent a weekend with some family I never met before, or even heard of, and then, through his wet day, forgard it. I said I'm not ashamed to write him, and I admitted him very much. Later, I had a note from him, asking me to allow a friend of his, about to be transferred, to come to see me. I agreed.

"Since then, my interest has waned somewhat when, in order to explain all about this fellow-soldier, who proved to be a very decent chap, I've had to write a long letter, and every letter I've written to him has been answered by a crystal bowl of mixed pastels and snapdragons in all their colorful shades.

Pouring tea were Mrs. H. Mason, Mrs. R. Cross, Mrs. O. Mott and Mrs. R. Grandell.

GOOD MANNERS

On Answering a Telephone.

"Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it correct for an adult to answer the telephone by saying "Yes"? This is the practice here in Paris. To me it always sounds as if they mean "I hear you." For the business of tipping depends not on one's budget, and perhaps more on whether or not one is generous by nature. Also, special circumstances (for example, when it's unusually large), to show your gratitude to the one who has made your travelling way more comfortable.

3.—Yes, it would be proper to take the bridegroom both. And first with the recent bride, (if you mean with the bride) to congratulate and congratulations at a wedding reception. You would first shake hands with the groom, since you would come to him first in the receiving-to congratulate him, and then shake hands with the bride, saying "I wish you happiness." J.M.

Fellow The Regulations.

Dear Miss Beeckman,

I am a member of the graduating class leading to graduate in the near future. We will be wearing caps and gowns. Will you please tell me whether or not it is proper to wear a corsage or some kind of boutonniere on the gown?

Y.M.

Your school will have a regulation about this. . . and customarily the regulations is that flowers are not worn on this uniform-type of gown.

V.F.H.

1.—Yes, you are expected to tip the bridegroom whether or not you have luggage. For a short ride, ten cents is the customary fee. If your longer ride you may give ten per cent of the fare. Most and all the business of tipping depends not on one's budget, and perhaps more on whether or not one is generous by nature. Also, special circumstances (for example, when it's unusually large), to show your gratitude to the one who has made your travelling way more comfortable.

The Marry-Go-Round

Why Can't Women Be Frank About Her Age?

When Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, (who is not yet sixty) declared that she is "too old" for public office, her perfect frankness was acclaimed as "refreshing."

Until all women are just as frank and unashamed about their age, there will never be any real sex-equality. What is the one thing that women have that has jealously kept for MANKIND the right to be non-chalant. The right to be mature! And that is why a girl begins lying about her age — every day she is twenty or twenty-five?

WHY? Why can't a woman be frankly and honestly middle-aged? Why does she feel that she must struggle as though for dear life to hang onto her slipping youth? Why does she turn pea-green at the sight of the first grey hair or the first wrinkle?

A man has no such tragic sensation. When he first sees that cluster of snow above his ears it just the right touch and a dexterous twist of the wrist, it becomes a smart turban for poolside wear. Here it is shown at the Town House pool by Ruth Roman, screen starlet.

TAKE THAT TIRED LOOK OFF YOUR FACE!

Not Fitness—but Sex—May be what You Need To Put Pep in Your Step and Fresh Sparkle in Your Eyes.

If that sensation of tired feeling has you perhaps down in the mouth or in the dumps, don't blame it on the weather or the calendar. Perhaps you've been up at sunrise in the morning as if you had had no sleep, and you've been going to bed at night as if you were sleepy, and you've been eating your meals as if you were hungry, and you've been getting up in the morning as if you had been to a Turkish bath instead of a bed, and you've been feeling as if you were getting on years, but without exhilaration that comes with age, and you've been looking in the mirror and seeing a face that looks as if it needs a tonic, and you've been feeling as if you need a change of air, and you've been really sick. Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and see how fine you feel in four weeks from now. Then you will know more than in your wildest dreams

RAWDON

Honor Roll Unveiled At Bethel Church

Rawdon, June 1—On Sunday evening Bethel United Church was crowded with noted guests on the occasion of the unveiling of the Honor Roll of the boys who were in the service in the Maple Leaf Service.

A large number of members of the church, friends and relatives of the boys were in attendance to pay their tribute to the boys who were cheerfully giving so much in sacrifice of time and energy for the freedom of those at home.

Mrs. Harold Elliott, A.T.C.M., presided at the piano and led the choir rendered "Out of Our Darkness". Mrs. Walter Warren sang very acceptably "My Own Dear Land."

C. F. Walt, Stirling, a veteran of the 1914-1918 First World War, was the special speaker and he paid a splendid tribute. He referred to the experiences that both he and Pastor Rundle had gone through in the years gone by and said he was glad to be present to be associated with the boys as they carried on activities "over there".

Mr. Walt referred to the sacrifices made by these boys in giving up their life, their employment and their pleasures (and even giving their lives if need be) to serve their country and provide freedom for those at home.

His address will long be remembered by those who were priviledged to be present and all the boys who unveiled the Honor Roll.

Rev. F. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D., pastor of the church read the names on the roll of honor.

John Barrow, Earl Kirkey, Harry Preston, John Bateman, Harold Shannon, Ray Sine, Donald Brandworth, John Vilneff, Lorne Kirkey, Allan Sine, Stewart Kirkey, James Kirkey, Wilfrid Williams, Sherman Brady, Arthur Brandworth.

The fifteen names represent ten families.

The following week Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kirkey received word that their son Harold Kirkey was killed in action over Italy.

False Hair Revival Hits United States

New York, June 1 —(CP)— You can't tell by looking at it but it's real. That's what thousands of women are doing today in the biggest false hair revival in generations.

Possibly brought on by an unfavorable short hair trend—the style of industries' ban on long hair and fancy curls—added hair pieces are giving women the chance to blossom forth feminine and sweet for an evening date.

You can pin on a chignon, braid or bun into your own hair or use one matched perfectly to the color and texture of it.

Pate It—A bit of lemon smelling face powder mixed with an equal amount of cornstarch is fine for freshening. Just how should giving the skin new lease of power? Well, it's simple. Just a few minutes' facial treatment with a little lemon juice and water. Then any cream that shakes gently on your palm is good enough for your complexion operations.

Keep It Fresh

Just try replacing linens these days and you'll find you have to pay a good deal for the pre-war yet already have. Watch out for spots and stains.

Fresh ink stains: Get out as much as possible with cool clear water. Then use salts of lemon (crystals sold) according to directions. Furnside with a pinch of cream of tartar sometimes does the trick. Old ink stains are practically impossible to remove so don't be surprised if they become of spoil.

Light scorch marks: Rinse in cool clear water. The sun will help you out on this if given half a chance. Deep scorch marks are there for life.

Rust: Salts of lemon again.

Fruit stains: Rinse immediately in clear cool water, then soak in warm suds. If stains are stubborn use water, salts of lemon in stubborn cases.

Nail polish: Nail polish remover will remove the gumminess if the material is linen or cotton (nail polish removers are not for rayons). . . a bleach will remove the colour. And incidentally all the rules apply to linen and cotton fabrics only.

Several general rules are:

—Get after the stain immediately.

—Keep the water cool or tepid.

—Never use soap or hot water till all stain has gone.

—Rinse out chemicals, salts of lemon, peroxide, etc., very thoroughly if you don't want damaged fibres and a weak spot to appear later.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. in Britain, June 1 — Members of the Mess Committee in the Canadian fighter station pictured here assisted on operations was the service dinner.

The committee was timed to coincide with the debut of the Mosquito bombers on the British Isles, first unit of the group to go operational with a fleet of the plane aircraft made in Canada.

Airmen and ground crew alike sat down and ate 200 pounds of roast beef sent overseas by the Canadian Red Cross, formerly an army ration, also secured from his homeland with his wife and joined the R.C.A.F. in Canada. As a navigator he won the D.F.C. and two Czech decorations and when that tour was finished he went to Canada again for his pilot's training.

In the Canadian intruder squadron, they call him "Last Trip" Scherf. His pilot officer, Charles Scherf, D.F.C. and bar, of Glen Innis, Australia, who completed his operational tour about two months ago and went back to the squadron for a day's visit and won the D.F.C. with his "last trip" (Flight Lieutenant Arr.), of Toronto as his navigator.

"They definitely say 'last trip' about Scherf now," said Scherf, "because after destroying two enemy aircraft in the air he destroyed three burning on the ground.

But a month later Scherf and Scherf went back for another visit. His pet together with Sherry again and started destruction of the enemy aircraft in the air and nine burning on the ground with F/O. J. Caine of Edmonton and his navigator, F/O. Burl Rod of Regina.

Scherf is a pilot who appreciates his navigator. Of Sherry he says, "Any navigator can lose himself but it takes a real navigator to find him."

A tire blowout gave Flt. Lt. Jack Reimer of Tofield, Alta., a chance to find his Typhoon squadron—the "Wildcats"—to bomb a railway airfield near Le Havre. Just as the squadron was taking off a tire blew on the Typhoon being flown by the commanding officer, Sqdn. Ldr. Frank Grant (Bill) Barfair Ave.) Montreal and Belfast took over.

FRANKFORD

Alliance Marks 60th Birthday Of Edward Benes

Frankford.—The Czechoslovak National Alliance marked the 60th birthday of Dr. Edward Benes, president of the republic of Czechoslovakia with a concert of musical and literary numbers, held recently in the Recreation Hall at Batawa. Dr. Benes' birthday was May 28. President Alex Sopp Pomeroy, vice-president, Mrs. Mary Pomeroy, Trenton, and Dr. Whiter, Belleville, sections, were the guest artists of the evening. Miss Pomeroy played Mozart's Violin Concerto in D Major and Dr. Schmolka sang a number of Czech songs. Also on the number of Czech children from Batawa were present and sang a group of Czech national songs.

A recitation was given by Jr. Dennis.

An address on the life of the Czechoslovakian president was given first in English by Arthur Duncan and in Czech by J. Ustrnul. These addresses paid tribute to Dr. Benes' thirty-year political career which he had spent in working toward democracy. He is recognized as one of the four leaders of democracy today along with Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin. He represented his government as Secretary of Foreign Affairs at the Versailles Treaty directly after the last war, and was one of the chief sponsors and co-founders of the League of Nations. He predicted the present war at the time of the Ethiopian crisis. After Munich he predicted that Britain, France, the United States and their allies would win the war. He stood alone in the face of all compromise of world democracy opposing his adversary the David with a sling, filled with logic and reason.

Items of Interest From Red Cross 'News Bulletin'

Canadian Red Cross Society today is composed of a larger number of branches and many more members than ever before in its history. Ancient Roman Relics and Modern Architecural Gems Imperilled as the Flames of War Sweep Toward Rome

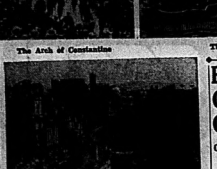
The Villa de Medici



The Arch of Constantine

The Pantheon

The Sistine Chapel

The Forum (Coliseum in background)

By WILL BARON
(Central Press Canadian)

This war has been no respector of historical and spiritual landmarks. Although the Allies have promised to do all in their power to preserve the ancient and significant buildings of their city and the Roman Catholic Church, these cities are now in peril as the British and American armies battle closer and closer to the Eternal City.

The peril, as the Allies have advised the Vatican, is contingent upon Nazi conduct in areas in which these buildings stand. Germans have held off the Allied drive into Cassino by converting the 14-century-old monastery into a brisling fortress. Allied planes had to bomb the ancient establishment into rubble to protect troops from the deadly machine-guns and artillery from within its walls.

Fate Hangs in Balance.

Such structures as the Vatican, St. Peter's, the Pantheon, the Coliseum, the Forum, the Arch of Constantine, the Capitol and other historic structures face imminent destruction. This destruction may be the wanton demolition of retreating Germans or it may take the form of military necessity on the part of the Allied forces.

The Vatican, seat of the world-wide Roman Catholic Church, is one of the greatest treasure houses of art in the world. In its galleries and museums are works of Michelangelo, Raphael, da Vinci and many other great painters and sculptors. Michelangelo's statuesque figures of the prophets in the Sistine chapel and his famous "Last Judgment" above the altar are irreplaceable works of religious art within the Vatican.

St. Peter's in Rome is the largest church in the Christian world. Its dome rises 435 feet over the square. It is also the final resting place of many popes.

The Pantheon, with its impressive columns, was built 27 years before the birth of Christ, rebuilt in the second century. It also houses the tomb of Victor Emmanuel II, first king of the modern Italian nation.

The vast Coliseum is a storied structure of the days when Rome was in her greatest glory. This is where was the scene of the combats of the gladiators and the grim battle-to-death between men and beasts.

Millions of visitors during the centuries before World War II walked through the famous Forum and climbed the celebrated Palatine Hill. Students of the arts and theology came to Rome to study and work.

The great Arch of Constantine is another magnet for visitors. The Spanish Steps rank among the foremost architecture of the world; so does the Castel Sant' Angelo and the Piazza Navona, all built centuries ago. The Arch of Constantine was built to celebrate that ruler's victory over Maxentius in the fourth century.

The Villa Medici, built in the 16th century, has housed the French Academy of Art in recent years. Winners of the Prix de Rome were sent to study within its walls.

The massive Capitol building was constructed in 1143 A.D., and has been the seat of the municipal government of Rome ever since its dedication.

The fate of Rome and these buildings and the Vatican itself rest with the Nazis, who now occupy the area. If the Germans evacuate this sector, the historic buildings and religious centres will be spared from reduction to rubble.

If, as in the case of the ancient monastery at Cassino, the Germans use the buildings as fortifications, their destruction is unavoidable. The military necessity of saving British, Canadian and American lives may result in their destruction if the Nazis refuse to evacuate when the Allied war machine rolls through the gates of the Eternal City.

Canadian Planes Return Safely

London, June 1 (CP Cable)—The Canadian heavy bomber group sent out were described as "good-sized forces" to two targets in France last night, to take part in the R.A.F. bomber command's widespread operations. All Canadian planes returned safely.

The two targets which Canadians hit were not named immediately, and only identified as "military objectives." The attacks were made by all-Canadian forces after R.A.F. Pathfinders marked the bombing point.

While the bomber force was out, other Canadian group planes laid mines in enemy waters.

Returning fliers said their greatest opposition came from heavy thunder and lightning storms and high winds, which "made it seem like being in a better church," as W/O. Andy Marion, Bison squadron bomb aimer of Hull, Que., put it.

The Canadian bombing squadrons included the Alouette, Bison, Goose, Moose, Lion, Stuffy Owl and Thunderbird.

Over the targets, there were breaks in the clouds and the bombing was concentrated, the crews said.

French targets hit by the R.A.F. last night included the rail centres of Trappes, Tergnier and Saumur, it was announced today.

British Empire Cheese Exhibition Cancelled for Year

Officials Unable to Secure Proper Storage Facilities for Cheese

HOLD CONVENTION

Inability of officials to secure proper storage facilities for cheese made early in the season has resulted in the cancellation of plans to hold the British Empire Cheese Exhibition in Belleville this autumn, it was announced this week by the show executive. Cheese for show purposes must be kept at a temperature of between 34 and 36 degrees until they are put on exhibition but due to need of space for storing essential commodities, proper facilities were not to be found available for cheese.

Inaugurated by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association the British Empire Cheese Show has been held in Belleville for the past seven years and, according to exhibition officials has been responsible for a marked improvement in the quality of cheese manufactured in the Bellevville district. There has also been an improvement in the average grade of cheese made and is thought to be a direct result of information gathered by makers at the cheese show.

Rated the greatest cheese show in the British Empire at the start of the war, cheese from almost every Canadian province, as well as from South Africa, and Australia and New Zealand, had been shown here.

Wartime transportation difficulties and other restrictions of manufacture, have resulted in the number of cheese being reduced.

"It is really too bad that it has been found necessary to cancel the show this year," stated an official, "but under the circumstances no other move was possible. Without a doubt the exhibition has proven to be of great value to cheesemakers in the Belleville district and it is hoped that another year suitable arrangements can be made."

Cancelling of the cheese show, it was thought, would have no effect on the annual cheesemakers' convention and it is understood that plans this will be held at the usual date around the first of December.

De Valera Wins Clearcut Victory

Dublin, June 1 —(CP)— Prime Minister Eamon De Valera won a clearcut victory in Eire's general election, Tuesday, with the incomplete count of returns today showing his Fianna Fail party with 68 seats in the 138-seat house short of an overall majority.

Returns from 17 districts still were outstanding. The Fine Gael, chief opposition party, won 31 seats, Labor 8, Clann na Talmhan nine, Independents eight, Labor seven and National Labor four.

All members of the cabinet had retained their seats in the Dail.

Mr. de Valera called the election last month after defeat of a government-sponsored land bill. The question of Eire's neutrality did not figure in the campaign.

Opposition Leader Richard Mulcahy won his seat in Tipperary.

Nine Days to Rescue Cats' Nine Lives From Tree

Albany, N.Y., June 1 (AP)—It took nine days to rescue a cat from a tree which it had climbed to escape a pursuing dog. The fire department said it was a job for the humane society. The latter found its ladders too short and notified the Bureau of Parks, which found an electric wire in the way. Yesterday, power company employees brought the cat down, slightly weak from hunger.

Crop Conditions Are Very Favorable

Toronto, June 1 (CP)—Crop conditions in Ontario were described today as "exceptionally favorable" by J. D. McLeod, director of the crops, seeds and weeds branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The weather has been good for growth and germination and all crops are far advanced over a year ago. He added that the quality of the hay seed this year was exceptionally good.

London, June 1 — (CP) — The British soldier-overseas will vote by proxy when the country goes to the polls again.

When Britain's next general election will be held probably depends on how long the European war lasts, but it may be a given in the official winds that the war office has begun distributing forms British servicemen must complete before they can vote.

There is a chance the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' conference will be followed by a meeting of dominion labor party leaders or their representatives. The British labor executive hopes to complete final arrangements for the conference shortly.

Though there is no labor party in Canada by that name, M. J. Coldwell, leader of the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation, will be invited to provide Canadian representation.

Six months to the day after receiving first reading, the historic education bill received final passage in the Commons from where it moves into discussion by the House of Lords. This last exceeded in long and the bill, revamping British entire system of education, probably will be law by July.

M. P.'s wondered at the worried, hasty consultation between Lord Portal, Minister of Works, and Prime Minister Churchill when Canada's Prime Minister Mackenzie King started his recent speech to Parliament. Lord Portal left the hall soon, returned and left again after five minutes further agitation.

Then the lights dimmed and Mr. King stood at the microphone with a single table lamp to light his notes. This was what Lord Portal wanted. As Minister of Works his department was in charge of the lighting and Lord Portal gave the matter no less than ministerial attention for this occasion.

Not Hungry Enough To Eat Horse Steak When It's Offered

By HAL BOYLE
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, (May, June 1—(AP)—I thought I was hungry enough to eat a horse, but I wasn't.

Thousands of poor people in London are eating horse steaks because they are unrationed and cost only 20 cents a pound—about half as much as beef—and at least three restaurants specialize in the equine delicacy.

I went to one in the Soho district with Don Whitehead of Kentucky (another Associated Press correspondent), who is something of a connoisseur of horseflesh on the hoof but without previous dealings with it on a platter.

Our guides were two Czech refugees, Anita Kabiesz, an ex-B. P. radio monitor, and her sister, Elisabeth, who says she prefers a gravy-covered slab of horse to pork.

The restaurant was small and its tablecloths far from snowwhite, but it was so crowded we had to wait several minutes before being seated.

The proprietor, Marius Catone, a stocky, white-haired Swiss, left no doubt of the situation. Behind the cash register a big card reads: "All steaks served in this establishment are horse meat."

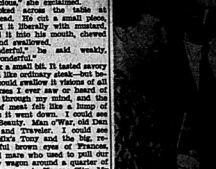
All of us ordered steaks except Anita, who decided she was too far to be a vegetarian—and took spaghetti.

When the waiter brought in three chunks of "platter on a platter," Elisabeth fell to with a will on her portion, rare and all but floating in juice.

"Delicious," she exclaimed.

I looked across the table at Whitehead. He cut a small piece, smeared it liberally with mustard, popped it into his mouth, chewed once and swallowed.

"Wonderful," he said weakly, "just wonderful."



I took a small bit. It tasted savory much like ordinary meat—best before I could swallow it visions of all the horses I ever saw or heard of passed through my mind, and the piece of meat felt like a lump of rock as it went down. I could see Black Beauty, Man o'War, old Dan Patch and Traveler. I could see Tom Mix's Tony and the big, reproachful, brown eyes of Trigger, the old mare who used to pull our grocery wagon around a quarter of a century ago in Kansas City. My ears rang with hoofbeats, and something inside me said nay.

That ended my bout with horse steak. I couldn't eat another bit if it would end the war. Elisabeth gaily polished off my piece and, surprisingly, so did Whitehead.

"You traitor to Kentucky," I accused.

"Listen, I used to lose quite a bit of money on horse nags at the Derby," Don said. "I'm just enjoying my revenge."

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Respecting further restrictions in the sale of Spirituous Liquors in the Province of Ontario

It has become necessary to reduce again the amount of spirits which can be purchased by individual permit holders in the Province of Ontario. This is something over which the Liquor Control Board of Ontario has no discretionary authority. Under P.C. 11374 the Dominion Government limited the amount of spirits which could be obtained for sale in the Province of Canada to 70 per cent of the amount obtained from November 1st, 1941, to October 31st, 1942. That means that by the order of the Dominion Government there became available in Ontario for annual sale 1,115,594 gallons of proof spirits.

It is a problem in simple arithmetic.

All that the Board can do is to adjust the quantity available to holders of permits so that the total amount procurable for sale under the Dominion Government Order P.C. 11374 can be distributed throughout the whole year. Due to the increase in the number of permits, and the extent to which the permit holders are purchasing spirits each month, it now becomes necessary to reduce the amount which can be purchased by individual permit holders if there will be any spirits available for sale during the closing months of the present year. The following table shows in simple form exactly what has been taking place:

	Number of Permits outstanding at month end	Monthly ration	Aggregate to fill monthly ration
January, 1943	155,295	160 oz.	108,702 proof gals.
January, 1944	1,227,459	26 oz.	139,623 proof gals.
March, 1944	1,282,938	26 oz.	145,934 proof gals.

A recent survey of the sales for the present year and the amount still available under the limits imposed by the Dominion Government make it necessary to limit purchases on the following basis as of the first of June.

FROM THE FIRST OF JUNE UNTIL THE END OF THE PRESENT OPERATING YEAR EACH PERMIT HOLDER WILL BE PERMITTED TO PURCHASE ONE BOTTLE (25 or 26 ounce) OF SPIRITS EVERY TWO MONTHS OR TWO HALF-BOTTLES, WHEN AVAILABLE.

Huge Crowd Attends Carnival Sponsored by W.A., Trenton RCAF

5,000 Persons Attend After-noon's Activities Held in Sports Hangar.

With brilliant May sunshine providing a perfect setting for the day, five thousand people who thoroughly enjoyed themselves in all the various phases, contributed upwards of $5,000 at the Grand Carnival held in the Sports Hangar at Trenton Air Station on Wednesday. The proceeds will assist materially in financing the furnishing of the new hospital wing of the station.

Sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary, Trenton R.C.A.F., the Carnival went through its various enjoyable phases to ultimate financial success. In this, small measure, to the generous assistance of station personnel, in providing tents, seats and the use of land, to the many firms and merchants of the town of Trenton who contributed wholeheartedly in the gifts of prizes and incidental expenses.

Deserving of great praise for her untiring efforts in making the carnival a success, is Mrs. Bell-Irving, wife of the commanding officer of the station. Mrs. Bell-Irving was convener and by her efforts instilled zeal and enthusiasm in her co-workers of the Auxiliary.

Fine Musical Program

The afternoon's activities were opened by a parade of the Air Cadets of the town of Trenton, beginning at two o'clock was a band concert by the R.C.A.F. Trenton Station Band under direction of Warrant Officer Hancock. The program, which they presented, was "spiced" with novel musical variety; ballads, marches, vocal numbers, trumpet solo, cornet solo, xylophone solo, saxophone solo and Hungarian dances.

All sorts of "games of chance" were most enthusiastically received by everyone, and always had a large interested crowd gathered around them. The larger number of these games were in charge of men hailing from the town of Trenton. And of course, the athletic could not be complete without the homecoming, sewing and flower booths convened by appointed members of the Women's Auxiliary. There were even girls mingling with the crowd endeavouring to sell them all a "pretty pony."

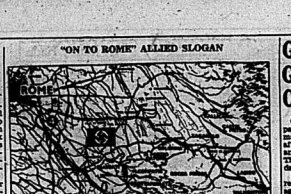
A feature of the carnival, especially from the kiddies point of view, were four ponies, loaned for the occasion, on which they were given free rides.

"Flicker," the four stalwart airmen the Blue steeds attracted a large number of children who all stood four deep patiently awaiting their turn for a ride. Up and down their own "runway" the ponies plodded, their childish riders creaking their own verbal appreciation of the thrill of the afternoon.

Many Fine Prizes

In the evening a dance was held in the Sports Hangar, which "topped off" a very entertaining day. And speaking of the large crowd that turned out in the afternoon for every penalty as unenthusiastic about the dance at night, Trenton Station "very over" orchestra played outside for the occasion. A number of prize dances were conducted by the master of ceremonies and two door prizes awarded by the Lucky Wrench. Eight prizes were raffled: a $100 war bond given the Officers' Mess; a $75 war bond from the Sergeants' Mess; a $50 war bond from the Airmen's Mess; a $10 one from Group Captain Bell-Irving; a gold wrist watch from the Station Central Fund; a casserole from Mrs. Bell-Irving. Further donations of prizes were also received from various personnel of the station and from merchants of Trenton. Mrs. Bell-Irving, Mr. H. Bamfield, Trenton, was the master of ceremonies, and during the intermissions of the dance conducted an auction sale of merchandise.

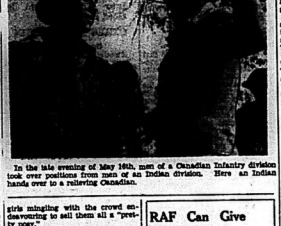
FIREMEN FOR INVASION



London (CP) — Home Secretary Herbert Morrison disclosed that select force of the National Fire Service will follow the invasion armies across the channel "to cope with attempts of the enemy to burn up our stores, equipment and accommodation on the other side."

May be in Succession Stage

Ottawa, June 1 —(CP)— Increases authorized under the anti-corset control order may be granted in successive stages rather than in one operation, National Revenue Department officials said today.



Frazer Elliott, deputy minister, said that while there was previously no control over the payment of the increase all at once there was a general belief among suppliers that only once an increase was authorized it should be paid in its entirety.

The order has been amended to clarify this point.

The fate of the Eternal City may be decided within a few days in the area shown in this detailed map of the vital battle area, not far from the capital of Christendom. Here, too, between Valmontone (1) on the Appian Way, and Velletri (3), on Highway 6, are being settled the fate of thousands of German troops. The zone around the Alban Hills (2) is a gigantic mine field. Intimate knowledge of this area has help many Germans to escape. Many experts are inclined to expect nothing more than delaying actions from the enemy until the Anglo-American drives converge (4) just outside Rome.

RAF Can Give Ideal Lead for World Air Force

London, June 1—(CP Cable)—The R. A. F. would be an ideal instrument for giving a lead in formation of an International Air Force which could provide the power behind a world controlling council, such as put forward last week by Prime Minister Churchill for preserving peace after the war, the Magazine Aeroplane said today.

Aeroplane, authoritative aviation publication, in fact termed the R. A. F. "an international Air Force already created."

In the last, the Magazine recalled, suggestions for providing an International Police Force to support the new air force, which met a number of objectives, among them the difficulties of language, command, supply and administration.

"The R. A. F. has overcome all such difficulties during this war," Aeroplane said, adding that the R. A. F. includes squadrons of Czechs, Poles, Dutch, Netherlanders and representatives of other Nations. Many of these nationals actually fly with R. A. F. crews."

Chinese Capture Kamliangkung N. of Burma Road

Chungking, June 1 (AP) — A Chinese communique announced today the capture of Kamliangkung, only eight airline miles from the important objective of Wanting, in the Mamien Pass sector in western Yunnan province north of the Burma Road.

Paving the way for major land sweeps now being developed by the Chinese armies, the 14th United States army air force heavily bombed and strafed the Japanese strongholds of Lungling, Shweshung, Mangshih, Pelchaikungtang and Chiangtao, the communique added.

Cottage Swept From Foundation

Smiths Falls, Ont., June 1 (CP)— A cottage was swept from its foundation, hurled into the air and smashed to matchwood as heavy storms lashed this Ottawa Valley District late yesterday and again last night.

Heavy winds also knocked another cottage from its foundation, sliding it about 20 feet but with only minor damage. A number of boats were splintered, and trees were felled in the lake district.

Greek Patriots Get Sweet Revenge On 250 Germans

Cairo, June 1 —(AP)— Greek patriots wiped out some 250 German invaders in the Lamia area after surprising them swimming and sunbathing at a stream in Thessaly, an official report said today.

Officials said the Germans were resting May 10 after a drive against villages in the Kaseidhiena Olympus area in which a number of defenseless villagers were shot and "other atrocities were committed," seven Greek patriots were killed and eight wounded in the revenge attack.

Rainstorms Slow Down Bush Fires

Toronto, June 1. (CP)—Scattered rainstorms last night in Northern Ontario helped slow down bush fires which are "well in check", Frank A. McDougall, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests for Ontario, said today.

"Generally the rain as "spotty". Mr. McDougall said some rain fell at three fires now burning out of control, one in the Gowganda-Elk lake district, another in Beryl township, Algonquin Park, and a third in the Timmins area.

"Three of the new fire lines established on all of the fires", he said, "This is the first break in the weather. Now that it's changed from the dry and hot variety the hazard in the bush is lessened greatly."

He emphasized that firefighters are continuing their work and slowly but surely are knocked they are not yet officially regarded as "under control."

Mr. McDougall, who left later this morning with Lands Minister Thompson of Ontario for an aerial survey of the fire areas, spoke of the co-operation of the R.C.A.F. and the army.

"When air force gave us two planes and would have given us two more if the fire continued", he said. "They did a great job yesterday when one plane transported sixty men to the Boyd Township fire. Their help has been marvelous. The army has been most co-operative. They supplied about 600 men to fight the fires in Boyd and at Gowganda. That was all we could use efficiently".

Enemy Opposition On Biak Collapses

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 1 (AP)—Deprived by bad weather of vital air support, Allied invasion of Biak broke off momentarily their violent bid for an airfield today but headquarters disclosed today they already control the eastern part of Biak Schouten Island.

Invasion of Biak, in north Netherlands New Guinea's Geelvink Bay opened Saturday at Bosnek near the island's southeastern tip and headquarters said today all enemy opposition there has collapsed.

Only a hundred miles down the New Guinea coast at Maffin Bay, Japanese were reported to be making an attempt to cut communication lines of another invasion force.

Today's communique list of targets included 24-hour-a-day bombings of Wewak, Hirnam New Guinea, and Kendari, Celebes, in long range attack by admiralty-based bombers on Balawan, Tarakan, Borneo, and the Dutch petrol stals at Truk and Woleai, all in the Carolines.

Nomination Day In Saskatchewan

Regina, June 1 (CP)—Today is nomination day for the June 15 Saskatchewan provincial election.

A survey by The Canadian Press showed 184 candidates already nominated and it was expected the final total would be about 200. Nominations close today at 2 p.m. C.S.T. (4 p.m. E.T.).

At regional nomination meetings 83 C.C.F. candidates were named in 52 constituencies including two in each of the two-seat ridings of Regina, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw. The Liberals have 50 candidates, contesting every riding except Wadena and Athabasca. There are 38 Progressive Conservatives, 10 Labor-Progressives and one Social Credit.

The election in Cumberland constituency has been deferred until June 19 with nomination day June 10.

Premier Patrick pre-election oratory was scheduled to reach new heights as non-resident campaign speakers also prepared to address an estimated 1,500 meetings before June 15. The C.C.F. alone has arranged an average of more than 10 meetings daily.

Partisans Told To Strike At Once By Marshal Tito

London, June 1 — (CP) — Marshal Tito in a special order of the day broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, said his troops today to strike immediately against German objectives in his country because "the last blow of the Red Army and the Anglo-American Allied troops is approaching."

A Tito communique told of fresh blows against the Germans, including the capture of the enemy base of Arzano in Dalmatia.

Partisan units are advancing in the direction of Sisak, 17 miles northeast of Split, leading report in Dalmatia, the communique added.

In another action in Slovenia, Partisan forces penetrated into Postaind, near the Austrian frontier; and blockaded a German garrison of 800 officers and men, the communique said.

Referee Maxwell Decides Sexton Winner on Points And Awards Bout Although Both Wrestlers Had Fall

Ohio Powerhouse Gives Katan Real Battle for an Hour

DUNLOP DEFEATED

For the first time in Belleville's 13 years of professional history a referee's decision decided a bout at the Rums Arena when Referee Newt Maxwell awarded Wednesday night's hour-limit bout to Frank Sexton, the Ohio Powerhouse, on points.

Under an old Ontario Athletic Commission regulation, a referee can award a main bout decision on points and Maxwell announced he was thoroughly convinced, that Sexton's significant wrestling advantage over Katan despite the fact that the principals of the night gained one fall each and were practically on their feet at the 60-minute mark, dictating . . . "naughty, naughty", with his forearm on the throat. The first fall was won by the Ohio Powerhouse, after a reverse top and a body slam, with a reverse top spread that did in Pat Dunlop, Canada's middleweight champion.

Warned Against Closed Fist

For the first time Maxwell took up most of his time warning Sexton against the use of the closed fist against his opponent's abdomen, while Katan took the only opportunity he had to slip in the odd hidden punch that was done when tried a visible one and then tried a few tricks of his own and got nearly away with them. Sexton could not be said to have won the bout on a scientific basis, however, John didn't lose any of his spirited efforts to wring Sexton between the hemp. Maxwell released the popular Ohio boy after promptly demonstrating how the hold made famous by Howard Cox "Sweetie Pie" could be applied as he trunsed Katan up and then applied sufficient pressure to keep him hanging until the 60-minute bell ended the activities. Then Referee Maxwell made his decision and in favour of Sexton. (Applause.)

Much Preamble

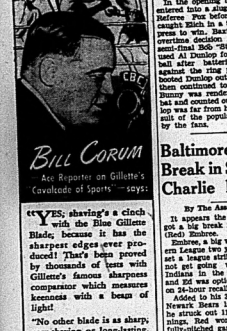
In the opening bout Nick Elich entered into a slugging match with Referee Pax before Vern Hazlett caught Elich in a body scissors and pressed to win. Hazlett also won the second fall. In the semi-final BoB "Strangler" Wagner used all after battering his opponent against the ring post. Wagner then pushed Elich outside the ring and then continued to ride him until Jimmy was rendered here-de-combat and counted out. Maybe Dunlop was fed up with Maxwell as the result of the popularity shown him by the fans.

Baltimore Gets Break in Securing Charlie Embree

By The Associated Press

It appears the Baltimore Orioles got a big break in landing Charlie Embree, a big winner in the Eastern League two years ago, when he set a league strikeout record, could not get going with the Cleveland Indians in the American League, and Ed was optioned to the Orioles on 26 October recall.

Added to his 3-1 victory over the Newark Bears last Sunday, when he struck out 11 men in seven innings, he had won another masterfully-pitched game last night, defeating the Syracuse Chiefs, 2-1. His nine strikeouts give him a total of 30 in 16 innings. As in his past game, he allowed only six hits.



For the Chiefs, it was their eighth loss in succession and dot them deeper in seventh place in the standings.

In the only other game, the last-place Newark Bears snapped Jersey City's winning streak at six straight by defeating the Jaycees, 10-4. The defeat dropped the Junior Giants into a tie with the idle Buffalo Bisons for first place.

SWACO LASSIES SCORE 12-11 WIN OVER AIR GIRLS

Winners Come From Behind on Three Occasions to Win Contest

GOOD SUPPORT

Coming from behind on three different occasions the SWACO girls defeated out a 12 to 11 win over the Mountain View "Bombereties" in the thrilling and closely contested City Ladies Softball League game at the Armouries last evening.

It was purely a battle of base hits, Belleville's two pitchers, Kay Coleen's swalmmlite rallied strong-ly to keep a brace with only one hand down, as Ronsky, Levere, Hastip and Allin all coming through timely hits to chalk up their first win and share the league leadership with Belleville's two, each.

Lois Calcutt, on the hilltop for SWACO, was somewhat better support afield than was Vickie Hillier, the Bombereties' hurler, while Keilleher in right rifid for the winners, made several sensational catches on second to double Rowtobham and Allin all coming through safely. Ronsky also batted a two-base smash. Vickie Hillier struck out 10 batters, walked two and the only base on balls was issued by the winning hurler.

Bombereties' third baseman, led the losers on the attack with three hits, one and a double, while Dot Rowtobham, SWACO first baseman, made a home run and two doubles, Peg Ronsky also got in three of two safe clouts that helped the winners' cause. Vickie Hillier and catcher Kay Allin were only triple, being called out at the plate on a beautiful play after passing a preceding base runner. Jackson, Levere and Keilleher hit doubles for SWACO. Besides her two circuit blows AW, Webster had a double and single to lead the batters of the night.

The line score:

Bombereties	0	1	2
SWACO	0	0	4

Batteries — Bombereties: Hillier and Rogers; SWACO — Calcutt and Jackson.

Bing Crosby's Track At Del Mar Receives Permit To Hold Meeting

(By The Canadian Press.)

One of the real pioneers of baseball, John W. McKelvey, 86, died at Rochester, N.Y., yesterday. He was credited with being one of the first to solve the trick of pitching a curve ball later became an infielder, playing his last regular season with the New Haven, Conn., team in 1875.

Bing Crosby's track at Del Mar, famous film actor, golf, yesterday received a permit from the California Racing Board to conduct a 36-day meeting from July 1 to Aug. 19, subject to the approval of U.S. authorities. Crosby had been refused a licence because of the war-time transportation problem.

In a servicewomen's track meet at Montreal last night, Cpl. Thelma Greenleaf of Regina, Saskatchewan, won in a third base with two home runs and a single that drove in three runners.

Max Lanier's six-game winning streak went by the boards as Boston pounded out a 5-1 edge behind Red Barrett.

Curt Northey emerged from a hitting slump to single home Jimmy Wasdell with the winning run as Cleveland defeated Philadelphia 7-4.

The Philadelphia-Chicago game in Philadelphia was postponed after three innings with the A's leading 2-0.

St. Louis Browns In First Place Tie With Yankees

Al Hollingsworth Graduated by Into Win Column by Good Relief Job

OTHER ROOKIES WIN

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Four rookie pitchers celebrated their first big league victories today as the Washington Senators lost to Al Hollingsworth, 34-year-old veteran of 17 baseball campaigns, two of them with the Yankees, with his win by boosting the St. Louis Browns into first place with the New York Yankees.

Hollingsworth's relief chore went on the right side of the ledger when the Brownies scored two runs in the ninth to tie Washington and went on to a 4-3 verdict in 11 night innings.

Forrest Orrell engineered Detroit's third straight over New York, 6-2, in a relief role as pinch-hitter Al Unser batted Walt Dubiel for a two-base-loaded home run with two out in the last of the ninth. Orrell, brought from Buffalo for the year, is credited with his first win in the big show.

Specs Klieman of the Cleveland Indians also gained credit in his debut as a fireman, getting his first major league triumph after relieving Vern Kennedy in Cleveland's 7-4 edge over Boston.

Carlos Coolidge McLish, 18-year-old rookie made the grade for Brooklyn after two losing efforts by turning back Pittsburgh with five hits for an 8-4 win. Chesley Walker batted in a third base with two runs to account for the Dodgers' margin.

Max Lanier's six-game winning streak went by the boards as Boston pounded out a 5-1 edge behind Red Barrett.

Curt Northey emerged from a hitting slump to single home Jimmy Wasdell with the winning run as Cleveland defeated Philadelphia 7-4.

The Philadelphia-Chicago game in Philadelphia was postponed after three innings with the A's leading 2-0.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New Haven, Conn., June 1 (AP)—Organized baseball might do worse than take a look at football's book and establish a "draft" of college players, in the opinion of Ted Rolfe, whose main interest now is college football, particularly his Yale team), though he's somewhat better known as the coach of baseball champs the Yankees . . . Red recently suggested a national championship tournament as a post-war shot-in-the-arm for college baseball in the United States and he's also interested in forming an association to help coache the betterment of the game . . . To round out his ides, he proposed that pro baseball should let the athletics alone until they finish college and then the clubs could select the ones they wanted by some orderly process.

Personal Example.

"Take my own case," said Red. "I was approached by a major league club while my sophomore year. But I preferred to finish my education and it certainly didn't hurt me any. When I graduated six clubs made me offers and I got a bonus for signing. I would have if I'd let bonus baseball. I would have had signed with the first club that heard of me . . . including, that first bidder was the Yankees.

Rolfe visions the time when colleges, playing an improved brand of baseball, will be the feeders to the big leagues.

RETURN MINES TO OWNERS

Washington, June 1—(AP)— Interior Secretary Harold Ickes yesterday returned to private ownership coal mines operating 61 per cent of the United States' bituminous coal.

As a farmer was passing the State Mental Institution, one of the patients poked his head over the fence and called out;

Lunatic—Whatcha got, in the wagon, mister?

Farmer—Fertilizer.

Lunatic—Whatcha going to do with it?

Farmer—Put it on my rhubarb.

Lunatic—Migosh! I got sugar on mine, and they call me crazy.

(Longest losing streak.)

When the Chicago Cubs defeated the Philadelphia Blue Jays on their home lot early in May it checked the longest losing streak in the 68-year history of the Chicago National League club. The club started on the second day of the season, April 19, and lasted one day over two weeks. Three managers were in charge during the streak. The first nine were under the direction of Jimmie Wilson, and when he left the team was under the command of Roy Johnson as acting manager, and the last three under Charlie Grimm.

It was in the first April and early May losing streak in the majors that Cincinnati won 17 straight in 34 years, or since the 1916 Reds started a 19-game string of reverses in April. However, the Cubs did not come near the modern National League mark for consecutive losses in a year, the 1904 Americans and 'clubs. The modern National League record is 19, by the 1920 Phillies, while three clubs are tied for the American League and 20th century mark, the 1904 Browns, 1916 Athletics and 1943 Athletics. The all-time big league record is 26 straight, by the 1899 Louisville club of the National League, which then a rival major of the National League.

(Remember when.)

Henri Cochet won the French championship at the age of 19 years today at Auteuil, France, by smashing through the fourth set to defeat Jacques Brugnon 6-4, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1 in a stirring five-set match. It was Cochet's victory, Cochet displayed a repertoire of strokes he couldn't be equalled by Big Bill.

(Tigers never last.)

When the Detroit Tigers dropped briefly into the American League cellar late in a day last month, Steve O'Neill cited precedent to back his prediction that the Tigers would not finish in that position.

In 43 years as an American League entry, Detroit has never closed a season in last place. They have been seventh five times, but never eighth.

None of the seven other clubs can boast of that distinction.

(Around the town.)

Pauline "Pee Wee" Golden refused to accept an offer to go to Montreal and play girls' softball with the Ladies' Baseball Club in the Provincial Senior League. . . . "I'm a little too young to move away," the big city pretty said, "next year will do. I promised Pauline as she left for Montreal yesterday. . . . In the meantime Tommy Golden lost a baseball game to Ken Nelson accepted an offer to play with the Montreal Royals . . . Ken left for the east this week. That was a real free-hitting little battle between Pauline, Vice "Bombereties" and SWACO'S last night when the girls' softball team saw one or the other of the teams forge ahead on less than six occasions. That's the type of girls' softball that will pay dividends. . . . When Made Kelleher climbed up on the armoured fence he had down and was about to be a sure two base blow she demonstrated what an Ontario girl can accomplish if only a little effort is put into the game. . . . Pass around the plumber bouquets for Hillier, strong Bombereite hurler, but Vickie wasn't given the total support needed to win over the strong SWACO. . . . Kate Calcutt hurled streaky, but her team mates gave her fine support. . . . AW Webster, Bombereite third catcher, contributed much to her team's cause namely, two home runs, a double and a single. . . . Pretty near enough, what? . . . Tonight it's Tweed versus Alemite in the men's league at the Fair Grounds . . . Manager Frank Prentice and his pachyderm clouts wants to satisfy local wrestling fans about all he has to do is re-match Frank Sexton and John Katan . . . Katan finished beaten this limit and paramountly a new referee will be in charge. Here's hoping he is Belleville's before. . . . What is the fans' wonderful idea to have the ring mat-ted? Katan's villainous attacks would out-last Sexton's science and ring ability because the Ohio Powerhouse is just about as smart a grappler as they come and to watch in the ring. . . . Actually last night's exhibition show was free for the match, that is from the preliminary right through to the main event. . . . Katan and Referee Maxwell gave to Sexton on points.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 293

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Alcohol Cuthead has a one-track bridge mind. When you ask him what shape convention is in he says: "Put like that I'll bet what I like." The best slam conventions are Culbertson, Blackwood, and "No Kibitzer." All three of these have at least three things in common.

The trump suit and slam chances must first be seen. Then, a bid of four no-trump asking about aces and kings. The responder answers with signals that show aces and kings in quantity.

In Culbertson, four no-trump may be bid with two aces and a king of a bid suit; or with three aces. Not with only two aces and any king.

In Blackwood, four no-trump may be bid without any aces or kings. In other words the player who bids four no-trump does not guarantee any aces in his own hand.

In the Kibitzer's, four no-trump may be bid with two aces and any king, or better. Or better means a third ace instead of a king.

Three whereas all three of these four no-trump bids have similar aims, they differ in what they show. Enough experience with all three will influence you to prefer The Kibitzer's.

Blackwood's may be too reckless, guaranteeing no minimum of aces. Culbertson's may be too rigid, waiting for a king of a previously bid suit. The Kibitzer's fits in the middle.

Make the two have this hand:

♠Q 9 8 7
♥A Q J 8
♦A 7
♣K J 6

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. Suppose your partner responds at once with a one-jump takeout to two spades. He shows six tricks, two sure tricks, and a biddable spade suit.

With six tricks in your own hand, you see 12 tricks in your pair. With adequate support for partner's spade suit, you now know what will be trumps.

Now comes what it takes to bid four no-trump, asking partner how many aces and kings he has. Would you refuse to bid four no-trump merely because your king is not in spades or hearts?

What are you waiting for, Christmas?

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Cowboy and the Senorita" (Republic)

Generally rather quiet, when that King of the Cowboys, Roy Rogers, gets to talking about his horse Trigger, he really knows what he's talking about. Trigger appears with Rogers in his latest musical western, "Cowboy and the Senorita", which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, for a limited engagement.

Trigger is one of the few stallions, Rogers will proudly point out, ever used by a star in western pictures. Usually they are too fractious. But Trigger's response to Roy Rogers is something that has to be seen to be believed. Almost a chase in which he has stretched his beautiful body and legs to cover as much as forty-five miles per hour, Trigger will stop dead to stand easily for close-up shots. Intelligence seems to have innumerable tricks, can add, subtract and multiply. But the city of the week, give his age, and answer many questions.

Rogers has as his leading lady in "Cowboy and the Senorita", pretty Dale Evans, with Republic's singing star, Mary Lee.

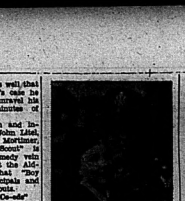
"The Mystery of the 13th Guest" Hailed unanimously by previews critics as one of the most swiftly-paced mystery thrillers of the current season, Monogram's "Mystery of the Thirteenth Guest", featuring Dick Purcell and Helen Parrish with Tim Ryan, Frank Fayten and John Duncan, is now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

Based on a novel plot, the story is motivated by the will of an eccentric old man, bequeathing his grandaughter to open the document in an old, long deserted house thirteen years after his death.

Thirteen guests gather there with Connie Ryan on base in first attempt to solve the mystery of the letter's string at six, 8-1.

Cubs' Hughes Duncan scored his first major league game by limiting Pittsburgh to five hits in 8-4 spree.

PREPARED TO NAME TITO



London, June 1 (CP)—King Peter II is prepared to name Marshal Tito Commander-in-Chief of Yugoslav forces, it was learned today. Madame Litvinoff and has invited Dr. Ivan Subasitch, former premier and minister, to form a new government and establish headquarters in Cairo, Egypt, it was learned last night. It is understood the King is awaiting the Marshal's pledge that he will not attempt to return to Yugoslavia pending an election on the post-war government.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Toronto, June 1 —(CP)— John Bergen, 45, farmer of Caledon Township, 7 at nearby Malton, instantly killed last night when struck by lightning as he was sheltering his cows home from pasture. His body was found by Otto Kuhn, while searching a search.

PLAGIARISM EXECUTED

London, June 1—(CP-Reuters)—Twenty Belgians have been executed on the German charge that they took the lives of two zeists (Walloon Fascists) in the Walloon assembling brigade which is incorporated in the German army.

AT THE BELLE — Irene Dunne and Spencer Tracy, starred in M.G.M.'s refined tale of the Untold Nations great air force "A Guy Named Joe," takes time out for catch up with their love-making. Both show their mettle in this story due this weekend.

Best-Fielding Shortstop Is Eddie Miller

New York, June 1—(AP)—Eddie Miller of the Cincinnati Reds, baseball's best-fielding shortstop last year, appears on his way to become the best-fielding shortstop of all time.

The 27-year-old native of Pittsburgh seems destined to better his own fielding record of .983, established in the 1942 with ten errors while tackling 748 chances in 152 games.

Including the game played May 31, Miller has accepted 293 chances and has been handled in only seven for a phenomenal fielding mark of .976.

If Miller continues to pace the short-stopping field, he will be the Joe Tinker in leading the National League shortstops for five years. Tinker accomplished the feat in successive, whereas the best Tinker could do was two straight years.

Florida Enjoys $100,000,000 Racing Season

Miami, Fla., June 1 —(AP)— A record-breaker from the start, Florida's first $100,000,000 racing season has ended with the state treasury $6,624,285 richer.

In 64½ months, bettors poured $100,561,969 into the pari-mutuel machines at horse and dog tracks and the jai alai front.

The total topped by far the previous record betting of $68,280,303 in the 1940-41 season. It represented a striking comeback from the low of $36,658,646 last year when the pleasure-driving ban caused a suspension of horse racing after only 18 days.

Attendance was off from the high of 2,898,464 in 1940-41 to 2,458,251.

In 100 days of horse racing at Hialeah and Tropical park, the betting aggregated $56,645,003. There were 792 dog racing programs, during which 1,339,251 racegoers bet $50,614,162.

Ninety-eight jai alai brought out an attendance of 190,583 and betting of $3,613,764.

Say Hungarians Are Torn Between Terror, Despair

By WADE WERNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lisbon, Portugal, June 1—(AP)—News trickling through from inside Hungary these days suggests a majority of the population is torn between terror and despair as Premier Doeme Sztojay's puppet regime tries to rush through a "new revolution," repair the damage of Allied bombings and mobilize more men for Axis defence of the Carpathians.

Today is the deadline for removal of all Jews from the Budapest area into designated ghettos. What personal effects any of them may still possess in the new locations is problematical. Recent weeks have been filled with accounts of systematic raids on Jewish homes with the avowed purpose of seizing hidden valuables.

The ruthlessness of this confiscation was indicated recently by Minister of Interior Andor Jaross when he said:-

"I emphasize that everything which Jewish greed managed to pile up during the era of liberalism in the shape of properties, treasures and other valuables has ceased to be Jewish property. It is henceforth the property of the Hungarian nation."

The confusion and terror accompanying this looting is disclosed in another type of news item which also is strikingly widespread. These stories report hundreds of young Jews have been severed for "impersonating detectives," threatening to arrest Jews for hiding wealth and either seizing what they can find or taking large bribes.

218,300 Tons Bombs Dropped by More Than 160,900 Allied Planes

By the Canadian Press

The Allied pre-invasion offensive (figures approximate):-

Dropped more than 218,300 tons of bombs

More than 160,900 planes

Destroying at least 2,194 enemy planes

Losing 1,700 of their own.

Since Wednesday night, Allied planes have attacked the French rail centres of Trappes, Tergnier and Saumur.

Bulgarian Leaders Seen Resolved To Follow Hitler

By WADE WERNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 1 (AP)—The Moscow radio said today it was becoming "obvious that Bulgarian rulers have resolved to throw caution to the winds and plunge neck and crop into ventures dictated by Hitler."

"It remains to be seen whether the Bulgarian people will find the strength to halt their treacherous venture. One thing though is clear, and that is that the Bulgarian rulers are playing with fire. Well, he who sows the wind reaps the whirlwind."

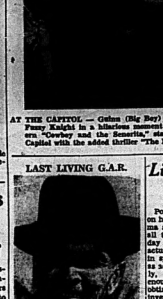
Bulgaria is at war with the United States and Britain, but not with Russia. There have been repeated indications in the last few days that Bulgaria is trying to get with the choice of stopping aid to Hitler and reestablishing some long-strained friendship with Russia.

Antique Room In Fly Theme

New Orleans, June 1 —(CP)— Don't mention anything that weighs more than three pounds to an antique dealer. Not if you value his friendship. But if you'd like to see a bright smile blossom on his face and his eyes sparkle, steer the conversation to knick-knacks. For the smaller articles, according to dealers in New Orleans where the tradition of collecting heirlooms has flourished since the last Spanish flag over the city was hauled down, are selling as they never sold before.

Remembering the days when a Chippendale chair and a Louis XIV secretary were a fast starting line, goods, the retailers mean that many people have homes any longer and daughters are in military service. And parents are finding crowded rooms a bother with such details as furnishing a home.

But the buyers say that the same parents desire articles for gifts. The offspring feel likewise. Defence workers want something easily movable, should their jobs send them to another place.



And there are the tourists. Despite transportation problems none of the dealers find any dent being made in the tourist traffic. As the manager of one said, "The tourist is a sucker for anything old that he can carry out of the store. It's old enough and portable enough, he figures he has a bargain.

LAST LIVING G.A.R.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the headlines on his way to the sporting page, and ma said, oh dear, when I think of all the things I wanted to do today and how few of them are in the least important, I get discouraged, in spite of the fact that I've been so active as the proverbial bee, yes, by William, I mean really, it's discouraging how the world obstinet. If somebody would only invent a 48 hour day, it would be the biggest godsend since the whole stride of progress, she said.

The day is much longer than you think, my dear, pop said. Do you realize how much time people spend asleep in bed, or even awake in bed? A third of their lives at least, he said, and ma said, But how can it be avoided for land sakes?

By long and constant use of sleeping 8 to 8 hours instead of 8 or nine, pop said. All the great inventors, whether they were writers or fighters or inventors, have had enormous amount of wink done because they took time to sleep. Napoleon learned the knack of dropping off for a 20 minute snooze on horseback bouncing up with his body full of new vitality and his head full of new devirires. Edison only slept 4 hours of the 24 and now the rest of us have the electric light to forget to turn off when we're ready for 10 straight hours of sleep, Balzac worked for 18 hour stretches merely by managing that he never fell asleep and outside with black coffee. All we need is an alarm clock, said the only reason I dont set quite the o'clock every morning is because I dont like to disturb you, my dear, he said.

They banish your fears and go ahead and set your alarm, ma said. I assure you I'd sleep peacefully right through it, she said, and pop said, And pop said, I'm sure you do. Sleep may not be as powerful a force as ambition, but fortunately for the general peace of mankind, it's a lot, sweater, by far.

And he slid in back of the sporting page and ma started to do the bridge problem.

HEPBURN ENDORSES DEMAND

Strathroy, Ont., June 1 —(CP)— Premier Hepburn, former Conservative Premier and now Independent Liberal member of the Provincial Legislature, has publicly endorsed the demand of Agriculture Minister Gardiner for increased beef production in Canada. Mr. Hepburn, who has usually extinguished red horse breeders and farmers at the opening of the ninth annual fall fair, praised the beef and commercial swine show here.

FICTON BUYER PAYS $3,000

Brandon, Man., June 1 (CP)—A total of $39,270 was realised for a herd of cattle at the annual National Holstein sale here yesterday, with a top price of $3,900 paid by H. J. McFarland of Ficton, Ont., for Hays Wonderful Lady, 11-months-old heifer calf consigned by Hays and Co. Ltd., Calgary.

Bird Lines Nest With Lighted Butt

Toronto, June 1 — (CP) — When a bird with lead butt built its nest in the eavestrough of an East York residence tried to line it with a lighted cigarette butt, fire reels had to be summoned. The blaze which resulted was easily extinguished with a little sand.

Nazi Communique is Wholly Unconfirmed

London, June 1 — (CP) — The German communique claimed today that Nazi naval and air forces units in May destroyed 3½ million and a half gross tonnage, totalling 131,700 tons and 23 supply ships of 189,000 tons. The wholly unconfirmed broadcast claimed 17 destroyers and escort vessels, two submarines and eight speedboats were damaged.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 5

It was a regular obstacle race. First I bumped into my vacuous dinner partner, who was following the learned discourse in goggle-eyed awe, patently overcome by so much science. Then I stepped on the pop corn of the avidly listening Professor Stoddard, who reacted with a loud "Ouch" and when at last I had won through the human wall and was looking about for Allan, Nemesis caught up with me in the person of Stella Avery.

Imitating her aunt's imperiousness she grabbed my arm, from the back and steered me toward a door, telling me briefly: "I must speak with you, Miss Wentworth. In here, please."

"In here" was a small reception room and once we had reached its sanctuary, Stella Avery lost no time.

"It's about that awful Burton woman in your house. I want to warn you. Don't let her get her claws into your men. Your father, or that Mr. Reid, who's always around you."

I was so taken back, I could only stare at her mutely.

"You needn't look at me that way. I know what I'm saying from bitter experience. She tried to ruin my life." The woman stepped close and hissed into my face: "Five years ago she stole my husband, made him elope with her. But the Lord punished her for it. They had an accident and my poor Curtis almost died from his injuries but I forgave him and nursed him back to health. And she! They had to amputate her left leg. Right above the knee. Serves her right!" The venom and triumph in the words sent shivers up and down my spine. "She's a cripple with a cork leg now. She'll steal no more husbands. Not when they find out about her. That's why I am telling you—"

"At it again?" Mrs. Libby's voice cut sharply into the poisonous harangue. "I should think you'd get tired of repeating the same story so often. Scat! Run along! You're spoiling my party with your horror yarns."

My knees were feeling funny, and I dropped into a chair while Mrs. Libby marched her niece out of the room. So that was Gala's "handicap!" That was the reason for her seclusion!

"Told you she was a snake. Knew this was coming!" Mrs. Libby, her eviction completed, sat down also. "It's an obsession with her. Seems to get a kick out of the strange fact that the most beautiful girl in town wanted to elope with the nit-wit she'd picked for herself."

"But—how could she! I mean, Gala. She's clever and cultured. I don't understand. He's such a —such a nothing-at-all," I stammered unhappily.

Mrs. Libby shrugged. "No accounting for so-called 'love'. Plays funny tricks on people. And maybe she didn't elope at all. Pretty Boy swore up and down he'd been merely giving her a lift. But then, he would say that, to save his precious skin".

Gala and that nonentity! I couldn't believe it. He probably had told the truth when he said he'd only been taking her some place. That horrible woman would distort the facts—

And the accident. How poor Gala must have suffered —was still suffering. Five long years!

Involuntarily I had compared my own fate with hers.

I too had suffered for five years. But now it was almost over. The sun was coming out between the clouds—

Her anguish would go on for the rest of her life. An amputation—it was a barrier, shutting out all chances of happiness.

Or—was it?

For no special reason I began to wonder what Dad would say, how he would look, when I told him of Gala's misfortune.

On the way home from the Libby party, Aunt Millie announced we would have luncheon guests the next day.

"Your landlord by proxy, and that bald-headed little Professor Stoddard. I asked the Forrestall ladies too—in Kay's name, of course—but they had a previous engagement. I begged Forrestall to show me over the new Burton house, so called, and he only could make it in his lunchtime. That's how come", she explained to Dad. "Can you and Allan take time off for playing tourists?"

Roberts glumly lifted a silked spr ead to expose snowy linen sheets.

Dad shook his head. "Not a chance. We aren't coming in for lunch. The government wants a rush job, what with the news from Europe getting blacker by the hour. I'm even having the office shack enlarged and a shower put in, so Allan can sleep there if necessary. I'm afraid, Kay, our work is going to cut into his evenings with you".

"But not into yours with—Gala?" Aunt Millie asked innocently.

It was a perfect opening for telling them what I had learned. But Dad's little-boy embarrassment, the flood of red that mounted into his wind-burned face, was so revealing I hadn't the heart to do it, and came to his rescue instead with a question.

"How did Professor Stoddard get mixed up in the invitation?"

"He wiggled in". Aunt Millie said placidly. "Tagged after me when I buttonholed Forrestall. And when he heard me rave about the —er—wholesome beauties of the Victorian era he must have confounded the sofa curves I was talking about with the ladies of the period. Anyway, he piped up 'Me too, pretty please', so—what could I do but say you'd be delighted?"

I didn't relish the prospect of the nosy little Professor's company on our personally conducted tour. But there was nothing I could do about it.

Nor did I have an occasion for begging Allan to run into town under some pretext and come with us. Dad prevented it by making him say good night at the door, ostensibly because of an early start in the morning, but really, I believe, as further proof of the new order of things.

In spite of these minor annoyances I slept like a top—dreamless, and without the slightest premonition of the horrors not twenty-four hours away—and woke, for a wonder, to a warm, bright day that made the garden unfold miraculously and visibly.

The joy was short-lived though. By the time we started for the Burton house in the early afternoon, the sun had disappeared and the sky was so clouded and threatening that Aunt Millie took her umbrella along.

For some reason Forrestall did not let us cross the gardens, but insisted on marching us out the front door and down the street, around the corner and put the wide granite steps of the pseudo-Renaissance Burton atrocity.

Roberts opened the pretentious entrance for us—sour-faced, with spotless white gloves and camouflaged in an ill-fitting butler's uniform—and we filed past him into the gloomy hall; I with a beating heart and keeping my fingers crossed, Aunt Millie with an expectant sniff, Conley Forrestall with a slight show of pomposity and Professor Stoddard—?

It is hard to determine, in view of the tragedy that followed, whether my impressions of that day were concurrent or retrospective. But I am pretty sure I did feel a tension in him the moment he appeared at the house, over-apologetic and brimming with protestations of his abiding love for all things Victorian. And I remember distinctly that he patted beads of perspiration, that couldn't have been caused by the non-existent heat, from his bald head when we entered the goal of his desire.

The ground floor was much as I had pictured it, a succession of huge, somber rooms with enormous mantelpieces, dark, ornate woodwork, dark heavy hangings, unwieldly, tufted sofas and chairs, and many long, narrow windows reaching to the cealing virtually from the floor.

The windows were the only part of the stuffy splendor that interested me, and not for their decorative value. Typical of the period, they consisted of two sliding panes fastened by a simple catch, and were doubling for doors in the "Back Parlor", facing a wide, covered porch.

I kept looking at these windows speculatively, all during Aunt Millie's fake raptures about the hideous "beauties" around her— in which, incidentally, she showed up Professor Stoddard's ignorance of his alleged pet hobby by naming two contemporary New York decorators as the creators of the Style Victoria, unchallenged. The windows might come in handy, if all else failed—

But I wouldn't need them. We'd discover Bruce any minute now, I encouraged myself, when presently we were mounting the stairs to the second floor, and Conley Forrestall explained:

"The rooms below were hardly ever used by the family. Now we are coming to the interesting part of the house, where Ellis Burton and his son really lived".

Why didn't anyone ever call Bruce by his real name? I wondered—

"They are kept in readiness for the hear's return, to the last, least detail", he went on with his ballyhoo, throwing open the door of a comfortable-looking bedroom. "This was his room—in here. The bed is made up. Show them, Roberts—"

Roberts said "Yes sir" glumly and lifted a silken spread to expose snowy linen sheets.

"The hot water's on tap. The thermostat is kept going the year round to that end. The telephone is connected and so is the light. It's turned off up here, but Roberts has only to throw on the main switch in the basement. And the staff can be assembled in an hour. They all have positions they can leave at once".

"My brother's help included?" Aunt Millie asked suspiciously.

"Oh, no, no indeed! Nettie and Mae have always belonged to the ground floor of the old house," Forrestall reassured her.

After 6 Years Suffering He Tells of Grand Relief

Praises Syntona for Relief of Awful Stomach Gas, Acidity, Dizzy Spells, Headaches and Heartburn. Also Relieved of Pains in Limbs and Muscles. Sleeps Better; Tired Wornout Feelings Disappear.

"When a medicine will help me like Syntona did, it deserves the highest praise I can give it," said Mr. Percy Babcock, 131 Duke St., Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"In the past six years my stomach had been giving me no end of trouble and no matter what I took, it just kept getting worse. I suffered after almost every meal with sour acidity and gas in my stomach. This often brought on cramps with a sick, nauseated feeling and attacks of heartburn. Dizzy spells would come over me, spots floated before my eyes and I'd usually end up with a splitting headache. During all this time I was having pains in my limbs, joints and muscles, and I wasn't getting my proper sleep, so I constantly felt fatigued.

"I had been disappointed in so many medicines, but a friend of mine recommended Syntona so highly that I began taking it. Now I can say it has given me the best results of anything I ever used. I am relieved of the gas, indigestion, acidity and heartburn. I am free of the dizzy spells and headaches and since those pains have left me I get more sleep and I don't feel tired and worn-out as I used to.

"It is certainly great to be feeling so much better again and I am glad to recommend Syntona to any one who may be suffering as I did."

MR. PERCY BABCOCK

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it will help you, too.

Sweep Miles of Railroad

Chungking, June 1 —(AP)—American planes have swept 150 miles of railroad from Pukow to Pukow, across the Yangtze river from Hankow, destroying or damaging 22 locomotives, Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

The Pukow-Hsuchow was one of a series in a widespread aerial offensive which included an assault upon the Supna Road terminal of Laiho.

1,300 Ex-Service Men Given Grants During April

Ottawa, June 1 (CP) — Grants were given 1,300 ex-service men during April under the government's post-discharge rehabilitation plan, the Pensions Department reported today.

A breakdown listed 763 as receiving vocational training and 345 as taking vocational training and 342 getting out-of-work benefits, but this number had dropped to 149 by the end of the month.

A total of 8,500 ex-service men of the present war were placed in employment by April through the Selective Service co-operating with veterans' welfare officers of the Pensions Department, bringing the total of jobs arranged since the service was inaugurated to 118,848, in addition, 2,359 veterans of the First Great War were provided with jobs making a cumulative total for that category of 78,836.

At the end of April 3,105 veterans of the First Great War and 1,715 Second Great War veterans were registered as unemployed. The figure for the latter group showed a considerable below the total discharged from the services during the month, the department said.

Refugees Tell How Huns Forced Them to Lifeboats

By GUY BEAUDRY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, June 1. (CP)—Tales of a panic that followed the order to "abandon ship" were told today when 94 European refugees—mostly Jews—arrived here from Philadelphia aboard their central Portuguese ship—The Serpa Pinto—was stopped in mid-Atlantic by a German submarine and passengers and crew members were told the vessel would be sunk.

While interest was aroused in the fact that a Canadian citizen, Canon Grande Peres, 84, of Trenton, Ont., was among the group is the second to reach Canada within two months under arrangements made with the Canadian Government by the National Committee on Refugees and the United Jewish Refugees and War Relief agencies of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

Far Duration Only.

Under the arrangement, Refugees' admission into Canada is for the duration only but some of them spoke today as having found "at last the promised land."

Serge Tenenbaum, about 30, who arrived here with his wife, mother, younger brother and sister, described the taking in the lifeboats as a "mad scramble" for safety by the Serpa Pinto which left Lisbon on the 12.06 in the morning by the sound of a gun fired from the deck on the German U-boat.

"My whole family and I were about the last to get aboard the boat after the captain ordered all hands and passengers to abandon ship," he told this reporter.

Ghastly Scene.

"Although I did not see any of the three reported drownings, it is a ghastly sight to see these aged women and men and also children, being lashed, into the lifeboats".

The official list of the 74 refugees gave no place of origin. However an official of the Canadian Jewish Congress who travelled with the refugees from Philadelphia to Montreal said that 80 per cent of the group were originally from Poland.

Most of them spoke fluent French, having lived in Belgium and then in France for some years after fleeing German occupation. The group was composed of 23 families comprising 43 persons. Two babies were born formed of seven single men, mostly Polish. Most of the group will remain in Montreal, but a number of them are going to Toronto and Winnipeg.

There were only three Catholic families and one priest.

Four or five families were said to have relatives in Canada.

Berlin Says Allies Plan for Attack On South France

London, June 1 — (CP) — The Berlin radio asserted today that 15 Allied divisions, four of them tanks were concentrated in French North Africa for an attack on the French Riviera.

The official DNB dispatch said the 10 infantry and five tank divisions will enter the battle scene in conjunction with the landing on the west coast of Europe. The troops are said to include American and Algerian units.

The report said it was possible that the Allied command would turn the liberated French island of Corsica, which has been under the Vichy continental France, into a grand style invasion springboard. Italy, Berlin means speculated that the Italian Riviera might also be an invasion objective.

May Temperature 7 or 8 Degrees Above Average

Whatever may be said about the month just passed, it cannot be said it was cold, for in the records as being one in which fur mufflers were the vogue. The fact is the fact that the Belleville district was visited with a sharp frost several nights during May.

According to statistical weather records kept at the Belleville Filtration Plant the average temperature during May was two degrees above and eight degrees warmer than during the same month in the previous year. The maximum temperature for the month just closed was 82 degrees as compared with 77 degrees for May, 1943, while the minimum temperature was 31 degrees as compared with 27 for one year ago. Disturbed farmers who lost crops of tomatoes and other garden greens as the result of the heavy frost of two weeks ago will probably disagree with the maximum temperature recorded, but it is understood that the nearness of the bay in the above case had a moderating effect.

Very little rain was received during the month, only 2.01 inches as compared with 6.11 inches for May of last year. More than just 10 days upon which rain fell in some form or other with one day ago there was precipitation on 19 days of the month.

WALL STREET

New York, June 1 —(AP)— The stock market was off to a fast start today as selling hit Rails and Selected Industrials touching peaks of one to five years with gains of more than a point to a point.

As in the recent upswing, investment demand was inspired by the urge to employ idle funds as the result of growing hopefulness over the war, political politics and the business outlook.

In the rising ranks were N. Y. Central, Union Pacific, North Western (when issued), U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Curtiss-Wright, American Can.

Specialty stocks showed a steady tone, with gains of ¾ appearing in Texas Mines, Hiram Walker and Lakeshore.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 1 — (CP) — A few butcher cows sold steady at $8-$9.25 in cattle trade to mid-session on the Livestock market here today. Other sales of butcher cattle were too few to establish prices. There were no sales of stockers. Unsold from yesterday were 100 head of cattle, mostly stockers.

Fresh receipts of veal calves and left-overs from yesterday sold 50c lower at $6-$13.50.

Hogs sold steady at grade A 17.05 straightweight with sows at $13.30 dressed.

No sheep or lambs were offered. Receipts reported by Dominion Marketing Service were: cattle 50, calves 30, hogs 200.

HOGS

Toronto, June 1 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at heavyweights and lightweights opening early today.

Dressedweight: Hamilton Grade A $17.50, B1 $17.15, delivered; London A $17.35 delivered; Strathroy $17.35, B1 $16.85 country points; Barrie and Hull A $17.60 delivered.

Dress-Designer Held as Bigamist

Detroit, June 1 (AP)—A 25-year-old auburn-haired dress designer who met here on a Federal charge of fraudulently receiving servicemen's allowances on behalf of four husbands, but Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said today her romantic adventures were much more extensive than that.

In fact, if she used the names of all the husbands she remembers, her names would be:

Mrs. Marian Labyatt, Hopkins Coffey Sperrow Flye, Barker Stoner, Hemmann Patchett Zerich Wilhelm Osworth Horn Gylan Blankenship.

That's 15 husbands since 1936, according to the F.B.I. count.

POLICE COURT

Fast Driving

"Fifty man was driving 86 miles an hour, I am told by the investigating officer," commented Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., John Zaley, Toronto, appeared in County Police Court today charged with driving at a dangerous rate of speed.

"I have no reason to disbelieve the investigating officer and find the accused guilty as charged," said Magistrate A. J. Lloyd as he imposed a fine of $30 and additional costs of $14.75 despite the fact Zaley denied the charge.

Careless Driving

Fred Fudge, city, admitted to a careless driving count and paid $10 and costs, while a charge of failing to make the proper signal before making a lefthand turn was dismissed against Clifford Bradshaw, R.R. No. 4 Belleville.

Sold Fluorescent Fixtures

Don Christian, Oshawa, and manager of the Christian Electric Stores, was assessed a total of $27.75 after being convicted of offering for sale or using unapproved fluorescent lighting fixtures contrary to regulations of the War Time Prices Board. Mr. Christian said he had installed such fixtures, but later units that had been discontinued in manufacture. Charles A. Payne, K.C., counsel for the defendant, held it was merely a technical breach and that the fixtures covered the multiple charges. E. O. Butler, local barrister, appeared as special prosecutor in the case.

In summarizing his decision Magistrate Lloyd stated he did not think the Christian firm had deliberately defied the regulations and he added Mr. Christian had cooperated with the representatives of the local Board. Costs of $10 and doubles had made a most honest attempt to follow the directions of the Board, but the company was guilty of a technical breach nevertheless point and therefore the minimum fine was imposed.

RIOT IN MONTREAL

Montreal, June 1.—(CP)—A brief but spirited riot, involving men of the Air Force and Army as well as civilians, wreaked havoc to an eastend St. Catherine street district late last night. Damage was reported by the manager of one store at $500.

Police said the cause of the outbreak was not known. The trouble lasted only a few minutes and no arrests were reported.

U.S. Troops Crawl, Scramble 15 Miles And Attain Ridge

By KENNETH T. DIXON
Associated Press War Correspondent
With the Fifth Army Headquarters in Rome, May 31 (Delayed)—(AP)—A task force of American infantrymen in a spectacular infantry coup last night and early this morning by establishing themselves on a high razorback ridge on Monte Artemisio, behind Germans.

They moved in ghostlike stealth by the hundreds through bright moonlight and infiltrated German lines and rearm positions.

At dawn today, they were in possession overlooking Velletri, which still is contested.

Between these Alban hills and Velletri, at least a number of German armies are caught in a slowly closing pincer movement, interpreted because the Americans came all the way without firing a single shot.

Our position overlooks Rome to the north and Velletri to the south and southeast. Although the theoretically circuitous 15-mile crawling, scrambling march from Anzio Beachhead past German machinegun positions so close that bright tracers fired toward our side of the front flashed over their heads, we crawled along.

They eliminated without noise the few German outposts and scattered riflemen who tried to stop them.

The closest calls came when the Germans ranged a front line artillery while we still were in No-Man's-Land. Shells were dropped, illuminating the whole countryside and nearly brilliance forced us to lie motionless for minutes which seemed like hours.

Can See Smoke of Battle

Near York, June 1 —(AP)— A CBS broadcast from Berne today said Rome residents could see the smoke of 1,000 workers to the United States from British Honduras to combat the manpower shortage in the lumber industry.

A. 'Pat' Labey Is Found Dead

ALMOND "PAT" LABEY

Trenton, June 1—Almond "Pat" Labey, 51, was found dead in his bush home two miles south of Trenton on the Bay Shore shortly after noon today by his neighbor, Ord. Jones, passing in a car. The trailer was on property owned by Gerald Bowe and when Almond's son, Gordon Labey entered the trailer camp, he called the proprietor and Mr. Jones found the door down and found him dead on the bed. Dr. H. C. Hyde of Brighton was called and he stated that the deceased had died of natural causes and that there would be no inquest. Opt. Armstrong stated that Labey was complaining last evening of a severe case of indigestion and it is probable the man died shortly after retiring on Wednesday night.

ALLIES SEAL MAIN GERMAN ESCAPE ROUTE
GERMAN WEST WALL INSTALLATIONS BLASTED

5th Plunges Across Via Casilina Near Valmontone Town

Break Into Velletri As Canadians Near Ferentino 18 Miles From Valmontone

IN SIGHT OF ROME

By SID FEDER
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, June 2 — (AP) — Fifth Army troops have cut the Via Casilina, sealing off a main German escape route, and broken into Velletri — already less than two miles behind by an American spearhead battling on the heights in sight of Rome.

Plunging across the Via Casilina highway 6 miles near Valmontone, the Allies slashed the main road for Nazis falling back from the main front to the southeast.

British 8th Army forces, including Canadian infantry and armor pounding up the highway were nearing Ferentino, only 18 miles southeast of Valmontone, and French troops swung toward the highway from the west in this sector, a few lateral roads branch off from the Via Casilina to highways farther east.

Enter Velletri

Meanwhile, on the 5th Army front, Algerian infantrymen entered Velletri late yesterday after fighting forces on the Alban Hills only 18 miles southeast of Rome had been virtually encircled. At noon today "fierce fighting is in progress" in the streets, headquarters announced.

Two miles to the north, troops fighting to clear Monte Artemisio, in view of Rome's historic buildings, were meeting "very obstinate opposition," a communique said.

The force had snaked beyond Velletri and seized the dominating heights of Mounts Peschio and Artemisio, catching the Germans by surprise.

(The German high command claimed the dent the Allies achieved northeast of Velletri had been "sealed off", with heavy casualties inflicted. Berlin's broadcast said there was fighting at "very great fierceness" Thursday, especially in the Velletri-Valmontone sector, but that the Allies had been held.)

Capture Lariano

The smashing blows against the Nazi line guarding Rome also drove in another wedge by capture of Lariano, a village on the highway to Valmontone, 4 miles northeast of Velletri.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring had flung his touted Hermann Goering armored division into the battle near Valmontone in a bitter struggle to hold open the Via Casilina.

The exact point below Valmontone where the highway was slashed was not disclosed. Associated Press-British, Canadian and French units are now in the southeast, screened by the highway, and the French seized Ponte di Mercolo, three miles south of the famous road, west of Frosinone.

Along the coastal flank of the battle for Rome, naval guns again supported the push by British 8th Army troops. The naval guns bombarded enemy batteries near Ardea with successful results.

The first 8th Army troops struck into Velletri at 7:15 p.m. yesterday and on their march into the town captured 19 prisoners, Associated Press war correspondent Daniel De Luce reported from the front.

Two days ago German broadcasts hinted Velletri had been abandoned, but De Luce's dispatch last night indicated the Allies still were meeting resistance and had not yet fully occupied the city.

The Germans apparently still were holding the other three main major strongholds on their Rome line—former capital Valmontone 5 miles to the northwest, and Lanuvio and Campoleone, toward the coast.

Fervent Resistance

The daily communique said 8th Army troops, advancing astride the Via Casilina toward Valmontone, "have pressed enemy rearguards so severely" in one sector "that enemy demolitions could not be effected." Advance 8th Army elements drove six miles beyond Frosinone to a point less than two miles from Ferentino.

Dover Weather

Dover, England, June 2—(AP)—A fresh northwest wind that increased in strength in the morning hours made for choppy seas in Dover Strait today, with overspread skies were cloudy. The weather was cool, with the 11 a.m. temperature 56.

Conditions were a little brighter, and visibility was better than yesterday. The cloud ceiling was higher and the barometer rose slightly.

High tides at Calais will be at 12:28 a.m. tonight (4:36 p.m. E.D.T.) and 11:00 a.m. tomorrow (5:09 a.m. E.D.T.).

Most of Fires Under Control

By The Canadian Press

Canadian forest fires have lost their chief ally — the weather, and officials in Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia, where fires have ravaged unchecked for more than a week, today reported most of the blazes now under control.

Ontario's eight uncontrolled fires in the North Bay-Cochrane area were still causing great damage but officials said the heavy storm Wednesday night has aided them considerably. Most of the smaller fires now are under control.

"The situation is a lot better, but we still have to organize with a big fire in North Williams township in the Gowganda district," one official said yesterday. There are 10 townships affected and the fire has covered more than 70,000 acres.

Ammunition Train Explodes in E. Anglia

London, June 2 — (CP) — An ammunition train exploded on the East Anglia market town, lifting roofs from adjacent houses, turning the railroad station into a shambles, and injuring a number of persons today.

The fireman of the train was killed, but train, station and nearby buildings caught fire, but whether there was any additional fatalities was not immediately known. The blast was felt 25 miles away.

GERMAN CLAIM UNCONFIRMED

London, June 2 — (CP) — The Berlin radio claimed today that German warships had sunk a coastal tanker and six fully laden coastal steamers in convoy off the Yugoslavia port of Slebnik Wednesday, capturing 130 soldiers, 37 women and five children.

The soldiers included British, Russian and Canadian troops, the broadcast added. There was no Allied confirmation. Slebnik is 25 miles north of Split.

CANDIDATES IN CONSERVATIVE RACE

Regina, June 2—(CP)—More than 140 candidates were officially nominated yesterday for the election of Saskatchewan general election June 15 in which 51 of the Legislature's 55 seats are at stake.

Four other members of the next legislature will be elected later.

Moving Airfield Fully Operational For 500-Mile Journey to S. England

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, June 2 — (CP) — The R.C.A.F. has earned the tribute "jolly fine show" from R.A.F. supply and transport experts for their feat in conveying a complete airfield from Scotland to southern England, as well as, remaining fully operational during the 500-mile journey.

The movement — believed to be the largest non-stop advance by air field crew and complete equipment in the present war — required three convoys of camouflaged lorries, largest of which was five miles long.

The task was from the training grounds to a temporary operational base, and was so ordered that pilots of the squadrons served by the mobile airfield launched their first operational flight from the new base while the rearguard was still packing.

As the main movement neared the new base, a signal which depended upon it for maintenance flew low overhead on their way south, to arrive a few hours before the ground crews. The rear party brought forward the balance of the equipment needed to maintain operations from their final flight from the old base.

Within 36 hours of the arrival of the main party, the first operational air flight was made by aircrews served by the mobile airfield.

POPE CALLS ANY WHO ATTACK ROME GUILTY MATRICIDE

Speaks to Cardinals As Contending Armies Surge Within Sight Of Eternal City

HOPES FOR PEACE

By HUGH MOORE
(A. P. Staff Writer)

London, June 2 (AP) — Pope Pius XII, in a speech to the College of Cardinals, expressed hope today peace soon would appear on Rome's cliffs and over its whole world but added a demand for total victory might prolong the war.

In an Italian language broadcast the Pontiff called on the victors to give up hope of a "peace imposed," and declared "whoever would dare to lift a hand against Rome would be guilty of 'matricide'."

Speaking as contending armies surged within sight of Rome, Pope Pius said anyone lifting a hand against the Eternal City would "sully with a heinous responsibility toward future generations."

The broadcast was reported by The Associated Press.

The Pontiff said many persons "in the theory of "full victory or complete destruction" and this "opposite" to that which inspires and stimulus prolonging the war and also its close, by following their fraternal impulse or for realistic considerations, would be faulted to a reasonable peace."

A fear of the enemy's determination to defend national life down to the roots suffocates all other arguments in the hearts of a large part of humanity, the Pontiff said in an age of desperation," he said.

"Those who feel thus," the Pope continued, "advance as in a hypnotic sleep and irresistible sacrifice, which they compel all others to an extenuating and bloody struggle, the social, economic and spiritual consequences of which threaten to become the source of future times."

Thanking the Cardinals for their good wishes on his name day, the Pope said the Church has always followed the marvellous plan of cruelty and destruction. He added that what a year ago seemed impossible now has become a terrible reality.

"The Eternal City of peace is now in the battleground," he declared. "However in the midst of the fury of battle we do not want to fail to stress how the threat of air raids on the monuments and works of Rome has brought about a more considerate attitude.

REPORTS CONVOY ATTACK

London, June 2—(CP)—A Berlin broadcast recorded by the A. P. Wednesday attacked a German convoy last night off Stadtland on the west coast of Norway, declaring "almost all damaged."

The convoy raiders were shot down by escort vessels, said the broadcast.

There was no immediate Allied report on any convoy attack in that area.

CANADA SPEEDS PRODUCTION OF INVASION TUGS

Last year, 45 steel invasion tugs slid down the ways at Trenton, Ontario, to swell the total of equipment Ulantic task that Canada was turning out for invasion. This year twice as many of these tugs, together with a large number of wooden tugs, will be turned out by Canadian ship-builders for the United Nations forces in that Britain. These tugs are rugged and designed to haul supply barges feeding the invading army.

PREMIER CURTIN MAKES PLEA FOR AVERAGE CITIZEN

Urges Co-operation of World Powers in War be Extended Into Peace

SPEAKS AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, June 2 — (CP) — Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia yesterday set before Canadian senators and commoners the suggestion that co-operation of the British Commonwealth, the United States, Russia and China in war should be extended into the peace for the good of mankind.

"Those who feel that the Pope continued, "advance as in a hypnotic sleep and irresistible sacrifice, which they compel all others to an extenuating and bloody struggle, the social, economic and spiritual consequences of which threaten to become the source of future times."

Thanking the Cardinals for their good wishes on his name day, the Pope said the Church has always followed the marvellous plan of cruelty and destruction. He added that what a year ago seemed impossible now has become a terrible reality.

"The Eternal City of peace is now in the battleground," he declared. "However in the midst of the fury of battle we do not want to fail to stress how the threat of air raids on the monuments and works of Rome has brought about a more considerate attitude.

German Attempts To Crack Russian Lines Repulsed

London, June 2. (CP) — Red Army troops have smashed all German attempts to crack the Russian lines north of Jassi in Rumania and have counter-attacked in some sectors inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy, Moscow announced today.

A broadcast Soviet communique, telling of the fourth successive day of battle north of the Moldavian Province City, said 800 Nazi soldiers were killed and 17 tanks were knocked out.

Three days in large forces of tanks and infantry, the Nazis made three separate thrusts, but were stopped by Soviet artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire, the communique declared. Red tank and infantry launched successful counter-attacks on each sector.

A Finnish communique reported Soviet infantry attacks on two fronts facing Finland—on the Karelina Isthmus northwest of Leningrad and between Lakes Ladoga and Onega.

ALL-OUT ASSAULT TRAPS THOUSANDS JAPANESE TROOPS

Australians and Americans Closing Vise on Two Fronts

ADVERSE WEATHER

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 3 (AP)—Massing of reinforcements for an all-out assault on Japanese-held Biak Island in Schouten and pincer moves aimed at trapped Japanese on two other fronts were announced today.

Under naval guns and without enemy aerial or naval interference, more American units landed Thursday at Biak, enemy air base in Netherlands New Guinea's Geelvink Bay, invaded Saturday.

On Bougainville Island, in the northern Solomons, Allied units landed behind Japanese lines Tuesday at the mouth of the Torokina River, which the Allies crossed in January in extending their original beachhead. The two other thrusts clamped down on them part of thousands of Japanese still resisting on Bougainville.

A second pincer movement against entrapped Japanese was narrowed when Australian soldiers, advancing northwest along the British New Guinea coastline, captured Awar village and Mulu harbor without contacting the enemy.

Canadian Troops In Italy Welcome Heat, Dust After Discomfort Of Mud

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Italy June 2 (CP) — Italy's summer is near at hand and the soldiers who fought through the mud of last Summer are welcoming it. They have both the heat and the rain, the dust and the mud. And they'll choose the heat and dust every time.

For the Canadians, living with the enemy always close at hand, about rain and mud during the muddy static period that preceded the current offensive. It was the period of rain and mud which converted roads into impassable quagmires, impassable even for heavy vehicles and tanks, vital adjuncts to a major push.

The rain stopped falling, eventually, and the roads and fields began to dry. But there still was mud long after the daily downpours ended and April's showers delayed the drying process.

By night men patrolled into the enemy's positions while others waited in silence for German patrols which might penetrate the Canadian lines. More often than not the Germans never came, but there was no guarantee they would not come so defences had to be manned and constantly.

For several weeks in a row troops lived this "slit trench" life, enduring the discomforts of mud, the dampness and the dangers that go with the front line. Then, their period as forward troops over, they would be relieved for six days or so by a reserve battalion.

Eventually the Canadian brigades kept only two battalions at the front at a time. The third battalion was always close behind, but maybe only a few hundred yards behind the forward troops, but it was in reserve and its men were resting.

While in reserve soldiers paraded to the mobile baths, to wash off the grime of the previous weeks. They added movies to their "entertainment" programmes and the nearby rest centres where life was less crude.

There were always Canadians at the 8th. Army rest centre,a massive camp in Southern Italy where soldiers relaxed for a week, free to spend the time almost as they chose.

This was the infantryman's life in that static period and it was much the same for the other soldiers.

Pas-de-Calais Area Given Heaviest Single Blow of War

U.S. Air Force Hurls 750 Bombers And Hundreds of Fighters Against Small Sector

NAZI CONVOY DAMAGED

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 3 —(AP)— Up to 1,500 American heavy bombers and fighters struck the heaviest single blow yet at the French invasion coast today and sent another armada of 500-750 four-engined planes from Italy bombed five railway yards in Hungary and Transylvania after night attacks by British and Mediterranean bases.

The Mediterranean Air Force headquarters reported "good" results in assaults upon Simontornya, Bolse on the Sieged in eastern Hungary and Lupeni (Jiu) and Simeria in Transylvania, the mountainous Rumanian province which Germany ceded certainly to Hungary in 1940.

The Mediterranean strikes were in direct tactical support of the Russian armies massing in the Carpathian slopes. German troops and material had been funneled to the front over lines passing through the five bombed yards.

The British-based planes struck the Pas-de-Calais department, of France and reported no sign of German fighter opposition.

Perhaps 3,000 tons of explosives were unloosed on the French forts-ification area as the bombers set to carry maximum loads due to the short trip involved.

Before dawn, R.A.F. fliers struck over 1,000 miles of airways from Scandinavia to France and from Hungary to Crete.

The Pas-de-Calais section, probably the most intensely bombed area in the world for its size, in 24 scant 25 miles across the Channel from England. The department extends 90 miles into the French interior and along 35 miles of the coast includes such familiar points as Calais, Boulogne, the Somme estuary, Le Touquet and Berck-Plage Nez, terminal for Channel swims.

Cocoanuts Wards

R.A.F. heavy bombers concentrated on Southwest France, the rail yards at Saumur, 150 miles from Paris, and the French coast last night and Canadian Mosquitos and Lancasters dropped bombs at target in Denmark and the German reported that an attack which damaged a convoy off the west Norwegian coast. Middle East headquarters announced that the big Greek Island of Crete. Enemy waiters were mined.

Circle Over Boulogne

The daylight bombers left converging trails of vapor over the Channel and shortly afterwards a rumble of explosions was heard. More formations went out around noon, including a big force of fighters which circled around Boulogne.

A Cairo communique said an important German convoy was attacked in the central Aegean Sea, north of Crete yesterday and that four ships were left burning and others were damaged. Two destroyers among the eight escort vessels were declared damaged. Ten aircraft were lost in the attacks yesterday and during the last two weeks.

Day daylight raiders carried the Allies' second big pre-invasion aerial offensive since the first of April into its 15th. day. Glittering in the sunlight were the leading force headed toward the much-battered district of the French coast between Dieppe and Boulogne.

All morning the German radio reported that the Reich was free of planes but at noon the Luxembourg transmitter gave the warning that often precedes attacks on occupied territory.

The attack on the Saumur rail yards was called the 7th heavy one of months. The Air Ministry said night raiders also struck a military objective near the French coast but did not indicate its nature. Mosquitos simultaneously bombed an unspecified objective in Denmark and the planes were laid in enemy waters. All the planes returned safely from these operations.

Offensive moves into France and Germany yesterday evening by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. fighter-bombers threw German planes while others spent their bombs before they were lost. Two of the enemy fell to Canadians. One Canadian plane was lost.

The latest blows against the communications system dominating most of all aerial offensive which always was designed to have severely restricted certain German military movements when the invasion struck.

The Vichy radio said 20 persons were killed in Wednesday night's attack on Saumur, an important railway and rail line from central France to Nantes. The Vichy radio said 43 persons were killed in an attack last night on Boulogne, on the coast of France, possibly the unspecified military objective referred to in the Air Ministry communique.

There were no reports of German reconnaissance planes over England last night.

PTE. RICHARD SMITH ON DANGER LIST

Seriously wounded on the Italian battlefront and later reported as critically ill, Pte. Richard Smith, son of Mrs. Sarah Smith, 164 Moira Street, is slightly improved but still not off the danger list, according to a cable received by his mother this week. A member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Pte. Smith has been overseas since 1939. He suffered a compound fracture of the leg and a penetrating wound in the chest as a result of bomb fragments.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW INCREASE

A slight increase of $2,448.78 in customs and excise collections for the month of May over the corresponding period during 1943 was reported by officials of the Belleville office on Thursday. Collections for the Belleville office during the month totalled $268,688.58, as compared with $266,239.80 for May of 1943.

GLASS IN FIRE BOX ACCIDENTALLY BROKEN

Accidental breaking of the glass in a fire alarm box at the Belleville General Hospital by one of the nursing staff sent fire reels to that institution at the supper hour Thursday evening. Not knowing that the alarm had been rung accidentally, and the nurse not having reported the incident, firemen spent considerable time checking the building but no fire of any nature was discovered.

A second alarm answered during the evening was to the Garn Dobbs plumbing shop on Victoria Ave., where fire was reported beneath the street grating leading to the basement. A lighted cigarette butt is believed to have been responsible for the blaze, which burned out a section of the basement window frame before it was extinguished by firemen.

PRINGLE TROPHY WON BY STRATFORD

The Pringle Trophy, awarded by Mr. J. F. Pringle, vice president and General Manager, Central Region, Canadian National Railways, was presented to the Stratford Division for obtaining the highest percentage of its objective in the Sixth Victory Loan.

"The achievement of the Stratford Division was outstanding", Mr. Pringle said in presenting the cup." Their objective was set at $137,250 and their accomplishment was $202,200 representing more than 147 per cent of the objective."

Mr. Pringle is well-known in railway and other circles of this city and is the father of Ald. R. A. Pringle well-known local barrister.

SLIPS OFF SCALES, BREAKS WINDOW

Apparently losing his balance while being weighed on the penny weigh scales at the entrance to Sills' book store, 222 Front St., Carl Lundberg, 59 Dunbar St., fell against the store plate glass window shattering the glass yesterday. Fortunately Mr. Lundberg did not sustain any serious lacerations in his fall against the window.

Buggy Is Struck, Horse'sLegBroken

When a hit-and-run motor car struck the buggy he was riding in on Highway No. 2 three miles south of Marysville shortly after 12.30 a.m. Friday morning, 15-year-old Edward Brennan, Tyendinaga Township farm lad, was hurled clear of the horse-drawn vehicle as it was demolished.

Brennan was returning home from a dance at the Tyendinaga Reserve Council House when a speeding motor car struck his buggy from behind. The buggy was smashed beyond repair and the horse's leg fractured when the animal was also struck by the hit-and-run motor vehicle. Fortunately the force of the impact hurled Brennan clear of the wreckage and he escaped without minor bruises. Provincial Police are investigating.

Hopkins' Garage, Foxboro, Entered

Robbers broke and entered Hopkins' garage in Foxboro some time early Friday morning and made off with the garage cash register valued at $300.00. Inside the cash register was approximately six dollars in petty cash. However, the robbers failed to open the garage safe, where a large number of gasoline coupons were stored.

In the identically same manner in which robberies have been carried out in Belleville and vicinity for some weeks past the robbers removed the door glass from the garage window and crawled through the opening to gain access. Once inside the marauders ransacked the office desk drawers and other likely places apparently seeking gasoline coupons and money. An attempt to pry open the safe proved futile.

Provincial Police learned on their investigation that Mr. Hopkins had been working in his garage until long after one o'clock Friday morning.

Application Of Act On Hours Of Work Postponed

Minister of Labor Says Vital War Production Cannot be Hampered

"The need for all-out production on essential war materials might be seriously interfered with if drastic changes in present hour schedules, which might be made necessary in conforming to the terms of this Act, were made," the Hon. Charles Daley, Minister of Labor stated today in announcing the postponement of certain provisions of the "Hours of Work and Vacation with Pay" Act.

The Act, which becomes effective July 1st, was designed to establish a maximum 48-hour week in Ontario for all persons employed in business and industry, as well as providing for one week's vacation with pay to everyone so employed for a full year with one firm.

The Industry and Labor Board which will administer the Act, says that while plans are being laid for the operation of the Act, it would be unsound at this time to impose arbitrary changes. This is particularly true in view of the manpower shortage existing at the present time.

The Board, therefore considers that a postponement of the Act regulating "work hours" is necessary, and will be necessary while critical production requirements and manpower shortage exist.

Agriculture, horticulture, fishing and production of foods; firms engaged in building and roads maintenance; dairy industries; construction, transportation; textiles and other undertakings which can be considered essential to the full maintenance of the war effort, shall be considered in the category of war industries insofar as present working hours are concerned.

"Periods of relaxation, for recreation are essential for general health and morale", Mr. Daley said. "The provisions of the Act, therefore, shall apply to all persons qualifying under the term of employment, for one week's vacation with pay. This does not mean that vacation must begin on July 1, but that vacations with pay shall be provided for all employees, effective July 1, under the employers plan of allotting vacation time".

The attention of Ontario Intelligencer readers is drawn to an official advertisement issued by the Minister of Labor, and which appears on another page of this edition.

Uligan harbor and 40 miles southeast of Japanese-held Hansa Bay. The advance closed to approximately 200 miles the stretch of bypassed coastline between this position and other Allied-held points southeast of Aitape. Within that vise are several thousand Japanese.

Adverse weather conditions hampered aerial activity in New Guinea but a giant Pacific triangular area was dotted by bomb craters today—a cross 1,000 miles of the Carolines, north of Guam, then Beyond Japan in the frigid Kuriles and back to Wake—as the consequence of coordinated blows by American bombers from three war theatres.

In unprecedented operations bombers from the southwest and central Pacific combed the Carolines; central Pacific planes flew the 200 miles to Guan; other central Pacific bombers pounded Wake; and Aleutian-based planes struck the Kuriles. All planes returned safely from these operations.

100th Milestone of YMCA Marked By Banquet At Which Dr. Myers Pleads For Racial Tolerance

Urges New Type of City Planning, Rehabilitation of Armed Forces and More Playgrounds

AWARDS PRESENTED

Emulation of the spirit of George Williams, founder of the Y.M.C.A. to start where he started by exerting the Christian influence in the sphere or daily living, and to pioneer in present day life as he pioneered in his, would be the finest tribute "we can pay to him, on this the 100th birthday of the association," the Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Myers, Tabernacle United Church minister declared here Thursday night in a Y.M.C.A. centenary address.

Speaking to an outstanding representative gathering of city and district civic, municipal, business, industrial, religious, professional and educational heads and their ladies at a banquet marking the 100th milestone of Y.M.C.A. existence, Dr. Myers urged his listeners to be pioneers in racial tolerance, city planning, the rehabilitation of the armed forces, sensitiveness to every boy and girl who has not had a chance, and the installation of well-equipped playgrounds, schools and dry canteens in all centres.

He deplored the fact that a well-known Toronto club had refused admission to Marion Anderson, famous negress contralto, also to the fact that on every hand there was a feeling against "our friends the Jews. We must give up racial intolerance or Christianity, one or the other," he said.

Urges New Type.

He urged a new type of city planning, a new type of city housing, something not isolated but near playgrounds, schools and churches. "Let us plan this for the next 15 years," he said.

Dr. Myers suggested "one great inclusive organization for the rehabilitation of our overseas forces. This organization should be started at once to see that everything is done to welcome and rehabilitate these young men and women."

"Everyone", the speaker declared, "should resolve to get behind every movement in the city for the building of good, strong character. The need of Canada for its youth is illustrated in the recent sentence to death of a 15-year-old boy. This is a blot on our system, which will be hard to live down. Everyone should protest".

"Our youth is the future of Canada and must be looked after" he went on, declaring that the country's greatest needs today are well-equipped playgrounds, schools and dry canteens. "We must be sensitive to every boy and girl who has not had a chance. It is a mistaken idea to hang on to the ideas of the past. Christ was a pioneer of faith and we should be out pioneering for the good of humanity."

Reviewed Life of Williams

He reviewed the life of George Williams and the origin and growth of the Y.M.C.A. He recalled three great social influences of the day; the industrial revolution, when steam was invented, that caused some to see power, others to squeeze the last cent out of men, women and children, resulting in squalid living and working conditions; the great religious awakening by Wesley and Wakefield which "saved the British Isles from a revolution, which would have been as bloody as that of France", and Puritanism, the successor to the spirit, that produced Magna Charta and the Reformation, and which, though narrow was strong, and stood for the freedom of conscience and the responsibility of the individual to God for his immortal soul.

The Y.M.C.A. has pioneered in many things, Dr. Myers continued. First the body as the temple of God and secondly, it pioneered in mind. Young men should not be satisfied with what some people put in their minds, and this brought about night classes and discussions.

J. B. Boyce, Chairman

The speaker was ably introduced by Chairman J. B. Boyce, who wove a clever thread of humor through the entire program pattern. Mr. Howard Clarke ably expressed the appreciation of the audience to the speaker.

An outstanding feature of the banquet was the introduction of Leading Gunner "Buck" Parson, one of Belleville's naval heroes, and survivor of the "Athabaskan," Canadian destroyer recently sunk off the French coast. The modest Jack Tar and his wife received loud acclaim as they stood up to acknowledge the introduction given by Albert Jones.

Another feature of the banquet was the unveiling of an impressive Honor Roll which carries the names of Y.M.C.A. members now in the armed services or who have given their lives for humanity. This was ably carried out by the Rev. Dr. Bert Howard who in his pre-unveiling remarks expressed the hope that "our children and children's children would be versed in the arts of peace and not the arts of war." He was assisted by Mr. Newton Thompson. A brief prayer followed the unveiling.

Honor Awards Made.

Also featuring was the presentation of Centennial Honor Awards for long and efficient service in the Y.M.C.A. to Messrs. Harry Ackerman; Ralph Morden and Burton Jennings. The presentation was made by Chairman Boyce assisted by President Lloyd Hicks. Messrs. Ackerman and Jennings gave brief addresses of appreciation.

Concluding the program was the presentation to the local Y.M.C.A., through its General Secretary Joe Shortt, of two handsome pictures, Sallman's "Head of Christ" and Sir George Williams, "Y" founder. The presentation was made by Jack Wilson and accepted by Joe Shortt.

Musical Program.

Interspersing the program were several tuneful solos, three by James Bankier, one by Ed Shortt and two by Miss Marion Dudley whose lovely voice in "Ave Maria" drew the unstinted acclaim of the audience. Alec Gordon provided his usual masterful piano accompaniment.

In his concluding remarks Chairman Boyce paid fine tribute to Mrs. J. E. Shortt, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A., and her assistants for their efforts in contributing to the success of the banquet. Several young ladies assisted Mrs. Shortt and her colleagues in the preparation and serving of the banquet.

Buildings Hit By Lightning And Destroyed

Bancroft, June 2 —(Special)— Loss estimated at over $5,000 resulted in Monteagle Township Wednesday afternoon when during a sharp electrical storm the farm buildings and equipment on the farm of Frank Hinze were completely destroyed by fire. Burned were the main barn, the granary and two smaller sheds.

Cause of the fire was said to be a bolt of lightning which struck the steel track used for hauling off hay. The flames spread rapidly and Mrs. Hinze running to the barn was able to save only the bowl off the cream separator before the entire building was a mass of flames. Assisted by a wind blowing in the opposite direction, neighbors were able to save the dwelling.

Burned in the barn and stables were a bull and six young calves, several pigs, five tons of hay and 200 bushels of oats. Also destroyed were a new separator, grain binder and mower with a cutter and pair of sleighs and a ton of fertilizer.

Mr. Hinze was plowing on an adjacent farm when the fire started.

Bancroft — A special building committee of the Red Cross Society was in town Monday evening in meeting with the local executive committee of the local Red Cross in connection with the erection of a new and much larger Red Cross hospital for Bancroft. The new building is very much needed as the present Red Cross hospital is inadequate to handle Bancroft and district property.

Mr. George Stedman, of Stedman brothers, Toronto, was in Bancroft Monday and Tuesday of this week on business.

Wednesday's electrical storm and short rain was a welcome to all as no rain has fallen in Bancroft and district since May 13th and 15th and these falls were very light. Over an inch of rain fell May 6th which was really the only rain of any consequence until that which fell Thursday.

Mr. W. E. Wiggins and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Blatherwick were business visitors in Belleville on Tuesday.

Driverless Car Hits Street Sign

A driverless motor car sped across Front St. and collided with a city traffic sign before the vehicle halted early last evening.

It seems Floyd Maybee, 196 Dundas St., had parked his automobile at Onderdonk's service station on the east side of Front St. leaving the motor running as he entered the premises. In some unaccountable manner the vehicle went into gear and rolled across the street into Fireman's Park, where it collided with a city traffic sign and broke the sign down. Apparently the impact threw the vehicle out of gear as it came to a stop on the park some feet over the curb and sidewalk. Fortunately no pedestrians were in the path of the driverless vehicle.

FRANCO DENOUNCED

London, June 2 (CP)—The Moscow radio, bitterly denouncing Gen. Francisco Franco and "the bloodthirsty hangmen of the Spanish people who now dons the cloak of neutrality," charged yesterday that Spain still was helping Germany.

$7,000 Addition Proposed For Spencer Lockers

A total of 29 building permits representing construction valued at $33,575 made up for one of the heaviest building lists recorded for some time with this being the figure for the month of May. Included were permits for ten residences with the largest item on the building list being a permit taken out by the Spencer Frigid Lockers for the construction of an addition to their present plant on Market Lane.

Permits issued at the city hall by City Engineer Charles Mott during May included the following:

Allan Carswell, one storey grocery on Evans Street, $2,000; Arthur Lucas, dwelling on Cannifton Road, $2,500; G. W. Elliott, dwelling, 186 Dufferin, $3,000; Mrs. Farnham, porch, 21 Johnston St., $40; Fred Foley, dwelling, 80 St. Charles St., $1,800; E. Colebourne, garage, 228 Foster, $150; S. Wannamaker, alterations at 61 Alexander, $50; H. Foote, dwelling, 37 Cannifton Road, $800; W. D. Flindall, garage, 8 Stone St., $100; Meade Johnston, repairs at plant, $250; C. H. Ridley, alterations at 82 Catherine St., $150; H. J. Christmas, new siding on residence, $250; H. Shortts, one storey residence, 13 Starling St., $1,500; Ivan Butler, alterations at dairy, 85 Grier St., $150; Mrs. Fairman, rebuilt shed at 276 William, $150; Smith Hardware, rebuild storehouse, $1,260; Mrs. G. Tracey, garage, 45 Cemetery, $125; Lionel Reid, cottage, Johnston St., $1,000; C. McBride, dwelling, 278 Dufferin, $3,000; A. Wilson, verandah, 246 Church, $150; Mrs. Simpson, verandah, Bay St., $100; Spencer Frigid Lockers, addition, $7,000; Harry Halsey, dwelling, Howard St., $2,500; Ralph Batty, verandah, Frank Street, $60; E. Bradshaw, dwelling, 238 Bleecker, $5,500.

Obituary

DAVID WILLIAMS
Toronto

Marmora, June 2—The death occurred on Sunday evening May 28, of David Williams, formerly of Toronto. The deceased who was ninety years of age passed away at the Rectory where he has resided for several months with his niece, Mrs. A. B. Caldwell and Rev. A. B. Caldwell. He was a member of the United Church and took an active part in Sunday School work as long as his health permitted. His wife predeceased him a few years ago. The funeral was held from the McGill funeral home, Toronto. Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell attended the funeral.

LATE SAMUEL McCOMB

Rawdon, June 2—The funeral of the late Samuel McComb, Springbrook, was held in St. Mark's Anglican Church, Bonarlaw, on Sunday afternoon with a very large attendance. The church overflowed and over fifty members of the Orange Order together with relatives and friends from all walks of life quietly stood on the church lawn throughout the service.

Rev. A. B. Caldwell officiated and gave a message of comfort to the bereaved widow and others who mourn. The hymns were "Peace Perfect Peace," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and "Abide With Me."

During the service Mrs. Harry Haslett and Mrs. Burton Woodbeck rendered a vocal duet.

Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket and were mute testimony to the esteem of the deceased.

The bearers were Messrs. George Thompson, John Bateman, John Morrison, Orrie Barton, Morley Barlow and William Barlow.

The floral bearers were Messrs. Claire Tanner, Roy Lough, Delbert Mumby, Elwood Bateman, Lloyd Williams and Clayton Clemenger. All were members of the L.O.L. 442, Springbrook.

At the graveside in the 12th Line Cemetery Mr. Percy Bateman was director of ceremonies and Messrs. Jack Sharp, Everett Cook and Cecil Bateman conducted the solemn ritual.

LATE NORMAN WESLEY POPE
(Thurlow Township)

The funeral of Norman Wesley Pope, son of Mr. Edward Pope, Gilbert Street, Thurlow Township, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Thursday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. G. G. Wright, Rector of Christ Church. Many friends were present, including former classmates of the deceased at the Prince of Wales School.

The bearers were Gordon Demille, Stanley Schreider, Douglas Nobes, Ronald Hedger, Bruce Parsons and Ted Boyce.

MISS MERINE Y. E. BOWERMAN
(Ameliasburg Township)

Miss Merine Y. E. Bowerman, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. William Bowerman, first concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, June 1st., after a brief illness. She was born at Warren, Ontario, eighteen years ago.

The late Miss Bowerman until a short time ago was in the employ of the Canadian General Electric Company in Peterborough, and of late she held a position with the Central Bridge Company at Trenton. In religion she was a member of the Anglican Church at Carrying Place and was held in high esteem by many friends to whom her death has brought much regret.

Surviving her are her parents; her twin sister, Marilyn Yvonne, and two other sisters, June and Vivian, all at home; two brothers, Vernon and Lorne, both at home.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

IN MEMORIAM

MEENS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Charles Seymore Meens, who passed away one year ago today, June 2, 1943.

Dear Dad you are never forgotten.

As the years roll swiftly along, when evening shadows near,
And we vision you in the doorway,
with your old sweet smile so dear,
Thus our sad hearts still remember,
forever while life shall last,
That you were one of God's noblest,
too soon was your short life passed,
But somewhere back of the sunset,
we know, dear, you are waiting,
Midst the beauty of heavenly skies.
—Too dearly loved and sadly missed to ever be forgotten, by his Wife and Daughters.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Delong and family wish to thank their neighbors and friends for their sympathy and generous gifts after their recent fire. Words cannot express their deep appreciation. J2

Wasn't The Heat That Made Face Red

Tommy Horton tells this one on himself.

Tommy was waiting patiently in line in one of the larger chain grocery stores the other day when he noticed a small boy who was having the time of his life playing with customers baskets, the cans on the shelves, and in general "raising Cain" with no one to guide him.

Turning to a lady who stood next to him, Tommy remarked "What that young cuss needs is a good old-fashioned spanking, and if I was his dad, he would get it".

The lady smiled a not over enthusiastic smile and remarked "I think he must be spoiled".

She moved on to the store cashier while the young hopeful tried to give a reasonable facsimile of a blockbuster dropping in a boiler-making plant.

A man next to Tommy nudged him.

"Say, Bud", he smiled. "Did you know that lady?"

"No", replied Tommy.

"Well," laughed the man, "That was the boy's mother".

Exit Tommy, and it wasn't the heat that made his face red.

PICTON

3 P. E. County Boys Reported Wounded in Action

Picton, June 3—Able Seaman Vernon MacDonald, R.C.N.V.R. has been wounded in action according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph MacDonald, Wellington. Nature or extent of wounds is not given but it was stated that the date was May 23rd. Overseas for some months, A. B. MacDonald was serving on a motor torpedo boat.

Another son of Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald also saw action recently.

A.B. Vernon MacDonald is a member of the crew of H.M.C.S. Chaudiere, one of the Canadian ships which recently sank a German U-boat in the North Atlantic.

In connection with the sinking of the U-boat there was added local interest since one of the corvette's fighting part was the Pennel, which was adopted by Sir Thomas Picton Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Two more Prince Edward County boys have been wounded in action in Italy, according to word received by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Forsyth, Wellington, was slightly wounded, his parents have been advised. No details are given. He is a member of the 3rd Armoured Recce. Regiment.

Pte. Fred Richardson, wounded in action on May 23rd, is seriously ill, his mother Mrs. Fred Richardson was advised yesterday. He suffered a severe shell wound in the right side of the abdomen. He has been overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment since 1939. His father is in the Veterans' Guard at Windsor and two brothers are also serving in Italy.

Fades Within

Capt. D. F. Rowland, padre of the Irish Regiment of Canada, has written Mr. and Mrs. Dan McKenzie, Bloomfield, to express the sympathy of the regiment in the death of Pte. Harry McKenzie. We have lost a good soldier and a gallant comrade, he stated.

On the afternoon of April 21, we buried Harry in the area of Casino in a small Italian graveyard which is located in an olive grove on the side of a mountain. A suitable inscribed cross was erected, the padre wrote. The funeral was attended by the Canadian Padre Officer, Second-In-Command and men of Harry's company.

Pte. McKenzie's wife resides at Trenton. He spent all his life previous to enlistment in Bloomfield community.

The six-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Williams suffered a fracture of the skull when she fell from her mother's arms. She is making a good recovery at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dustin. Mrs. Williams was carrying the child down stairs and holding the hand of her little son at the same time. She lost her balance and the baby fell on the steps.

Among the soldiers who received decorations at the investiture at Queen's Park last weekend was Major Hamilton McLean who was awarded the D.S.O. in the New Year Honour list. This was in connection with his work as engineer on the Ogoki Dam project in Northland. Major McLean is the son of the late Judge N. H. McLean, Picton.

Prince Edward County escaped the storm which struck several Ontario cities on Tuesday night. Only a light rain fell here yesterday morning and some wind did not even receive the shower. Rain is badly needed for the millions of tomato plants now in the fields, and for fall grains.

Mrs. Geral Kinney has received word that her son Sgt. George Kinney is back in England after several months' service with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dawe yesterday received a cable from their daughter, Nursing Sister Lillian Dawe, in England, stating she is well.

Marshall Brunnell who has been visiting at Wartime Corners school near Picton, has accepted a position on the staff of the public school at Kingston.

Inspection of Picton Collegiate cadets took place this afternoon with district Cadet Officer, Capt. Holmes as inspecting officer.

Arthur Ostrander, who has been an instructor at Deep Brook, N.S., arrived yesterday to spend leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Ostrander. When he returns to the east coast, he will go to sea.

Holiday Enquiries 5 Times Greater Than In 1939

Acceleration of the fame of vacation possibilities of Prince Edward County, Ontario through the medium of newspaper advertising, and "satisfied customers" is evidenced in the fact that the Belleville Chamber of Commerce has received to date inquiries for holiday accommodation amounting to five times as many as those received in 1939.

Naturally interested in the tourist potential of the district, Chamber of Commerce Manager, J. C. Gilchrist has issued a note of disappointment in the fact that not nearly sufficient accommodation can be supplied for the potential vacationists.

"Some of them want cottages; other lodge and hotel accommodation adjacent to fishing, swimming and golfing spots. The great problem is to find it for them".

The greater majority of the inquiries come from the larger centres of Montreal and Toronto with an incoming from other distances.

Americans asking for accommodation are also numerous, though very few in comparison to the "good old days" when they used to drive up in a procession of driving up to a gas station and uttering the familiar "fill 'er up".

The gasoline question is undoubtedly the biggest factor of American tourist travel despite the efforts of the Ontario Government has increased slightly the amount of gasoline used by some certain holiday-makers consumption.

Last year, the twelve gallons issued to across-the-border tourists would cover them for a short distance north of the international boundary, and twenty-four additional gallons that is not of much benefit inasmuch as tourist accommodation concerned, especially with some of the large automobiles used by some of the tourists.

Cest la guerre.

Allied Soldiers Learn to Distinguish German Commands

London, June 2, (AP)—Commands in guttural German were heard today as truce observers of Nazi weapons on English soil today began a study of the words of command nor a parody on Hitler's crowing dreams.

Instructed the troops were Allied soldiers, learning against the day of invasion how to distinguish one German command from another and how to meet fast by close range, and how to put enemy weapons to use in emergencies.

FEMALE MONGREL DOG CONFINED IN POUND

Ottawa, June 3—(CP)—Hot weather and slow progress in the Commons have started a rumor that the capital about a possible summer adjournment and it is the government circle that parliament may be dissolved probably late in August or with a general election in the fall.

Mrs. Gerald Kinney has received word that her son Sgt. George Kinney is back in England after several months' service with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dawe yesterday received a cable from their daughter, Nursing Sister Lillian Dawe, in England, stating she is well.

Marshall Brunnell who has been visiting at Wartime Corners school near Picton, has accepted a position on the staff of the public school at Kingston.

$115,500,000 Likely To Be Paid In Subsidies During 1944, Critics Of Policy Are Silent

By JARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 3—(CP)—The Federal government estimates it will pay out $115,500,000 in subsidies during the current year to help keep down the cost of living in Canada, Finance Minister Ilsley's cautious statement to Finance Minister Ilsley, naturally interested in the Commons.

An estimated $30,000,000 more than last year would be spent by the Prices Stability Corporation, a unit of the Prices Board set up to help in the task of keeping the cost of living on an even keel.

The Corporation anticipated expenditure of $140,000,000 in subsidies, trading losses and administrative expenses, Mr. Abbott said. Domestic subsidies, he added, totalled $90,000,000 consumers' subsidy on milk, which were expected to total $43,500,000. Import subsidies were expected to total $50,000,000.

Mr. Abbott gave the figures before certain phases of the government's defence of its subsidy policy in opposition members during resumed study of the Finance Department's war appropriation estimates.

Nominations for constituencies was preceded by several announcements. Speaker J. A. Glen announced Mr. Abbott's resignation from the C.C. Douglas (CCF — Weyburn), who said this will be filled by a by-election general election June 15.

Allowance.

Mr. Abbott Macdonald said the matter of increasing the clothing allowance to discharged service personnel was under consideration.

Some criticism of the government's subsidy policy came from T. L. Church (PC-Toronto-Broadview) who said the country remained high despite all the money being paid in subsidies. The government should quit subsidies, he said, merely subsidizing low-cost homes and the delivery.

H. H. Hatfield (PC-Victoria-Carleton) said $0 per cent of the $600,000 paid in subsidies on potatoes last year was paid without justification.

Expenditure of about $100,000 to $200,000 on new potatoes imported prior to last June 10 was justified because potatoes were in short supply at that time. However, after June 10 any amount of potatoes could have been obtained.

Mr. Abbott said when the government decided to pay the subsidy there was a real shortage of potatoes in Canada. The subsidy was first applied to imported potatoes and later was extended to the domestic crop. The government expected the potato shortage to continue for some time but shortly after inauguration of the subsidy supplies began arriving on the markets. Shortly after the subsidy began now, the government realized the payment of the subsidy was not necessary, but the form of words could not be foreseen at the time.

Mr. Hatfield said the subsidy was paid when prices went up, but was not paid when prices went down. This was tackling the problem in reverse.

Mr. Abbott said the subsidy was paid to permit the consumers to buy potatoes at the ceiling prices. Potatoes imported from the United States could not have been sold at ceiling prices if the subsidy had not been paid.

Several opposition members urged that the government make public the report of the corporation's investigators who investigated payments of the potato subsidy, but Mr. Abbott said the report was not in such type as could be made which should be procurable. It was not proper to make public report of an investigation to a government is confused.

Act Investigation Report in Detail.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative, Leeds, Leader, argued that the House be given the report in detail. He said a democratic principle must not be extended to the point investigation might be concealed.

Mr. Hatfield said it appeared as if some of the Nova Scotia had a monopoly on subsidies. Some 17 or 18 other provinces had received the subsidy.

Mr. Abbott said the subsidy had been hard to administer because of the fluctuations in the market prices of potatoes. The subsidy was only paid under certain conditions, and it was found that false claims for subsidies had been improperly filed and improperly paid. He said he believed all efforts had been made for the return of the subsidies and that the procedure, if the amount was not paid voluntarily, "appropriate action would be taken.

L. P. (Pacaud (L—Bellechasse) said the corporation was doing something to help the Quebec farmers of Canadian raw fodder because who have been forced to close their doors or enter the black market because of being "squeezed" between the price charged by tobacco growers and the ceiling.

Mr. Abbott said the case of the packers was under consideration and he expected a decision to be made known in a few days.

The War Today— Attitude of Allied Nations In Regard to Spanish Government

* By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

Prime Minister Churchill's unexpected pronouncement of "kindly words about Spain" is causing puzzlement, not unmixed with consternation, in the United States.

Pro-Nazi Spain continues to give material assistance to Hitler which to wage war against the Allies. Her position is not identical with that of some pro-Allied neutrals which have been forced to serve the German tyrant. The reason for this problem which is likely to get hotter before it cools.

The average American's reaction to the Spanish scene to be controlled mainly by the fact that the Allies are about to undertake the greatest and most hazardous amphibious invasion of history.

Churchill's Words.

Mr. Churchill advanced the thesis that Spain had contributed to the United Nations cause, among other ways by enabling Nazi pressure to take over Gibraltar and close the straits, and by ignoring the huge Allied preparations close to the Spanish coast for the invasion of France. Thus Spain made backhanded amends for some of her irregularities towards the Allies.

There are many reasons why Britain should want to win Spain over. Mr. Churchill named, several, including the hope that she will be a strong influence for the peace of that the Mediterranean after the war". At another point he said:—

"I look forward to increasingly good relations with Spain and extremely fruitful trade between Spain and the United States, which I trust will grow during war and expand after peace".

Roosevelt's Comment.

The United States wants friendship with Spain, too, but her viewpoint appears somewhat different. Despite Mr. Churchill's speech, President Roosevelt later expressed the opinion that Spain's shipments of supplies to Germany have not yet been reduced enough.

It strikes me that the average man, in considering the Spanish attitude, is likely to demand first an answer to two questions:

1.—Does Spain's shipment of supplies to Germany mean loss of life to Allied soldiers?

2.—Is it possible that these supplies will prolong the conflict, thereby causing further death and destruction, and wasting of the resources of many nations?

The answers to these queries are so obviously in the affirmative that they need no elucidation. With these before him, the average man is inclined not to give a tinker's damn about Spain's status.

He believes the Allies are powerful enough to dictate, and to recognize that it pays to be good. He thinks we have the right to do that.

Reports reaching here from Algiers reported that the French leader is said to be seeking a guarantee that any agreement reached in London would not be called into question on the demand of a third power. This was regarded as aimed at the United States' intention not to participate in the London talks.

The Daily Mail editorially said the British refusal to recognize the committee of national liberation was in deference to United States wishes. The paper added that with the whole Allied cause at stake this summer the time has come when we feel entitled to ask for a clear understanding between Washington and Algiers and to ask the United States to announce its objections to the committee.

One report in London, which lacked official confirmation, said that de Gaulle is planning to submit to the Allies a mandate from the representatives of all political parties, factions and underground organizations inside France, authorizing him to negotiate as leader of a provisional government. There was reported to be a possibility that the mandate would be announced in Algiers to coincide with de Gaulle's arrival here.

Says Hesitancy May Cost Full Use French Resistance

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 3—(CP Cable)—The problem of Anglo-American relations with Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the French Committee of National Liberation which he heads came to the fore today amid blunt hints from Algiers that continued hesitancy in recognizing the committee as a tentative government of France might cost Allied invasion armies the full aid of the French resistance movement.

It was indicated also that de Gaulle's visit to London for personal consultations at the invitation of Prime Minister Churchill may be postponed.

FARM IMPLEMENT QUOTA INCREASE

Quota for Year Beginning July 1st Will be 100 P. C. of 1940-41 Average

Toronto, June 3 — (CP) — Supplies of farm implements will be increased in the year beginning July 1 and greater quotas of repair parts also will be made available to Canadian farmers, it was announced last night.

The announcement of the increases was made here by J. A. Carroll, chairman of the Departmental Implement Committee of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, to a meeting of county and district agricultural representatives in Ontario, shortly before Douglas Abbott, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Ilsley, revealed the facts in the House of Commons at Ottawa.

Mr. Carroll said that whereas the 1941 quota was 25 per cent of 1941 sales and the 1944 quota was 92 per cent of the 1940-41 average, the quota for the coming year would be 100 per cent of the 1940-41 average.

He told representatives that harvesting manufacture was 50 per cent ahead of 1941 but metal parts were needed.

Protective measures to retard costly soil erosion were urgently needed and advised survey to prepare for after the war was needed.

Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of the Dominion experimental farms system, told delegates.

Tito Says Germans Launch Offensive Against Partisans

London, June 3—(CP)—The Germans, apparently alarmed 'at the consequences of the situation in Yugoslavia and the growing strength of the Partisan army, have launched a large-scale offensive against liberated territory, Marshal Tito declared today.

A communique broadcast from his headquarters said the offensive was begun several days ago in the Bosnia Bosnia with more than three Nazi divisions participating.

Airborne troops as well as infantry and armored units are being employed by the Germans, the Partisan said. It declared that in one sector Partisans had captured a glider and wiped out a number of airborne troops.

Japanese Mass 280,000 Troops For New Drives

By SPENCER MOOSA
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Chungking, June 3 (AP) — The Japanese have amassed 280,000 troops in the Hankow and Canton areas for a smashing drive aimed not only at the conquest of the 1,000-mile Canton-Hankow railway but to prepare for new blows elsewhere in China, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Tseng, an army spokesman, declared today.

There are 210,000 in the Hankow area and 70,000 in the Canton area, he asserted with a force of only 40,000 hitherto employed, Gen. Tseng said.

Gen. Tseng asserted the Japanese are carrying out a new strategy of being on the defensive everywhere except in china.

"As the Allies apply greater pressure against Japan, Japan will press greater pressure against China," he said.

The Japanese are massing troops on the Indo China-Yunnan border, building a motor highway between Hanoi and the frontier town of Lookay, 180 airline miles northwest of Hanoi and constructing a big air base near the border, Gen. Tseng said.

Chinese troops have partially overrun strongly-defended Japanese positions around Paichaikungfang in the Salween front in Yunnan Province and bitter fighting for that town north of the Burma Road is continuing, a Chinese communique said today.

Allies Attack Town From Three Sides

Kandy Ceylon, June 3—(CP-Reuter)—about half of Myitkyina, Japanese North Burma base, is in Allied hands, an announcement from Southeast Asia headquarters said today.

An earlier communique said Chinese and American troops were attacking the town from three sides and scored fresh gains.

The bulletin said the Allied forces were meeting stiff opposition but were inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy.

Diplomats Deny Any Split Over Spanish Question

By C. E. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, June 3 (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, publicly, don't see eye to eye on the Spanish question. But Washington's diplomats hastened to say today there probably are good reasons for the apparent differences of opinion and denied even the thought of a "split" between the Allied war leaders.

The Prime Minister in his House of Commons speech last week spoke, as he said, "kindly words" about Gen. Francisco Franco's Fascist Spain, expressing gratitude to Franco for not permitting the Germans to attack Gibraltar, nor attempting to do so himself when Britain was hard put elsewhere. This week, the president at a press conference said, among other things, that Spain's conduct continues "unsatisfactory."

Viewing these differing public expressions of president and Prime Minister, some United States editorial writers avidly read signs of a Churchill-Roosevelt split, that the Grand Alliance was breaking up. But the opinion among diplomats here is that both leaders had good reasons for their comments and that they have complete understanding.

The Belgian foreign minister, Paul Henri Spaak, sharing the terrible and immediate responsibility for launching the liberating Allied armies against German-held Europe, has good reason for keeping a potential friendly neighbor at least quiescent at this critical time.

Mr. Roosevelt, sharing the responsibility with the Prime Minister but far removed from the scene of battle, with domestic political considerations to influence him, had no alternative but to say as he did when asked a blunt question at his press conference. Questions of the "spot" he was on, the president said, that his comments must be looked upon as a basis for an international incident.

The attitude of the president, expressed under questioning, hardly could have been different in view of his public declaration nearly a year ago: "We will have no truck with Fascism in any way, shape or manner. We will permit no vestige of Fascism to remain."

Considered opinion here is that Mr. Churchill may feel exactly as does the president but he is con-

Allied Airmen Wore Mourning

A Canadian fighter airfield in Britain, June 3 — (CP Cable) — Allied airmen at Sialag Luft III went into mourning after 47 of their fellow prisoners, including six Canadians, were slain by the Germans after a mass escape last March, it became known today when a repatriated prisoner, FO. Foss Boulton of Coleman, Alta., came here.

The 26-year-old flyltire ace showed up at a mess tent, shared by his old Battle of Britain squadron, wearing on his left arm an in-square patch of black cloth with which the prisoners honored the memory of their slain comrades.

Boulton, a German prisoner for a year who was in Stalag Luft III from last Nov. 23 until April 11 when he left to be repatriated, was not among those who escaped. He returned to Britain last week-end in the Swedish exchange ship Gripsholm.

Swimming and Resuscitation

At this season of the year and throughout the long summer parents have reason for much concern about the safety of their children especially of younger years when they are not at home. Springtime and summertime present the attractions of the outdoor life in all their charm and often these are associated with danger as for instance in the lure of open water for children and of playing in the streets of village, town or city. Every report of an accident or mishap to a child causes natural parental anxiety over the welfare of the boys and girls who may be at play.

Water has a powerful appeal for the young, in bathing or playing about lake, or bay, river, stream, creek or pond. There are possibilities of danger in falling into water if one is not able to swim. This indicates how necessary it is that children be taught to realize the need of paying every attention to avoid accident and that they should be taught at the earliest possible age the art of swimming. Swimming is one of the most satisfying exercises known. It makes for health and it arms the youngster against the danger of drowning and naturally too it provides a means of saving lives. To be able to swim is therefore a responsibility that is important. This requirement costs nothing to possess and it adds as stated above to the security and joy of life.

But accidents do happen and will happen. Children and others too often get into water by falling in or in trying to save the life of another. Here is where the need of more training is necessary. If a child or adult is rescued from the water unconscious, immediate resort to resuscitation is imperative. Unfortunately most adults do not know the first thing about the principles of resuscitation, as how to time the movements so as to restore breathing. All but the very young can easily acquire knowledge of the procedure to follow in restoring to consciousness persons who have been rescued from the water in an unconscious state.

It seems reasonable that something concerned should be done to teach the young to be able to protect themselves in the water and also to give them more than rudimentary knowledge of the practice of resuscitation. Children it would appear should at the earliest possible time be taught to be familiar with water and at ease in it and to learn to swim under the care of a competent instructor or the watchful eye of a friend. Swimming is taught in such institutions as the Y.M.C.A.

Loss of life by drowning is one of the most poignant tragedies and yet it is all too common in the spring and summer months. Children and grown-up persons often find themselves in danger in water and if they had the ability to swim in most cases they would be able to save themselves and perhaps others.

The other evening two homes in the Bay of Quinte section, one in Belleville and the other in Amelisburg were bereaved by the loss by drowning of a boy in one instance and in the other by the loss of two brothers, both young boys. In neither case were the boys swimming. In the local instance two boys were playing on a raft in a quarry pond and fell off. One was not recovered until too late for resuscitation by the other was recovered by his father and by the timely aid of firemen who used artificial respiration he was revived and restored to his family. In the other case, two brothers were by a spring, one is reported to have dropped his dinner bucket and to have fallen in, the other brother tried to save him and as a result was himself a victim as he fell in. The entire community sorrows with the two homes so suddenly and tragically bereaved.

The schools have done a good work in warning children of the dangers of the traffic on streets and highways. Attention in this respect has had its results in getting pupils to stop and look before crossing streets and roads and the time that has been taken for this instruction has therefore brought ample rewards.

The schools can do a great deal in warning their tender charges of the risks that attend playing near water or in places of danger. They can teach the use of the accepted method of resuscitation of persons who have been immersed in water. The boys and girls would show great keenness in acquiring this knowledge or skill which along with ability to swim would make life safer for them and, since safer, more enjoyable. Knowledge of practical things should be one of the aims of education from the earliest years. Learning to swim and the art of resuscitation ought to be one of the "musts" in the curriculum of education.

Wanted—Auxiliary Cat Corps

(Montreal Herald)

From an R.C.A.F. station in Newfoundland authorities at Halifax report a frantic call for cats.

Specifically, the junior service wants ten female cats to protect its planes and appurtenances against voracious Newfoundland rats who defy human guards to feast on fighters and banquet on bombers.

Halifax, we understaid, is hastily rounding up the required felines, who will be rushed by plane to the scene of their future service.

There already playing important war service roles as ratters at local airports.

This latest call suggests the need for an accredited feline branch of the service, corresponding to the Canine Auxiliary of the U. S. Army.

Why should our Canadian cats serve without recognition, uniforms or service stripes?

Talk to me not of plastics; though their wonders may be rife
'Tis timber holds the secret of the truly steadfast life.

Salute, salute with fife and flute on History's turning page
The impenetrable glories of the New or Wooden Age!

The wooden car shall roam afar where-ever man requires,
And the wooden train on wooden rails shall roar across the shires;
Tougher than ferro-concrete shall arise our wooden huts,
Four-square and clamped by wooden bolts and likewise wooden nuts.

And it may be that the wooden nut is the one that best befits
A people hurled in a wooden world with wooden weapons and wits.
Aye, best of all to face the call as the problems round us reel
The wooden head re-thickened till its tough as tempered steel.

Bulldozer Goes to War

(St. Louis Star-Times)

Some day this war's aging veterans will be asked by their grandchildren what part they had in it. A considerable number will reply, "I drove a bulldozer." They can say it proudly, for this peacetime behemoth is playing an indispensable role.

Normally used for road grading and levelling sites for real estate developments, it is a factor in the rapid creation of landing strips so vital to the land-based aerial warfare in the Pacific. No doubt, battalions of bulldozers will rumble out of landing barges when the invasion of Europe is under way.

After the war the bulldozer will merit a place alongside the cannon on courthouse lawns.

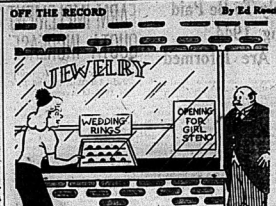
MIRTH



In laughter, pain can be forgot.
In laughter, vanishes despair.
The laughing lad remembers not
An hour ago he stood to care.
It shortens hours, that would be long,
When lonely men can share a song.

They've tragedy enough to face
Who look on death from day to day.
At best it is a dismal place
Where swamp and jungle bar the way.
So when they're granted time to rest,
Give them the joy of song and jest.

They live the tales that will be told
When peace has found the world again.
But now they need the songs of old
And all the jokes of merry men.
The good for every fighting man
To set him laughing if you can.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By R. L. G.

Hats were decided to William Wallace of Prescott, for his speech-making on the occasion of the inauguration of a new railroad in 1854. With the coming of the railway, Mr. Wallace felt, stage-coach farther business fading out of existence, but, being a philosopher and humorist he could see a silver lining: "I know why you have called upon me for a speech—it is to meet the feelings; for you know I get my living by talking and you think by my taking the RIT out of my mouth at the same time so you take it out of my business entirely. You are comparing in your minds the present time with the past when you had to carry a RAIL, instead of riding one, in order to help my coaches out of the mud. But after all I am rejoiced to see old things passing away and conditions becoming WELLER."

The stage-coaches bowled along over many hundred highways. During the forties and fifties there was a great deal of travel in Upper Canada. Though highly regarded at the time, they fell into disfavor except as a temporary expedient. Variations in the quality of wood and condition of the roadbed forced many costly repairs, particularly in the years done by statutory work. Lumber was inexpensive, accordingly it became the three-inch planks. It was used in the following manner, according to Smith: "The whole breadth of the clearing through the forest is about sixty feet, the road only feet wide, the ditches on each side are eight feet wide and four feet deep at bottom, and three feet deep from the crown of the road. In this gutway, which is the travelling for roughshod horses only the ditches are five rows of sleepers 4 x 6 inches laid in the bottom, and the plank laid down on each side of them. Three-inch plank, the breadth of road, is laid on the sleepers and secured to them by pins or trunnels, and a half inches long by three-eights of an inch square. The road is graded up on an ascent only to exceed two and a half degrees..."

Britain Had Close Call.

"It was a very close call that Great Britain had," he continued. "It was a very close call that Australia had. But I think we have a little less there, and the result has been more efficient."

The British Commonwealth Ministers had met to help each other devise formulas and make arrangements, "so that in a world where none of its strong energies stand alone we shall discover how and by which means we can help each other and for each other."

War was the worst evil which could befall nations. Upon the great statesmen there fell the heavy responsibility of making clear that the association of wartime should be continued as that statesmanship such as Hitler and his collaborators had forced on the world should be prevented.

The enemy threw fierce artillery barrages against the Canadians and Americans who used anti-aircraft guns at low elevation, but some gains were made.

The Germans were said still to be fighting fiercely to throw back into the defence along the 25-mile line from Valmontone to the sea. Parachute troops have been identified in the Velletri area, from where the Nazis are said to be using such non-combatant forces as conscript butlers and bandtenders.

JEWISH BAPTISM

Baptism of converts to water is ing or rebirth preparatory to entrance into the Kingdom of God or the Messianic proselytism as being nigh at hand.

The ancient Jewish rite known as Jewish baptism or proselyte baptism naturally bears a striking similarity to Christian baptism, of which it is undoubtedly the forerunner, but it differs in significance.

When a pagan became a convert to Judaism he was required, after a submission to the ceremonial rite of circumcision, to go through a purificatory washing, which symbolized the removal of all pagan impurity.

Although baptism as it is understood by Christians is not practiced by the Jews today, Orthodox Jews still require the purificatory washings when Gentiles become converts to Judaism.

Among Judaism it is circumcision rather than the rite of baptism which corresponds to the Christian baptism as a symbol of conversion.

Miss Mabel Sword, bride-to-be, was the guest of honor at a delightful shower on Monday night, arranged by Misses Mary and Margaret Aman, Highland Ave. The first part of the evening was spent in playing cards after which Mabel had to guess for her treasure—gifts from clues hidden in a pretty decorated basket suspended from the ceiling. Hues of pink and white formed the color scheme for all phases of the party. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses. In a few well chosen words, the bride-elect thanked everyone for the very fine evening.

WEDDINGS

MILLER—RUSSELL

Bancroft. — In All Saints' Anglican Church, Peterborough, on Wednesday, May 24, Rev. Mr. Fryer, united in marriage, Thelma Madella Russell, daughter of the late Mr. Russell and Mrs. Russell, of Bancroft, and Edward Miller, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Miller, Tyrone, England.

The bride chose a gown of pale fawn sheer and she carried a bouquet of red roses. The bridesmaid, sister of the bride, Miss Ruth Russell, was gowned in yellow and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groomsman was Mr. Irwin Miller, brother of the bridegroom. A reception was held at 362 George Street, following which the bride and groom left by train for Toronto.

HOLMES—GODFREY

Lieutenant Betty Godfrey, formerly stationed at Cheek Point, and Captain Gordon Holmes of The Salvation Army, Trenton, were recently married in The Salvation Army Lisgar Street Citadel, by Lieut.-Colonel R. Spooner, Divisional Commander, officiated, assisted by Lieut.-Colonel N. C. Hicks, Major C. Sim and Adjutant F. Watkin, with L.A.C. Watkin, A.T.C.M., at the organ. Mrs. Frank Moulton was the soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore the regulation Salvation Army uniform. The bridal bouquet was of American roses. Miss Dorothea Alderman and Wren Miss Hilliard, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids, having Colonial bouquets of pink roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Captain B. Aston, of Ridgetown, attended the groom and the ushers were Lieutenant J. Craig and Captain A. Rice.

The reception was held in the Junior Hall, where telegrams of congratulations and best wishes were read.

The bride and groom left for a short wedding trip to Buffalo, N.Y., and London, Ont., later returning to take up residence in Trenton, and to be guests at a reception in the Citadel.

MILGATE—IVATT

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Baltimore, on Saturday, May 27, Rev. Young Honey officiating, when Miss Bessie Ivatt, of Centreton, became the bride of James Milgate, R.C.A.F., of Mountain View.

The bride wore a white sheer floor-length gown over white taffeta with shoulder-length veil held in place with forget-me-nots. She carried pink and white carnations.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Ivatt, who wore a turquoise blue floor-length dress over taffeta with matching headdress and shoulder-length veil. She carried sweetpeas. The groom was supported by his cousin, Albert Short, of Oshawa.

A reception and buffet luncheon was held at the home of the bride in Centreton. The bride's mother received wearing a rose colored flowered crest with corsage of sweetpeas. She was assisted by the groom's sister, Mrs. Ernest Short, of Oshawa, wearing a turquoise grey dress with corsage of sweetpeas. The rooms were decorated in pink and white, a three-tier wedding cake centring the table. Miss Doris Ivatt and Miss Merle Blodgett served.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a motor trip to Niagara Falls and points west, the bride wearing a brown tailored suit with matching accessories.

PRESENTATION

A very enjoyable time was spent on Friday night of last week when 178 friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Rose, 5th Concession of Tyendinaga, to offer their congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rose, (nee Ruth Livingston), who were recently married.

The early hours of the evening were passed in dancing, music being provided by the Powers' orchestra of Read. At midnight, the bride and groom were presented with a purse followed by an address read by Mrs. Lusella Hubble. It was signed on behalf of their many friends by John Huffman and Gerald Swan. Earl and Ruth are both thinking all present and invited everyone to visit them in their new home. Refreshments were served after which dancing was resumed.

ASSEMBLY

Rostic Reiffe Reassembly Rendered

This week, the assembly was provided by a play enacted by members of XIIIB under the direction of Miss Merry. The scene of this production entitled "Trosseo Alley". Is laid in the hills of South Carolina, and the characters assembled seem to be a pointed burlesque of a certain play with a similar name.

There is very little plot, and the characters come and go at will, except for two dilapidated gentlemen who remain nailed to the floor during the entire play. The cast is as follows: Clem and Jeeters, (the two aforementioned gentlemen), are portrayed by Jack Muirhead and Bill Rowe. The role of Mrs. Jeeters, a strong-willed, gossipy mountain woman, is enacted by Nancy Shuster, while that of her neighbour, the equally gossipy wife of our friend Clem, is portrayed by Jean Wright. Then there is the part of Hensey, Clem's son, and with all the realistic fervour of none other than Sylvester Cavanagh; Jeeter's daughter, Samantha, profoundly interpreted by Barbara Bews; (dude-boy) Cousin Chatterbell, Winnie Massey; the first surveyor acted by Clement Grant Locke, and last, but by means least, the surveyor's assistant, Edward McCormick, who appears momentarily bathed in limelight, let paint and spotlight, naturally. The stage-job of sound effects was done by Douglas Bateman. Special praise is due to Miss Merry, who erected the set for this play on very short notice and added in no small way ot it's success.

The four melodorous music masters of B. C. I. V. S. made an appearance on the stage again to entertain the members of form XIIIB read the various parts, with the exception of two—those of the narrator and Winston Churchill—which were enacted by Kaye Marshall and Lyall McInnis.

The program took the form of an assurance that the British Empire will never collapse, and showed how the many ordeals it has suffered have only served to strengthen the invisible ties which bind the members of this great team of free nations.

The speakers and their parts were varied, and the audience heard soldiers, citizens and politicians present prose and poetry, punctuated from time to time by suitable numbers from the band.

At intervals throughout the story, the voices of unseen actors filled the hall to add an air of reality.

The play closed with an interpretation of the last speeches of King George VI in which he prayed for a lovering triumph followed by a permanent peace,

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

The June meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S., was held in the church parlours on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. L. Reid was in the chair, and gave some helpful points, gleaned from the Presbyterial. During the business session, Mrs. Hubbs, the Supply Secretary, read a letter of thanks sent from Oxford House, Manitoba, where many articles of the sale were sent. Mrs. Dobb, the group leader, was in charge of the program, the subject being "Children and Youth Leaders of To-morrow". She was assisted by Mrs. Leavens with a paper on "Home-Training", Mrs. Oliphant dealt with Boys' programs and boys' problems and Mrs. Denyes on "What is to be done With the Girls". Mrs. Dobbs introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Hubble of Aiken's, who spoke on "Leaders of To-morrow", stressing the great value of women leaders, the church calling for young women to help work in Mission Fields, Girls' Camps and Social Work. Mrs. Hubble pointed out that no woman needed to be idle. There was work for all. Mothers in the home needed to train their children for Christ and to win and influence other children. At the close of Mrs. Hubble's address, Mrs. Dobbs read the report of the Social Hour as given by Mrs. Chitambs, of India, when she was in Canada. Mrs. Stoneberg gave her Temperance address using a Bible story. The collection for the afternoon was received by Mrs. Oliphant and Mrs. Denyes. The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

HAIR MODES FOR CHILDREN

Age, and have ideas of their own. Beauticians report that a considerable percentage of their permanent waving business comes from the demands of the small-fry to be ringletted.

Time was when it was considered plain silly, if not idiotic, to submit a small-child's head to the sizzling mockery that produces the "permanent" wave. But why? It is no ordeal nowadays, and almost every feminine had its experienced. If mama has waves, and big sister too, why not little Susie?

The cherub cut—about four inches long, and arranged in pert curls—is ideal for a small girl. The hair is easily shampooed. The ends can be done in pin curls or arranged on metal waves. When dried, they are brushed over the finger, or fluffed out to fly in the breeze. Brushed straight back, front and sides, confined with a ribbon, the short trim forms a lovely nimbus for the face of the little girl.

The longer cut is becoming if the little girl is thin, her neck reader; then the hair should be full at the nape line, curls loose and flowing. Soft bangs, with hair swept away and held with ribbon, are also becoming to the child with a long, thin face.

When such a mode for a little girl, care must be taken that she not be transformed into a sophisticated picture of her mother. That is why the semi-pomp is not suitable for children under twelve.

A smart style that suits the wee girl is the bobbed effect—shoulder length—tomboy inclinations—shows a diamond parting on the left side, a semi-windblown effect with curls, a semi-straight bang, and the fluffy ringlets. Little-year-olds who have reached the age when they can secure their tresses handsomely, and enjoy doing it. Keeping the hair-suite hals in prime condition—well-brushed, prettily arranged—should be part of a youngster's daily duties.

Pride inappearance cannot start too soon: it need not develop into vanity—indeed, it seldom does.

St. Louis Browns Lose To Senators And Yankees to Tigers Yet Brownies Take Over First Place in American

Cardinals Lengthen Their Lead in National by Defeating Boston

GIANTS EDGE CUBS

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

It's only five games from top to bottom of the American League scale today as St. Louis Browns celebrate their latest feat of "losing" themselves into first place.

When the Brownies were slaughtered yesterday by Washington, 11-3, as New York Yankees were squeezed out by Detroit, 4-3 in 10 innings, Lake Sewell's crew took over the lead by two slender percentage points. They saw won four and lost three more than the champions.

Steve Orlicli repeated with Paul Trout and Hal Newhouser in relief roles to shade the New Yorkers.

Stan Spence slammed six hits in six times at bat to tie the modern record held by Jessie Cesnic Myatt and 23 others held a Washington roster. Spence batted .400 with 30 hits.

George Mkrkvich banged a three-run homer in the ninth to give Boston a 7-6 victory over Cleveland.

Johnny Barrett was the whole show as Pittsburgh topped Brooklyn 2-1 for Rip Sewell's seventh triumph. Barrett's eighth-inning round-tripper won the game and his catch of Lodo Olmo's long drive in the ninth saved it.

St. Louis Cardinals lengthened their National lead to five games by downing Boston 4-3, while Cincinnati bowed to the Phillies, 5-7. Don Munger joined mate Max Lanier in the six-win class but had to be relieved by Fred Schmidt after glorifying a finger trying to stop a liner.

Danny Gardella slammed his 4th homer in the seventh, tieing off a night game to score behind pitcher Bill Voiselle with the two runs of the New York Giants 5-3 edge over Chicago.

Late Sir Frederick Wall Served Thirty Years as Secretary

KNIGHTED IN 1930

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 3 (CP) — Death of Sir Frederick Wall, whose enthusiasm and executive ability nearly football earned him a knighthood brought editorial tributes today from newspapers throughout Britain. He died at his home in Bournemouth, at 85 following a lengthy illness.

Sir Frederick's name was stamped indelibly in the annals of sport from 1906 to 1934 when he served as secretary of the Football Association, soccer's ruling body. Under his direction, the game became affiliated with the F. A. rose from 1,000 to 7,000.

In 1920 a testimonial fund was started for Wall, then secretary, in recognize of the Prince of Wales and he was knighted the following year. On his retirement Sir Frederick received a grant of $40,000 from the F. A. and subscriptions from others.

A sports lover all his life, Sir Frederick kept close to the now-defunct London Rangers before entering the first English Club final during his official capacity was at Crystal Palace in 1906 when 80,000 persons swarmed by train and bus to Crystal Palace, suburban Sydenham to catch occasional glimpses of Everton and Newcastle United. Everton won. Next Saturday and Wolverhampton. Ground banking wasn't done in those days and Sir Frederick's job, "The Arranged Royal Visit"

Sir Frederick arranged King George V's visit to a Cup Final, also to appear at Wembley for the last was at Wembley in 1924 with a crowd of 94,000.

Wembley, a great hubbub during Sir Frederick's first year of office as secretary. Handling of all matches stolen — from a Birmingham shop window stored in a London warehouse. Nowadays, the Cup is a heavily-insured item, mostly confined to safes.

Footballers were only just getting out of the Dark Ages when Sir Frederick's reign began. They turned out looking like coal-miners in white "longs". Teams carried their own referee financially at the most important part of the game took place before the start — decided whether the toss of a coin to de-cide.

Sir Frederick cleaned up that situation by forming the Referees' Association. Handling of all matches then was placed on an impartial basis.

Tall and upright and for many years affecting a brightly-polished silk hat, Sir Frederick handled him-self with dignity and tact. He had time for any true seeker of foot-ballership information. Any-one with a problem was told to "go and see Wall."

When Sir Frederick became, secretary the assets of the F. A. were but a few thousand dollars. Today's balance sheet shows $540,000.

Toronto Leafs Swamp Buffalo Bisons by 11 to 1 Count

LEAFS STILL SECOND

By the Associated Press

The return of Lefty Gerald Mose and a six mighty happy about it too. For Howard Moss, who roams the outfield pastures for the Buffalo Orioles, has proved a pleasant surprise to the southpaw.

He was received in a swap with Jersey City for Catcher Bob Becker early this year, but the deal was called off when Becker was accepted by the army. Then the little Cuban sold Moss outright to the Orioles, and yesterday's 21-hit 13-4 victory over Newark, their sixth straight, Moss hit a home run, triple and double and drove in four runs and scored four himself. The homer was his fourth in 10 days.

The victory placed the Orioles only a half-game behind second-place Toronto and 1½ games from the league-leading Jersey City Giants.

Jersey City maintained its lead by blasting the Syracuse Chiefs, 7-0, behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike Mellin. It was the Chiefs' ninth straight loss, a losing streak which has dropped them from first place to seventh.

Led by Jim Tyack, who hit a homer with the bases full, Toronto swamped Buffalo 11-1. Johnny Zontini and Red Kress also hit three-run homers for the Leafs. Woody Crowson held the Bisons to six hits. Little Toronto gathered 15 off three Buffalo hurlers.

Rochester and Montreal were not scheduled.

AUSSIE BETTING BOOM

Sydney, Australia — (CP) — A race betting boom, which throughout Australia, reached a new peak during the Easter holiday week-end when approximately $15,750,000 was placed either with bookmakers or totalisators. The turnover is nearly five times that of normal pre-war aggregates. The betting surge, with £1,000 wagers common, is attributed to high wagers and reduced spending opportunities in other spheres.

Wide Variety of Sports Equipment To Be Supplied To Armed Services

By the Canadian Press

Provision for a wide variety of sports equipment for men of the armed services stationed at many Ontario centres was made at a conference meeting of sports committee of the citizens committee for the troops in training.

The equipment includes softball equipment, tennis balls, soccer outfits, fishing tackle and numerous other lines. It will be supplied as quickly as possible.

Men stationed at training ships, Air Force stations and Military Camps as far afield as Sault Ste. Marie and Brantford will benefit. The committee aimed southern cities of M. D. No. 2 headquarters of full co-operation with the Army and the Ontario Athletic Commission in the Army track and field meet to be held in July.

At Brooklyn Calvin McLish, the 18-year-old Oklahoma City schoolboy who pitched the first National League victory on Wednesday, passed his physical examination and was accepted by the U. S. Navy. He remains with the Dodgers until called.

The U. S. Army at Boston rejected Al Javery, right-handed pitcher of the Braves who has one of the lowest earned-run averages in the Majors. Javery was found to have varicose veins.

The New York State Athletic Commission has sanctioned the Jimmy Armstrong-Al Davis fight and Mike Jacobs immediately set the date for June 15 at Madison Square Gardens.

In the feature bout on Toronto's weekly Wrestling Show last night Wild Bill Longson and Whipper Billy Watson were both counted out of the ring after 56.35 minutes.

CONNIE HARRIS HURLS 4-HITTER TO DEFEAT TWEED

Alemites Win First Game of Season in Softball Loop 8 to 3

TWO HOMERS

Behind Connie Harris's four-hit pitching the Alemite team opened its season with a fine win in the Belleville Men's Softball League beating Tweed 8 to 3 in the Exhibition Grounds Thursday evening. While Harris was holding Tweed for four one-base bingles Bob Best's Alemites touched "Tree" Curry for two wallops good for seven safeties, including circuit blows by Best and Ellis.

Tweed took an initial inning lead on infield hits and the result of Mr. Meraw's hit, an error and a fielder's choice. Alemite scored four times in the fifth on a base on balls, a single by Harris, an error and a fielder's choice. Alemite scored two more in the sixth on a single by Best, an error and a walk, Hughes hit and a bad error at the plate. Tweed picked up a brace of runs in their half of the eighth after Harris walked two, Curry, Doyle and Jenkinson and an error all crowded into a short space. Doyle and Jenkinson each drove out four base blows to round the circuit in the last half of the ninth to end the fray.

George Jenkinson with a single, a triple and a home run was the big hitter of the night. Harris struck out eight and walked seven while Curry struck out four and passed but two.

Returning

A house agent had a farm on his books which was supposed to be haunted, and to prove rumor wrong he decided to spend a night in the house there for one night.

The following day he was up early and went round to see how the man had fared, but the man was not to be found. On the lawn he discovered the remains of a window sash and shutters, completely wrecked, but of the watchman there was no sign.

Four days later the house agent came across him tramping along a country lane three miles away.

"Hallo, George!" he cried. "Where have you been all this time?"

The man wiped the perspiration from his brow. "Back in Bexley," he replied. "I've been coming back."

(Around our town.)

It wasn't a bad softball game last night when Bob Best's Alemites downed Tweed 8 to 3 with Connie Harris firing four-hit ball. The main excitement was the big noise with the stick getting a single, triple and home run in the line-up. Dickie also hit a round-ripper for the locals. . . . It was Connie Harris' first win in two starts while Charlie Dion's Tweedsters are being content with the spoilsh at softball at the srmovies when the Optical-Corbin "Comedians" take on the Dionites sala. . . It marks the initial appearance of both nines.

Down in Missouri the wrestling dukes resurrected a long-since-forgotten wrestling registration whereby no injuries to fans or wrestlers are sustained by the simple method of allowing the opponent over the top strand of the ring ropes. This ruling was Whipper Billie Watson the world's champion-ship-at-the-box-office York favorite just did that little thing to Bill Longson recently.

Not to be outdone in the resurrection of rules and regulations long since forgotten, Belleville wrestling fans saw an "oldie" foisted on them when Referee Bert Maxwell gave Frank Sexton the official nod over Lou Brown even though Sexton despite the fact neither had gained the odd fall in three. Actually Sexton should have won on submission regulations to prove his point, but what are a few printed pages of rules to a grappler the type of Frank the jokers Kaiser?

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 394

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

The Kibitzer's convention is a sweet hunk of rot. You get from it a nice slice of slam insurance. And in case you are just hanging around, you will find nothing better.

It is merely a group of predetermined signals that is interesting how many aces and kings are held by a pair. The operation of it is simple, efficient, accurate, and dependable.

When a player sees 12 tricks and knows what's trump, if he has two aces and a king, or better, he bids four no-trump. That's the signal for asking partner how many aces and kings he has.

With no aces, partner responds with five clubs; one ace and no kings, five diamonds; one ace and one king, five hearts; one ace and two kings, five spades; one ace and three kings, five no-trump.

With two aces and no kings, partner responds with six clubs; two aces and one king, six diamonds; two aces and two kings, five hearts; two aces and three kings, five spades.

If a player has one or kems his partner has no ace, he may bid five no-trump. That's the signal for asking partner how many kings he has.

With no kings, the response is six clubs; one king, six diamonds; two kings, six hearts; three kings, six spades; four kings, six no-trump.

Then, there are two lists of six-responses. But they should not confuse. Because one list is in response to four no-trump to show aces and kings; the other in response to five no-trump to show kings only.

Get a spot of practice with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠K Q 7 5 4
♥Q 5 4
♦5 4
♣Q 6 4 2

NORTH
♠A J 10 9 8 6
♥A 10 9
♦None
♣K 8 5 4

In due time, north gets around to a bid of four no-trump, South responds, with five clubs to show no aces. So, north bids five no-trump. And south responds with six hearts to show two kings.

The Kibitzer's convention puts the "am" in Slam.

AT THE BELLE

"HENRY ALDRICH—BOY SCOUT"

"Henry Aldrich—Boy Scout" 8th and most pretentious of the famous Paramount comedies with Jimmy Lydon, Charles "Dizzy" Smith, John Litel and Olive Blakeney, is now on the Belle Theatre screen. Joan Mortimer, who made her debut with Jimmy in "Henry Aldrich Haunts a House," again plays the part of Jimmy's girl friend.

"FALCON AND THE CO-ED"

A fashionable school for girls provides the background for most of the exciting action in "The Falcon and the Co-Eds," detective drama featuring Tom Conway as the debonair sleuth. A supporting cast of 100 includes 42 Hollywood beauty winners.

A new Community sing film will be exhibited on the same program. The last complete show starts at 8.25 p. m.

"A GUY NAMED JOE"

All the glories of a glamour wardrobe in one gown. That is the record established by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive designer, Irene, in a frock which Irene Dunne wears in "A GUY Named Joe."

"Miss Dunne has the opportunity to wear but a single dress," Irene explained. "The remainder of the film finds her in aviatrix costume. Because of this we had to concentrate all of our glamour in one design."

Miss Dunne's "wardrobe" thus has the distinction of being the smallest, numerically, ever worn by a major star. The gown is a diaphanous affair of Pacific blue. The consensus of opinion is that Miss Dunne, plus the Irene design, proves a perfect definition of the word "glamour."

Miss Dunne is co-starred with Spencer Tracy in the film coming to the Belle Theatre this weekend. Others in the cast are Van Johnson, Ward Bond, James Gleason, Lionel Barrymore, Barry Nelson and Esther Williams.

The Canadian Paramount News, an M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Batty Baseball" and the second chapter of the year's most thrilling serial "The Phantom" will also be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Cowboy and the Senorita"
(Roy Rogers)

On a recent trip to New York, Roy Rogers, King of the Cowboys, and his famous Palomino horse Trigger, appeared at the Stage Door Canteen. Rogers rode Trigger in through the door much to the delight of the service men and their amazed hostesses.

Rogers and Trigger are currently appearing in their newest musical action picture, "Cowboy and the Senorita" which is showing now at the Capitol Theatre.

"Trigger is a welcome guest anywhere, as his manners are those of a gentleman and a scholar. The educated horse enters into the business of making pictures with zest, and apparently gets as much fun out of chasing the villains, and aiding in saving the heroine as does Rogers.

Dale Evans is the Senorita in the picture, with singing star Mary Lee, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, the Sons of the Pioneers, Dorothy Christy, John Hubbard, Fuzzy Knight.

"The Mystery of the 13th Guest"

There's a world of entertainment in action-packed mystery and suspense lightened by clever touches of comedy—in Monogram's "Mystery of the Thirteenth Guest," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Here is an eerie thriller with all the requisites for a neatly contrived mystery picture—curtains, disappearing bodies, old, deserted rambling houses and hooded killers. But this is no formula mystery. It is a film that maintains a high level of suspense, and clicks solidly because of novel situations and creditable performances.

Leading a strong cast are Dick Purcell and Helen Parrish.

A popular cartoon and the "Mask-ed Marvel" completes the big program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cover Girl"

In writing a review about "Cover Girl" the Columbia technicolor musical which opens Saturday at the McCarthy theatre co-starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly, there seems to be just one sensible thing to do. That is to start singing "Praise the Lord and pass the typewriting ammunition" and then add, "let the superlatives fall where they may." For "Cover Girl" is full of superlatives.

There's glamor and romance. The wonder of love is in it, the brilliance of imagination. It really is the ten best musicals of the year harmonized into one.

To get down to details and start at the beginning, the celluloid itself technicolor, has done some mighty fine things in the past but never has it been more beautiful, never has it seemed to have as much depth of color and perspective, it is a perfect glorification for the lush dream girls and their costumes which have been dreamed up for the sensational background of story, cast, dance and melody.

The story with deft screen play credited to Virginia Van Upp, is all about the life and loves of a cover girl (Rita Hayworth). It is tailored to fit its stars in the proverbial glove; Rita has never been lovelier or had more sparkle and verve in her acting, more exuberance in her dancing.

Kelly is right there aiding and abetting her at every turn of clever plot, amusing situation and dance step. "Cover Girl" definitely establishes him as tops.

But the stars don't have it all their own way. Each member of their supporting cast fits into the proceedings with expert precision and emotion.

Lee Bowman plays a Broadway theatrical producer with all the finesse and cuddly expected from one of that genius. Phil Silvers, as the comedian in Danny Maguire's (Gene Kelly) small night club where Rusty (Rita Hayworth) is a chorine, gives both a comical and human performance. Jinx Falkenburg, as Jinx, the girl who has been photographed probably more than any girl in America is her lovely and natural self. Then there is blonde and glamorous Leslie Brooks who does a no mean job as Maura, a nasty little meanie in the chorus line with Rusty. Otto Kruger, as Coudair the publisher of Vanity Magazine, which selects Rusty as its cover girl, and Eve Arden, as his editor, likewise are standouts. And those 15 lovelies the Cover Girls, selected by the editors of national magazines to represent them in the picture, including Anita Colby, the most famous cover girl of them all, add more than a luscious lustre to the proceedings.

Any mention of Jerome Kern's music has been left to the last with his design. He and Ira Gershwin, who is teamed with this masters of melody as lyrical, most of all, perhaps, raise the superlatives which by this time are running thin off the typewriter. So just let it go with the fact that unless the ears of the audience at "Cover Girl's" first showing deceive them this is the most outstanding score that either or both have ever had a hand in.

Since there doesn't seem to be any superlative-superlative to append to the name of the man who put all the aforementioned superlatives together, there is nothing to do but simply mention his name. It is Charles Vidor, the director.

On reading this review it appears that "Cover Girl" is superlative, it may not seem possible that "Cover Girl" can have all this and Hayworth too. But that's just what it has.

DETROIT TIGER FANS ALL HIT OVER THEIR TEAM

Detroit, June 2 —(AP)—There's no pennant talk just yet, but the mighty-inflammable Detroit baseball public is getting mighty curious about the team that is a fortnight has soared from the American League cellar to 1½ games from first place.

By completing a sweep of a four-game series with the Champion New York Yankees yesterday, the Tigers ran their winning streak to six games and made it 17 victories in 23 starts for a breathless .826 pace.

Yet in the spring the over-age club generally was consigned to the second division. Manager O'Neill is getting enormously satisfactory pitching from his mound staff.

The Tigers got away to a slow start and were lodged in last place until they made their first swing of the east where they won 19 of 24 games. Curiously, they got out of the cellar May 17 by beating ex-teammate Bob Newsom at Philadelphia, and have been climbing ever since.

Win, loss or draw, box office business is always pretty good at Briggs Stadium, and the Tigers have played to nearly 300,000 in 21 home games.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 6.

Forrestall next turned to the rooms of the testator, in which there was nothing startling to be found outside a black-walnut bed uncomfortably suggesting a sideboard, and a bathtub of enormous dimensions.

Finally he flung open a door and announced: "And here I give you the heart of the house, Miss Burton's private library".

It was a large, sunny room with three broad windows set in a shallow arc, a plain, up-to-date desk of the exact centre, and an array of bookshelves, cupboards and glass cabinets taking up all available wall space—the last named filled with the most heterogeneous medley of valuable objects and trash I have ever seen.

"This room tells you more about its dead owner than a written biography could", Forrestall orated, with a gesture toward the cabinets. "You see, his numerous pleasure trips had their useful side. Here's an illustration of what I mean. Something in your line, Professor Esmeralde".

He indicated a row of geological specimens in one of the cases. "He discovered the deposit—accidentally, he says—somewhere in Colombia. Developed it, took a dozen marvelous stones out of it and sold it. At a very good factory figure, I assure you. Then here: this one of his earliest ventures". This time he pointed out a number of brassy Klingford featherweight enamels, exhibited side by side with a few Chinese dishes of ordinary commercial design. "From the same village in North China he found these enamelware—as a gift to his young wife—and these, well, cheap plates. They've made a fortune for him. Not the ornamental, I mean, plates. He'd acquired the exclusive rights for their sale in America, and as you know"—every last store carries them now".

"He didn't leave his eye for the main chance at home when he went entertaining, did he?" Aunt Millie commented.

"He did not", Forrestall agreed with a quick grin. "Moreover, that eye grew more, with practice, discerning, on his last trip—in search of his son—he stumbled on a thing they'd never before. Preston was very secretive about it, but from the few hints he let drop I gather the act that he'd made the discovery of his lifetime, and he had, from doing things stupendous, running into millions".

"Most interesting!" said Professor Stoddard.

"Yes, isn't it? It had something to do with a remote valley—in the jungles of Central America. I think—for which he and his son had searched before, without luck. But Forrestall went on smoothly, "He left a letter explaining what it was and how to get to it. I found the sealed envelope in the left drawer. On the desk here. It was weighted with the stone you see on it now. That's why Robert let it lie. And at the moment, I don't you, Robert?"

Robert said: "Yes, sir", again glumly, and we all crowded to the desk for a look at the packet. For your sake: a good-sized slightly tricky-looking affair, sealed with wax and ominously between an ornate inkwell and the telephone.

"Where'd it come from?" Aunt Millie asked with her funny sniff.

"From the valley, I presume", Forrestall shrugged. "It doesn't look like the work of anybody but them, I'm not a geologist. Perhaps Professor Esmeralde can tell us whether or not there's any sense in keeping it?"

The little Professor produced a pair of glasses, adjusted them on his pudgy nose, bent closely over the object of our curiosity—lifted it—put it down.

"A common fieldstone", he pronounced succinctly. "It must come from Central America or from—around the corner. At any rate, it certainly has no intrinsic value. What did Mr. Burton say about it in the—er—letter he left?"

"I wouldn't know", Forrestall told him coolly. "The letter was sealed and addressed to his son. All I did was put it in the safe".

"In your office, naturally", professor Stoddard supplemented with an approving nod.

"No. In this room, as directed in the will", Forrestall told him, a little weakly. "Everything was to be left in the house. The safe's an old crate a child could open, but it is absolutely fireproof, and as well as my friend and myself but there I'd taken from Dad's desk into my pocket the second thought I also pulled on a pair of heavy driving gloves. The possibility of my finishing it up would be quite a job. And I didn't want to lay hands on it to pieces.

Moving downstairs cautiously. Past the closed kitchen door and through the service entrance. But I was in the clear. I thought to listen to the winds and raced across the grounds, taking the ditch and coping between the gardens in a bend, and making straight for the porch with the window I had manipulated.

The catch was still open. I found to my unspeakable relief, and the sash slid up with less difficulty than I had foreseen.

Climbing my torch—before me I tiptoed across the back parker and the adjoining room, and presently found myself mounting the wide stairs.

And then, for no apparent reason at all, I paused. It happened in a swoop. I hadn't been, this moment, and I was, the next. So that my knees buckled and my feet refused to move, and the flashlight in my hand went out, through no conscious action of my own.

I don't know —ow long I stood there, halfway up the stairs, waiting in the dark for I know not what or probably the startling, but more than half a minute—before I saw a streak of light pass across the wall of the landing above me, and heard the stealthy sound of footsteps.

I pressed close to the wall in an instinctive effort to efface myself. Scarcely daring to breathe, but scarcely as a silent conversation with myself.

"You're a coward and a fool, Kay Westerby! my common sense told the rest of me. "You've come here to find Bruce and have it out with him. And now look at you! Why, Bruce is Mrs. Walking around the house with a flashlight because the electricity turned off. Who else could it be, except Roberts perhaps? If you'd only stayed where you were—"

"Hello there, Bruce. This is Kay. You married me once upon a time. Remember?"

But the rest of me wouldn't obey that command. My voice stuck in my throat, and I just kept standing there. Then there was a light and flittering.

Then the streak of light disappeared and the steps receded and there was the sound of a door opening.

It didn't close again. A deep voice followed.

And then came a scream. It went right through me, down into my toes, it was so dreadful. And the voice instead there, screamed again. Footsteps that were no longer furtive. Then shattered, hurried, tumbled in their frenzied haste—down the stairs—past me.

Then the house resumed the steps. And after a long time a door closed in the distance, with a dull thud.

I don't know why I didn't follow the example of the unknown and flee back to work in less than an hour, and Allan wouldn't come at all.

That meant no one to watch us or ask questions about our movements. The long evening, the impasse of mind, the security of freedom for ever after.

And then, all our beautiful plans went smash. Did not go back to the shipyard. An expected long-distance call from Washington kept him to the house.

It depended on the length of a certain answer whether it would come early or late. And either way I was to wait him. Instead of what he'd intended, and got, on his nerves, I was to keep myself and the cat on Dad's nerves, he has to be entertained.

Which I did, and never suggested them with Gala, and Dad jumped at the idea—and to the phone.

But he put the receiver down shortly, with a very long face.

"Miss Burton isn't feeling well. It seems. Her maid says she's already gone to bed and can't be disturbed", he told us dejectedly. "Poor wench! I do hope that one hasn't sounded call comes through!"

"No. It hasn't", Aunt Millie offered resignedly. "I may not be as good as Gala Burton, but I still can hear".

I almost cried. I was so disappointed. "Then I'll go and turn in, up. Kay, Allan's coming later to report to you, father. We can get them", didn't help much.

Later might be—too late. Roberts might have made his rounds and closed the open window himself.

I felt tears sting my eyelids, no matter how I tried to appear cheerful and sat back to say more with a murmured reference to a book, to dinner, self-protection.

Of course, I was much too keyed-up and miserable to read, and stood at the window, staring out into the night, listening to the rain on the young leaves and watching the light that wouldn't do me any good at all.

It shone faintly through the dimness—straight at me—and then filled the air. Taunting—mocking me.

It was unbearable. The solution of all my troubles was there, within reach—tonight. Tomorrow the window might be dark and Bruce gone. This was my opportunity. And I couldn't take it.

But why couldn't I? Who said I had to drag Aunt Millie along? Or Allan—or anyone?

Almost without volition I put on my raincoat, pulled the book over my head and started out there. I'd taken from Dad's desk into my pocket the second thought I also pulled on a pair of heavy driving gloves. The possibility of my finishing it up would be quite a job. And I didn't want to lay hands on it to pieces.

Moving downstairs cautiously. Past the closed kitchen door and through the service entrance. But I was in the clear. Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating dinner, being a little steak under a bit of oblong, and the telephone rang, and me started to get up to answer it and Dad said, Set down, Benny, I guess he might call me if he got hold of a couple of fight tickets.

And he got up and answered it and came back, saying to me, Benny, it's for you, and I wondered what it must say.

And I said, Hi, who was it? me said, and pop said, That's what it's very often, and I took the phone in my hand and put it to my ear and said, Hi, who was it? me said, and pop said, That's what it's very often, and I took the phone in my hand and put it to my ear and heard a man's voice and he bring up the moment I started to speak, Is it you?

He had the wrong number, I suppose, and I said, and pop said, He heard the wrong voice, more like it, I was getting pop to call Mrs. Wood when he heard my voice he dropped the receiver like a hot potato. Now that's a fine state of things. Who is right bird, anyway? pop said.

How do I know? me asked me me said. Why William Potts, such the unheard of name of napoleon, you ought to be ashamed, she said, and pop said, Well if you can't deny you made a wild dash to answer the phone.

If you dont know the difference between a casual twitch and a wild dash, you'd better look it up in the proper authority, ma said. Well of course such an authority, pop said, must be taking leave of your remaining senses, ma said, and pop said, For P-et Sakes I'm only trying to find out what's going on, and I'm coming home in the bus last night and I laughed when you claimed some drunk was winding at you, didn't you tell me if I cared anything for you I'd show it at least a trace of jelliasy? he said.

Yes, I did, ma said, and I meth this isn't the same thing of all things and, and, she said, and pop laughed all his might and said he had probably been too hasty, and after that I had no trouble for him to take him to the fights, and I was the one on the telephone after all.

West Huntingdon

Melville Donnan Named President Of S S Association

West Huntingdon—The Huntingdon Sunday School Association held its annual convention, June 2nd, at the Methodist Church, Tranquille, Mr. Wesley Farrel, of Montreal, presided over the morning and afternoon sessions.

Members of the St. Andrew's Sunday School had charge of the Worship Service for the morning session and Rev. O. Wager conducting the afternoon worship service. The addresses and discussion topics were given by some of the Christian leaders of the Township, Mrs. Frank Hartley, of Metra, dealt with the subject, "The Home as an Agency of Christian Education". This was followed by Rev. Mr. Rawley, giving an address on "Visitation Evangelism", At the conclusion of the addresses Mr. Philip Carr conducted a very helpful discussion. The Lesson for the Standard Church served dinner at noon.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart was in charge of the registration desk at which had been submitted previous to the afternoon session. Special music was provided in the afternoon by Mrs. Don Robert, of Moira, who gave a solo. The topic for afternoon discussion was "Things we would like to do in our Township". This was led by Mr. Melville Donnan.

Rev. O. E. Wager gave the closing address "Some Home Problems in which the Church can Help". Those who will be responsible for the leadership of Sunday School work for this year are:

President—Mr. Melville Donnan.

1st Vice President—Mr. Clifford Green.

Richard Motherwell, 30-year-old farmer, of Abernethy, Sask., who was elected president of the newly organized Young Liberal Association of Canada, at the Winnipeg convention. He is a grandson of the late W. R. Motherwell, a former federal minister of agriculture.

Drew Blames Reduction of Liquor Rations on Federal Restrictions

Toronto, June 3 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario, in a statement issued yesterday on the reduction of the liquor ration to 13 ounces a month, said the Ontario Liquor Control Board had no choice under the circumstances and "the whole situation is one which calls for removal of the restrictions by the Dominion government and the placing of the responsibility under the provincial authorities in regard to both quantity and distribution."

Beverage alcohol has been and is being manufactured in Canada in large quantities, he said, adding that the limitation imposed by the Dominion government is not the result of a shortage of beverage alcohol."

Canada exported more than 2,000,000 gallons of beverage alcohol last year "a quantity not very far short of the total amount consumed by the people of Canada."

"At the same time reserve stocks of portable spirits in the warehouses of Canada on March 31st, this year were higher than on the same date in the first year of the war."

Should provincial authorities have responsibility for fixing the amount of liquor that was to be bought that it would lead to a great increase in the consumption of spirits, Mr. Drew said.

"On the contrary, the experience since the removal of the restriction on beer demonstrates that the problem is largely psychological. The moment the arbitrary restriction was removed the situation improved immediately. There is ample evidence that the appetite for beer was greatly stimulated by the difficulty of obtaining it.

"The inescapable fact is that some of the evils of prohibition are being revived by the knowledge that it may be difficult to obtain spirits through the ordinary channels," Mr. Drew said.

During the recent sittings of the Ontario legislature the members were informed of the Ontario government's request for the removal of the restrictions and the reasons for the request being made, Mr. Drew said.

Ten days ago, he added, the Ontario government again requested Ottawa to remove the restriction and the request was refused. "That refusal left the Liquor Control Board with no alternative but to reduce the quantity which could be obtained by any individual permit holder," he said.

Mr. Drew, referring to the fact that 80 ounces of liquor monthly are allowed in Quebec, said "there may be some good reason for this striking contrast in the two rations, but there is no doubt of the effect of this situation upon the minds of those who come in contact with it."

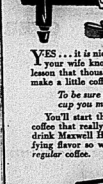
YES . . . it is nice to get up in the morning when your wife knows this fact about coffee. It's a lesson that thousands learned through having to make a little coffee go a long way:



To be sure of full enjoyment in every cup you must use really good coffee.

You'll start the day with fragrant full-bodied coffee that really does put heart into you if you drink Maxwell House. You'll like its grand, satisfying flavor so well you'll want to make it your regular coffee.

There are two main reasons why Maxwell House is so consistently good:

1. It's blended from rare, extra-flavor coffees, each with its own special quality of flavor, body or fragrance.
2. Roasted by a special process that roasts each coffee bean evenly all through.

Maxwell House is packed in a Vacuume Bag in an All Purpose Grind and at less cost to you.

The Effect of the "HOURS OF WORK AND VACATIONS WITH PAY ACT 1944" ON BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY IN ONTARIO

ONTARIO

ON JULY 1st, 1944, the "Hours of Work and Vacations With Pay Act, 1944" becomes effective in the Province of Ontario.

While it is the purpose of this Act to provide improved conditions for all workers employed in industry in this Province, it will be obvious that the provisions of the Act cannot be permitted, at this time, to interfere with the all-out capacity effort required in producing material for war.

The Industry and Labour Board, which will administer the Act, therefore, considers, in view of the present acute manpower shortage and the vital demands of war, that the application of the Act should be postponed and working conditions in force at present should not be arbitrarily changed.

The Board therefore authorizes the continuance of Existing Working Hours in all industries operating on priority War Material in the Province of Ontario.

Industries engaged in Agriculture, Horticulture, Fishing and the Production of Foods and Farm Products; Dairying Industries including cheese and butter; Farms engaged in the building and upkeep of roads, construction, transportation, textiles and other undertakings which can be considered essential to the full maintenance of the war effort, shall be considered in the category of War Industries insofar as their present working hours are concerned.

Preparation of the groundwork for the operation and application of the Act will go forward immediately but the Industry and Labour Board wishes it to be understood that these preparations will not be permitted to interfere in any way with existing working conditions in vital industry as long as the present crisis exists.

Minister of Labour

ALLIES DRIVE THROUGH DEFENCES TOWARD ROME HEAVY BOMBERS HAMMER INVASION COAST

Movement To Trap Nazi Rear Guards Fleeing Valley

Defensive Position Enemy Not Broken Despite Capture Of Two Strong Points

1,000 PRISONERS TAKEN

By ROLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, June 3 — (AP) — Allied troops slugging through the Alban hills toward Rome have captured Monte Castellaccio, a bare 1½ miles from the Hermal City, and another column today pressed up the Via Casilina toward the capital.

Other Allied troops pushed down the highway from Valmontone, one key of a potential trap for Nazi rearguards falling back under steady attrition by the Allied armies in the southeast.

The British 8th Army, including Canadian troops, was hammering the Germans in that area. The Canadians, who pounded up the Via Casilina yesterday and seized Pantano were last reported within 12 miles of the 8th Army forces who had taken Valmontone on the same highway.

The power drive that cracked the Germans' defenses at Valmontone line swept on to Monte Castellaccio 6½ miles north of Valmontone and only 11 miles southeast of Rome.

Enters Final Lap

As the campaign for Rome entered its final lap, the Germans demand declared the city would be spared as a "humanitarian" action if the enemy chooses to defend it.

At the same time, headquarters cautioned that although Velletri and Valmontone, bastions of the old Rome line, have been captured, "the enemy's defensive position in the sector has not been broken even" that the German defences are "in considerable depth and firm resistance is being encountered."

(The German high command reported bitter fighting in the Alban hills Friday, and said attacks at and west of Lanuvio, but not at Velletri, were repulsed.

(An Allied spearhead thrusting above Valmontone was "brought to a standstill east of Rocca di Papa and south of Velletri," five miles north of Valmontone, the Germans said.)

United States units which took Valmontone struck out in three directions—northwest along the Via Casilina toward Rome, due west along a highway southeast along the same road to link up with the Anzio forces who are driving the Germans out of their last footholds of the south side of the Sacco river, and due north along an important secondary road to Segni, a road junction at Cave, three miles from Valmontone.

The French, meantime, closed in quickly from the Valmontone area to Ferro, 4½ miles southeast of Valmontone and within pistol shot of both Highway 6 and the river.

Close Retreat Route

Farther to the southeast, other French troops closed the retreat route from the area south of the Sacco river by slicing across a secondary road at Scurgola, 14 miles from Valmontone and 5½ miles west of Frosinone, captured premier day by Canadian units of the British 8th Army.

Gen. Alphonse Juin's French troops also were driving northward from the river to within 10 miles of Frosinone, 8 miles southeast of Valmontone. Montefiascone was taken Thursday, June 1.

Thus iron claws were closing in on whatever German units were attempting to fight a rearguard action in the 15-mile sector between Colle Ferro and Ferentino, looking south of the Sacco river.

From this trap the Nazis had four main routes of escape—northeast, northward, along which they could attempt to escape, but close pursuit from three sides was certain to cost them heavy casualties as well as the loss of all but their most highly mobile vehicles.

Americans exploiting their break-through into the German defences hinged on the Alban hills captured 2,000-foot Monte Castellaccio 6½ miles west of Valmontone and the same distance north of Velletri.

The capture last 1,000 more prisoners alone in the past 24 hours in repeated counter-attacks, vainly attempting to halt the Americans from widening the gap in their frontal defences and advancing in the strongly-held Lanuvio area.

This brought the total prisoners taken by the 5th Army alone in the current offensive to more than 14-thousand.

"The 5th and 8th Armies together have taken more than 20,000 prisoners."

It was officially reported the whole Campolcone area near Lanuvio was captured with enemy tanks and vehicles" and German losses were mounting steadily as Allied artillery and bombers pounded the withdrawing columns.

Positions Jeopardized

Despite the cautious tone of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander's communique, it was obvious the Germans already were hard-pressed if the strongest positions they could hope to hold in the Alban hills and that the 5th Army could break through to Rome might come soon.

Front line reports said the Americans were hitting toward Rome along the Via Casilina from Valmontone. It was apparent that German positions along this vital road were jeopardized by the thunderous 8th Army assault through the hills to Monte Castellaccio.

The enemy was fighting desperately to cling to the north of his deep defences all the way from the sea coast in the Via Casilina, but without reserves he could not long stand losses which he has suffered in the past three weeks and hope to do anything more than delay the Allied drive on Rome.

The infiltration into the hills to the north, which gave the Americans facility to encircle Velletri, paid rich dividends when 377 prisoners were seized within the town, described as a key point on a road centre which "opens the way for a further advance northward."

Other troops already were reported fighting around the hills which dominate Velletri on the south. Velletri but the Allied command said last night that action in the centers of Palestrina," four miles north of that former German bastion.

Dover Weather

Dover, England, June 3 — (CP) — Channel weather which Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's Allied command moved across the Dover Strait today from the Atlantic to the French coast on a light northerly breeze rippled the smooth sea.

Visibility was good, and the temperature, at 9 p.m., (2 a.m., E.D.T.) was 61 degrees. Mercury fluctuated little during the night. The barometer was steady.

Weather Forecast

Kenora and Rainy River—Strong winds; cloudy and cool today and Sunday with showers.

Manitoba—Fresh to strong winds; cloudy and cool today and Sunday with occasional showers.

SHUTTLE-BOMBING RUN OPENED BY RUSSIA AND U.S.

Secretly Prepared American Bases In Russia Now Being Used

BRITAIN USES BASES

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Russia, June 3, (AP)—Striking formations of American Flying Fortresses and Mustang fighter escorts have landed at Russian-prepared American bases in Russia after successfully accomplishing their first joint offensive operations with the Red Air Force.

The historic operation, completed yesterday, brought to the battle-front of a long-range plan through which Britain, the United States and Russia brought the most far-flung portions of the Nazi domain under round-the-clock bombing.

The dramatic arrival of American bombers and fighters on Russian soil—presumably from Italy—evoked the first comment by leaders of the Eastern Command, U.S. sources in Moscow said.

The large force of strategic bombers and fighters which attacked Rumanian oil refineries shielded by our Russian ally and then continued to Russian bases.

"Enemy opposition was slight. One bomber was shot down and one fighter is still outstanding.

"The Germans co-operated by attacking enemy airdromes on the route of flight. Several enemy fighters were destroyed on the ground," the announcement added.

In their Roman offensive, the Japanese have captured two strong points, east of Changteh and northeast of Changsha, and new battles were developing for those two enemy objectives, the Chinese high command announced.

CAMOUFLAGED TANKS MOVE AGAINST ENEMY IN ITALY

Long columns of carefully-camouflaged Canadian tanks move up to the front support troops seeking to penetrate the Adolf Hitler line, last strong defence of the Germans south of Rome. This particular picture was taken on the Casino front where Canadian tanks played a spectacular part in the early advance.

Chinese Troops Gain Outskirts Of Chiaotou

Chungking, June 3 — (AP)—Despite heavy rains that impeded operations, Chinese troops in the Sellwan river area north of the Burma road have gained on the outskirts of Chiaotou, "where fierce fighting is now in progress," a communique said today.

Other Chinese forces are forcing slowly eastward toward Wallen, strategically important area about six miles southwest of Chiaotou.

Beleaguered Japanese in Pelchiakuangtang, to the east of Tengchung, counter-attacked but were thrown back with losses, the announcement added.

In their Hunan offensive, the Japanese have captured two strong points, east of Changteh and northeast of Changsha, and new battles were developing for those two enemy objectives, the Chinese high command announced.

Hepburn Advises Premier Drew To Take Action

London, Ont., June 3 (CP) — Mitchell F. Hepburn, Independent Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Elgin and former Liberal premier, said last night if he were in Premier Drew's place he would take action in the courts against the cut in liquor rations by the Federal government."

(Ontario's liquor ration was cut from 26 ounces bottle a month to 13 ounces a month; or 26 ounces for two months earlier this week.)

Speaking to banquet of Ontario and Quebec members of the Canadian Commercial Travellers of America, Mr. Hepburn said Premier Drew could beat his court action "on the signed agreement made by Federal authorities with the Ontario Legislature while he was premier.

He said this government is that Ottawa received the assurance that the Federal Government would not interfere with the liquor laws of Ontario in return for turning over the income and corporation tax."

TURNING DESTRUCTION APPARATUS RELEASED

FATE OF ROME UP TO GERMANS ALLIES DECLARE

Nazis Will Be Hurled Out By Force If They Attempt To Defend Eternal City

TEXT OF STATEMENT

Naples, June 3, (AP)—The Allied command in Italy pledged itself to continue to "take every precaution against Rome, but declared its fate was up to Germans, who would be buried out by force if they attempted to defend the Eternal City by arms.

A special communique, expressed hope the enemy "will not make such ill-considered choice". It came the day after Pope Pius XII urged that Rome be spared, declaring that "whoever would dare lift a hand against Rome would be guilty of matricide".

The Allies "have only taken and only will take military action against Rome insofar as the Germans use the city, its highways and its roads for their military purposes", the communique said.

Text of the statement:

"Allied military authorities, confronted by the ruthless enemy in Italy, are interested solely in the destruction and elimination of German forces in that country.

"They have taken and will continue to take every possible precaution during the course of their campaign to spare innocent civilian life and property and to preserve religious monuments of permanent value to civilization.

"In particular they are deeply conscious of the unique position occupied by Rome as one of the chief historical religious and cultural centres of the world, and of the fact that Rome is the seat of His Holiness, the Pope, and contains the neutral state of the Vatican City.

Continue Precaution.

"It is therefore the firm intention of Allied governments and of Allied military authorities to continue to take every precaution in their power, consistent with essential military requirements, to safeguard the population of Rome and its historical and religious monuments.

"The Allies have only taken and will only take military action against Rome insofar as the Germans use the city, railways and roads for their military purposes. If the Germans choose to defend Rome the Allies will be obliged to take appropriate military measures to reject them. The intention is the sincere hope of His Majesty's Government and the United States Government that the enemy will not make such an ill-considered choice."

To Claim Bottle Checked 16 Years Ago in Toronto

Toronto, June 3 (CP)—Sixteen years ago, Valley of Goodrich, head of the censorship office in Australia, while visiting in Toronto checked two cases of wine for a friend in the check-room of a hotel (King Edward) here.

Tonight, the bottle will be claimed by the bodkers of Goodrich chest (KCB—7788).

Three visiting newspapermen from Australia—William Dunn, Dent Whittington and Fred Smith—touring Canada under auspices of the Wartime Information Board—have the ticket and plan "cashing in" when they attend a dinner in their honor at the hotel tonight.

F. K. Dunn, manager of the hotel, said the parcel containing the bottle still is on the shelf. Although it was only recently discovered during alterations.

NAZIS SAY ROME "FREE"

London, June 3 — (CP) Reuters) — The German transocean agency today quoted a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman as saying Rome "can be regarded as free" of German armed forces.

The propaganda agency quoted this official statement by the spokesman on the Germans' decision to destroy Rome:—

"On the German side everything has been done for months to preserve Rome from such fate. Rome today can be regarded as a city free from armed forces."

Canadian Trooper Acquires Fleas First Night He Uses Blanket Given By Nazi

By DOUGLAS ROW
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, June 3 (CP)—Tr. Donovan Dow of Clarendon, Alta., had a prisoner story and Cpl. Ivan Smith of Revelstoke, B.C., had a prisoner story and others of Canada's crack regiment who faced the Germans on the Cassino front had stories, too.

Tr. Dow came upon his prisoner in Pancaldi, a village which the Canadians captured in the Liri Valley.

He was looking for a pistol," he explained, "and he pipes up in pretty English, gives me this Belgian pistol and says he was sorry he had only two rounds of ammunition."

"By the time they took him away he had given me his pistol, a watch of himself, some first aid equipment, a knife and a blanket.

The Nazi also gave him a blanket but, as Tr. Henry Allen, Calgary, Alta., explained, it had its defects. It seems Tr. Dow acquired its fleas the first night on his bed.

Cpl. Smith came upon his prisoner as his tank moved into a harbor area.

"He was by himself. Up.

"He was a sniper," he said, "and he just got up out of the grass and gave himself up. We took him with us and when Jerry started shelling he jumped under the tank with the rest of us. Then we forgot all about him because we figured he should be taken back with the others.

"I woke up in the morning and jumped for my gun when I saw a Jerry sitting there. It turned out to be the same guy. They hadn't taken him back and he'd simply been sitting there all the time.

"Then to crown it all when one of our boys unpacked his rations this Jerry corporal looks around, finds it and hands it to him. We gave him breakfast, some bully beef and cigarettes and sent him on his way."

Cpl. Jack Buchan of Toronto and Cpl. Ivan Smith of Revelstoke, B.C., had a prisoner story of three German prisoners and nothing to get them back with except a jeep he couldn't drive. One sadian tankmen were still chuckling days after about the affair.

a jeep with three Germans in the front, one driving, and the Indian taking life easy in the rear.

2 Strong Flights Hit Pas De Calais And Boulogne Area

Attack Comes After Heaviest Daylight Pounding of the Aerial Offensive

CLOSEST TO BRITAIN

London, June 3 — (AP) — American heavy bombers struck twice at Nazi coastal fortifications in the Pas de Calais and Boulogne areas of France today, carrying on the non-stop pounding of Europe by day under intensified pressure after the climax raid on Russian bases and an R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. night strike against French coastal targets.

Flying two missions from Britain for the second day, a force of 200 American bombers struck with equally strong escort hit coastal emplacements in Normandy, and similar fleets roared back in the afternoon to the same area.

They went well fortifications were hit Friday in their heaviest daylight pounding of the war, and 500 R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers attacked the same coastal defences and crumbling German rail facilities last night.

The daylight attacks sent the air offensive into its 16th day.

Today's assault hurled probably 1,900 tons of explosives on this Allied wall section — for a total of about 4,500 tons smashing down in the last 24 hours on this area closest to Britain.

Spectacle—Battle-Raid.

The night blows climaxed a day which saw the Allied air forces engage in their greatest concentration on the continent to a three-way aerial stranglehold from Britain, the Mediterranean and Russia.

Rounding off a day which brought an spectacle, shuttle-raid by American bombers to new Russians bases and two heavy bomber attacks on France from Britain by daylight, the R.A.F. and Dominion forces dealt a quick follow-up drubbing to German defences along the Channel coast again almost on the heels of the great trapeze railway yards at the outskirts of Paris.

A side force of R. A. F. Mosquitos attacked the chemical centres of Leverkusen and Duisburg near Cologne, frequent target of recent attacks, after Germans dismissed 5 mines in enemy waters.

Northern British planes were missing from the night operations and at least seven German fighters were shot down, the Air Ministry announced.

All Canadian planes returned safely.

Inland bombers based in Italy attacked objectives at Girgti, a Romanian city on the Danube river, and Ploesti, Rumanian oil refinery. Rumanian Allied Air Force flew 2,700 sorties yesterday.

STRESS STRAIN UPON MANPOWER NEEDS OF CANADA

Signs—Mounting of More Intensive Effort for Monthly Quota

ACTIVE SERVICE

By JACK BRATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 3—(CP)—As "D-Day" rapidly approaches, signs are mounting in military circles here that officials have adopted more intensive efforts to maintain the supply of Allied forces required monthly for general service.

Nobody has suggested that the monthly quota would not be met. Military spokesmen, however, emphasized that after the United Nations invade Europe—a task in which the Canadian corps in British soil play a big part—it would be more than ever necessary to keep the monthly quota and, if possible, exceed the total.

They stressed the great strain on manpower needs throughout Canada, besides the army's quota, additional strain on resources include 1,000 men monthly to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

These were drawn in the wind:

In Victoria, Maj.-Gen. C. H. Pearkes, Pacific Coast Commander, announced an intensification of campaign for recruiting which would run through July and August when normally the fall of recruiting usually occurs.

In Ottawa, Deputy Air Force Minister Grandy said the Palace Road of Ernstown township. Some house contents were saved.

The house was damaged but a garage and implement shed with contents were destroyed. The farm, about 4 miles north east of Kingston is the homestead of the late M. N. Empey.

Picton Cadet Corps Given High Praise

Picton, June 3—Picton Collegiate Cadets were accorded high praise by District Cadet Officer Capt. T. C. Holmes, cadet, at the annual inspection here Friday afternoon. The Corps made an exceptionally fine showing, going through their various manoeuvres without error and displaying precision. In addition to the regular drill there was display of the Swift training rifle, which records shots without the use of bullets, and of tripods as aiming rests for rifles. Cadets gave a very creditable drill, while others demonstrated signalling. First Aid, knot tying. The physical training drill was exceptionally well done.

Capt. Holmes referred to the summer camp to be held at the Connaught Ranges. The local cadets will attend. He presented a school letter to Arthur Ryderman, chosen the best cadet, and a letter to Capt. Glendon Vancott in recognition of his leadership. Lieuts. Harry Bowers and Bill Harvey were also given praise.

Inspection took place on Main St. and was witnessed by a large crowd.

LARGE FLAT-EGG LAID BY PULLET

We've heard of long eggs, short eggs, round eggs, perhaps fat and thin eggs and the Biddies of this district have not been backward in producing the popular breakfast food with various irregularities in shape, but this shall.

However, the latest heirbone story is that developed by a five months' old pullet belonging to Mr. E. Hillier of Hillier.

This glamor chick of the barnyard holds her head high for she has a flat egg to her other day that is perfectly flat on both sides. How to count the eggs she won't tell, but her owner states that she will probably start the new style which is so shaped as to prevent it from rolling off the table.

Lester ran out of gas and then overheard that all there had escaped from the State prison farm. The truck driver was arrested later.

YOUNG BOYS HELD FOR THEFT

Winnipeg, June 3 (CP)—Police said last night three barefoot youngsters, aged four, six and eight, were arrested yesterday for thefts from three Winnipeg homes. The boys, youngest ever apprehended here for burglary, allegedly got away a small quantity of jewelry. They will appear in juvenile court.

Near Drowning At Govt. Dock

A year drowning occurred off the Government dock here on Friday evening when a row boat capsized, throwing Mrs. Ernest Bell of Toronto, who is temporarily residing at 74 Bleecker Street, into the bay area. Two other persons who had been in the boat managed to drift safely to the dock before Friday night's storm broke with unabated fury. Mrs. Bell was rescued by Mrs. Austin, 88 Everett St., and Reeve Ernest Bowerman.

The trio had engaged a row boat from the proprietor of the dock when the storm was noticed approaching. Rower managed to row to the dock but Mrs. Bell, who is a girl climbed to safety before the storm struck and in fact was assisting the boat and tossing Rower into the dock when a friend managed to help him to safety as the boat drifted away and was later found on the shore of Prince Edward Point.

When P. C. Evans arrived to answer a call from Constable Fitzgerald drowning he found Brewer standing on the dock and Mrs. Bell being assisted to safety by Reeve Bowerman and Mrs. Austin.

Flt.Sgt.Moncrieff Reported Missing

Flight Sergeant Harry Moncrieff R.C.A.F., 24, of Mt. and Mrs. Ben Moncrieff of 17 Isabel Street, is reported missing after operations at sea, according to an official communication received by the family.

Flight Sergeant Moncrieff is well known in the city. He attended Belleville Collegiate Institute and his public school education and in 1938 joined the Royal Canadian Air Force as a photographer.

After serving in several stations he was then stationed in Greenock in Scotland and another brother Pte. Ted Moncrieff in the R.C.O.C. Scotland and another brother Don is with the Canadian Army overseas.

STRESS STRAIN

They said men in the reserve army, starting to go to summer camps, would be asked if they wished to volunteer for active service, but "no coercion or even persuasion will be used."

One officer recalled the defence minister's statement some time ago told the Commons that if the need arose the government could call out the army in-council which would send all drafted overseas, regardless of parliament would have to be given for this action.

He added there were some 50,000 high-category personnel in the home defence army who would be subject to overseas service if such action was taken.

Dubois Case

He referred to Dubois case of Thorold, Ont., who, when stationed on home defence at Chilliwack, B.C., refused to volunteer. The military officer said Canada was committed to a policy of raising an active service force composed of volunteers, but that Dubois "misunderstood his duty."

Because Dubois declined to volunteer for general service his name will be "blacked out" of an honor roll of enlisted members of the Oshawa Rowing Club.

The roll was made up of members

*DEATHS

ADAMS — On Friday, June 2nd, at Trenton, Winifred Rosalind, wife of R. B. Adams, 365 Rose Street. Funeral service will be held at 2 o'clock p.m. on Monday, June 5th. Interment in Belleville.

IN MEMORIAM

FOX — In loving memory of a dear father, James Wesley Fox, who passed away June 3rd, 1941.
Gone, dear father, and forever,
How we miss your smiling face,
Sadly from your home you parted,
None on earth can take your place.

A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory carried out
But earth has left a loneliness
That world can never fill.
—Never ceasing love of son Curtis and daughter-in-law Grace.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Samuel Jewell, Springbrook, wishes to convey her sincere thanks for the many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended to her by her many relatives, friends and neighbors and Dr. Crawford and Rev. Mr. Caldwell in her recent bereavement in the loss of her loving husband. She wishes also to express thanks for the lovely floral tributes and in particular for the kind consideration and sympathy from the Lodge L. O. L. 462. J3 first major night operation ever flown by the American planes over Europe.

The broadcast quoted the correspondent as saying:

"Today at one of the airdromes of the Royal Air Britain a group of American Flying Fortress bombers are preparing for another military objectives in Rumania.

"The operation they carried out was a highly successful one.

"Having flown from bases somewhere in Italy, England, and by Africa, and from, perhaps, all these places simultaneously, they struck over the bombing did not return to their initial bases but landed on soviet airdromes.

Raid Successful

"American airmen report their raid . . . The bombing of enemy military objectives in Rumania, was successfully carried out by the American airmen to land on Soviet soil after attacking their targets.

"Soviet airmen, their comrades in arms."

Rumania radio said early today that "several formations of Anglo-American bombers carried out attacks on the western part of Roumania" but did not specify the targets, or the time of the blows.

British bombers based in Italy attacked the Rumanian Danube river port of Giurgiu last night.

The shuttle raid was given big play on the front pages today. There was virtually no speculation about the implications of the operation, which ended at announcement, however, because of security precautions.

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Forces at Home and Abroad

Concluding discussions of important military matters concerning the Militia of Reserve Force units of this district terminated in the two-day conference held in the Armouries here on Sunday.

On Saturday afternoon a cloth model exercise was presented by Major J. P. Mockler, Base Brigade Major 32rd (H) Bde. Gp. At the conclusion of the exercise, the high lights were viewed from the overseer of Major R. C. Mason, Acting Officer Commanding, 1st (H) Bn., A.L.I. (C).

On Sunday morning a conference of Commanding Officers was held, with: Col. L. W. Slack, D.S.O., Brigade Commander, 32rd (H) Bde. Gp., presiding. The meeting was addressed by Lt.-Col. J. Schmidlin, O.B.E., Staff Officer, Royal Military College, who related experiences in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns. This lecture was very well received and a hearty vote of thanks was proposed by Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates, Officer Commanding, 2nd. (H) Bn. R.C.R.

Following luncheon in the Quinte Hotel the party proceeded to Montalieu Training Area, under arrangements made by Lt.-Col. R. G. Dorman, Officer Commanding, R. R. Ripley. The party had a very interesting and informative visit at the airport, including a map reading exercise from the air. The cordial reception and hospitality of Group Captain Ripley and his officers were greatly appreciated by the members of the visiting party.

The following officers attended the conference:

Col. L. W. Slack, H. Q., 32rd (H) Bde. Gp.; Lt.-Col. J. H. Rogan, H. Q., 32rd (H) Bde. Gp.; Major J. P. Mockler, H. Q., 32rd (H) Bde. Gp.; Capt. J. C. Galyn, H. Q., 32rd (H) Bde. Gp.; Capt. D. Drennan, 1st (H) Bn. A.L.I. (C); Lt.-Col. W. J. Franklin, 2nd (H) Bn. S. D. & G. Highrs.; Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates, 2nd (H) Bn. Hast. & P. E. R.; Lt.-Col. F. J. Mooney, 44th (H) Bn. Regt. R.C.I.; Lt.-Col. M. H. Park, 2nd (H) Bn. P. of W. Rangers; Lt.-Col. W. W. Hawley, (H) Bn. P. of W. O. R. (M.T.); Lt.-Col. D. W. Boyd, 2nd (H) Bn. L. & H. S. R.; Lt.-Col. A. C. Baker, 1st (H) Bn. A.L.I. (C); Major G. G. Edwards (H) Bn. Pil. Regt. R.C.A.; Major V. M. Eastwood, 2nd (H) Bn. P. of W. Rangers; Major who was assisted by R.S.M. Willerton, A. Beale, 2nd (H) Bn. Brockville Rifles; Capt. F. C. Giles, No. 7 (H) Light A. A. Coy., Pet. Pt.; Capt. R. G. Allan, "A" (H) Tp. Cav. Sqn., RCOHS.; Capt. Ian MacLachlan, 5th (H) Pet. Coy. R.C.E.; Major R. C. Burr, 1st (H) Pet. Amb. R.C.A.M.C.; Capt. R. A. Phillips, 46th (H) Pet. Amb. (Type 261); Capt. G. G. Riley, 2nd (H) Bn. O.G.F.G.; Capt. P. G. Mason, 2nd (H) Bn. Midland Regt.; Capt. J. A. Whil, 2nd (H) Bn. Brockville Rifles; Lieut. E. A. Crale, 2nd (H) Bn. Hast. & P. E. R.

The lads of that anti-aircraft battery troop somewhere in Italy 14, Sergt. Casey St., Tpr. Palmer test 92, Tpr. Jenkins, H. 48, Tpr. Hall, Sergt. Hamilton, 43, Sergt. Forsythe 44, Tpr. Palmateer, R. 45, Tpr. Cox, R. Tpr. Ellwood 31, Sergt. Tyrer, 32, Tpr. Chapp H, Tpr. Secrety 15, Tpr. Shannerboro 6.

Prizewinners in the shoot for other ranks included Sergeant Lang, Hart, Thompson, Jenkins, E. and Ellwood. Lieutenant Brotherston were recipients of cash prizes of $3 donated by Cpl. J. R. Hall. Four of the winners were members of "A" Squadron.

Practical examinations for officers and other ranks of the C.W.A.C. passed written examinations are to be held on June 17-18. Three officers and ten other ranks from Belleville the Argylls will participate.

There was a joyful reunion in Khaki here yesterday when Armorer Sergeant J. E. Nixon, son of Sergeant J. E. Nixon and Mrs. Nixon, arrived home from a 4-month-time military camp on a long-awaited furlough. The younger Nixon is well-known in Belleville, especially in military circles, as he was formerly a member of the 34th Field Battery, R.C.A. and has been on active service for a lengthy period of time overseas. He is also survived by a number of his many civilian as well as service friends.

Climax or achievement in their respective training came to four officers of the Argylls this week when they were presented with parchment certificates symbolic of their commissioned rank. Lieutenant Sidney Dixon, who received his commission with Lieutenants Don Osborne, Charles Richardson and Cedric Lloyd, The presentations were made at Camp Borden by their new acting commanding officer, Major R. C. Sladen.

The usually reliable service grapevine comes across with the information that Lieut. R. C. Hall, recruiting office on Start Bridge St., formerly scheduled to close his doors on June 1st., has received a lease of life and will continue in operation until June 30th. Which gives potential recruits to this fine service of Canada's service the opportunity to "sign up" locally. Lieutenant Hall, when interviewed on left yesterday for a week's tour of the western part of the province in the interest of the now famous C.W.A.C. Military and Civil Head Quarters to play host on June 26, Private Florence Hanson, Belleville Township, who keeps herself a busy airforce bride-to-be, is being married to Pte. Hall after the administrative duties of the recruiting office during Cpl. Hall's absence.

Personnel of the 34th Field Battery had a first hand view of the firing power of the 25-pounder buffer recuperator recoil system on Wednesday afternoon when Lieut. J. Sinclaffs and C.Q.M.S. J. A. Jenkins, R.C.O.C., Barriefield, with expert assistance, gave a practical lecture on this important part of the gun's firing. Later the guns were fired and firing mechanisms were taken down and explained with the evening activities being climaxed with the guns being pulled back in order to allow the gunners to see the actual working of the invention. By way of temporary diversion, Lieut. Sinclaffs also explained the diagnostics method the recoil system of the 25-pounder anti-tank gun.

Argylls, like the Battery, have converted to summer drill, which will be a pleasant change from the winter's heavy duties. Incidentally the grapevine has it that the "years" order for shorts went into effect yesterday.

From our pal, Captain F. H. Wooding, District Public Relations Officer, comes word that the Canadian Efficiency Medal has been awarded to Company Sergeant Major now overseas with a field battery, and Pte. W. R. Sunderland of No. 2-A District Depot. Both lads are from Belleville. Brought up on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Browning, Dunbar Street, while Sunderland's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sunderland, 32 Sidney Street.

Don't forget to keep June 26th in mind. For that is the day when the crack bands, both military and civilian, of the C.W.A.C., will offer their musical wares on the Armouries lawn here. The combined bands will parade the city streets and by way of added military entertainment there will be a mounted squad of fifty of Canada's "Finest" who will be seen in parade on the streets. Incidentally, local cadet corps and cadettes will swing into line along with the gals. Don't miss it.

Back to those laborious lassies of the Canadian Women's Service Force, Belleville, with its hectic cacophony of shooting from the housetops, those dilligent gals go quietly about their business of raising funds to supply comforts for their proteges of an anti-aircraft battery, which, as we mentioned before, is now knocking Huns and Pretzel out of sunny Italian skies.

Days finds them working at their various civilian occupations, Nights see them at the counters of the Armouries canteen, or doing other work for the betterment of their squad or their self-imposed war activities.

Their sole source of present revenue comes from the operation of the canteen, and practically all these funds go to buying supplies of comforts for the "sack-sack" over there. On Wednesday night they packed two boxes containing a volleyball and net, eight pipes and pouches, books and gum. These boxes go forward every two weeks with other alternating weeks the boys in Italy get one thousand cigarettes.

And if you think those gals over there don't appreciate what Major Harden and her squad are doing for them you should see some of the letters of appreciation the boys have been receiving. Not a public one of them. Nice going, girls, and look may your canteen cash register flogs.

MARMORA

CWL Conveners Are Appointed By New President

Marmora—The May meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in Sacred Heart School on May 16th, with the new president. The meeting opened with the past president, Mrs. J. Black in the chair. A letter was read acknowledging a box of clothing for overseas. Mrs. Black made reference to the delightful time and the good day of meditation and prayer to be held on Sunday, June 11th, when Father Chandler, chaplain Rev. H. J. Farrell also the past executive and members for Belleville, Madoc and Marmora. Plans for dinner and assistance during her term of office were discussed. It was then called on Mrs. E. D. O'Connor, the new president to take the chair. She graciously thanked the members for the honor they had paid her in electing her president and asked for their continued support in the coming year. Following the roll call letters of thanks were read from Bishop Smith, which was also received baskets of fruit, etc., during illness. The correspondence was given by Mrs. K. Macdonald. Conveners were then appointed by the president as follows:

OBLIGING HEN

Shelburne, June 2 —(CP)—"Biddy," a Leghorn hen on the farm of C. T. Reid here has a very obliging trait. Instead of laying her daily egg in her nest, she enters the kitchen door and lays it there—which is very handy and "saves many steps," says Mr. Reid.

Sweeping New Controls Of U.S. Manpower Effective July 1st

Washington, June 3 — (AP) — Sweeping new controls over the shifting supply of male workers in the United States were ordered Friday by the War Manpower Commission to be placed in effect by July 1.

They provide that virtually every job-seeking man in this country will be required to apply to the United States employment service for his credentials as to the war plant where he is most needed, regardless of which plant may be located. Employers, on the other hand, will be permitted to hire only those men referred to them by the USES.

"The successful conduct of the war now requires the cancelling of all available male labor in the nation for jobs of greatest war production urgency, and the retention of such labor in those jobs," WMC chairman Paul V. McNutt declared in announcing the new program.

Farm workers are not restricted, nor are businesses with eight or less employees.

Germans Speculate Upon Balkan Front

London, June — 3 —(CP)— A transocean broadcast from Berlin speculated today that "the invasion of Western Europe may be preceded by the opening of a Balkan front."

In a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, the German radio quoted dispatches from Syria and Lebanon via Ankara as saying that "a British offensive is concentrated troops in the Near East on the mounting basis of about two new weeks."

ORE SHIPMENTS HIGHER

Cleveland, June 2 (AP)—The Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today 12,116,311 gross tons of iron ore were loaded in Great Lakes freighters last month, the second highest May total in history. In the same month of last year, 10,274,473 tons were loaded. The record May total was set in 1942 when 12,677,506 tons were poured into freighters. Cumulative total for the 1944 season to June 1 was 17,- 402,780 tons, 4,673,201 above the ore figure for the same period but considerably under the 1943 total of 21,337,064 tons.

"When D-Day Comes, Go to a Church and Pray"

Rome of 27 Centuries

Inhabitants of Rome, capital of Italy, have been able to hear, these last days' dispatches have told, the rumble of the guns in the battle raging not many miles distance from Rome as the United Nations' forces press back the Germans and that they could see through telescopes and field glasses the smoke and flashes of the guns while homes in the city shook and windows rattled with the reverberations of the discharge of artillery.

Rome in her twenty-seven centuries has seen a great transformation of history and civilization. The city started in a period of conflicts and is supposed to have been a settlement from Alba Longa, a city some distance from the site selected for Rome by the mythical Romulus who is said to have been the founder of the city on the Tiber. First it was ruled by kings for two and a half centuries and then followed the great Roman Republic which grew into the most powerful Empire of ancient times.

Rome has known what it has meant to be at war. Hannibal, the Carthaginian, threatened Rome in the Second Punic War and yet for some unaccountable reason he did not approach the city. Rome was wrecked by the Gauls 390 years before the Christian era, but they did not take it. In the early fourth century the centre of the Empire was transferred from Rome to Byzantium (Constantinople). It was then when Rome flourished as an Empire her population is believed to have approached one and a third million people, but in the Middle Ages it was much lower, probably from 15,000 to 40,000, the latter figure being believed a fair estimate of the number of inhabitants in the year 1500. With the coming of the united Italy in 1871 Rome became the capital and has had a very rapid growth ever since.

Rome has had several stages, the Rome of the Republic and early Empire, the Rome that gradually lost control of the Empire, Middle Age Rome and modern Rome.

Rome is like Athens in Greece, a city that has survived centuries of many changes, past empires and modern revivals. Rome in addition has had since the early days of the Christian era association with Christianity. Rome has been known as the Eternal City.

Much concern has been felt with regard to the possibility of damage to religious shrines and buildings as well as historic monuments by reason of the war. Prime Minister Churchill recently said, "we have very great hope that the city of Rome will be preserved from the struggle of our armies." The Allies will do their best to shield the city but it is not possible to know what the Germans will do in their retreat.

The vicissitudes of time are shown in sharp contrast in Rome. The city that developed into the greatest Empire of olden times and ruled when at its zenith of power the then known world is today in the hands of a people traditionally the enemy of Rome, the Germans, into whose hands it came through Mussolini's great betrayal of Italy to the Nazis and through his lust for pomp and power. It has come to Britons, Americans, Canadians, French and Poles and other nationalities as their task to rescue Italy and Rome from the grip of the aggressor and give Italy the assurance of freedom and democracy.

Under the Tongue

Here is the newest Churchill story which, The London Daily Sketch says, General Eisenhower is telling with some glee:

When the General recently visited the Prime Minister at Marrakesh, doctors were continually taking Mr. Churchill's temperature.

As they approached him to remove the thermometer from his mouth, Mr. Churchill always "got there first" and announced his own temperature.

He saw the General's amusement and said: "I always do that. I believe these doctors are trying to keep me in bed."

Back in America, the General told the story to President Roosevelt as an example of the Prime Minister's independent spirit. The President laughed and said: "Oh, that's nothing new. I've been doing it for years. I don't trust those fellows, either."

June

The month of June has come bringing with it warmth which the latter part of May developed. The month that is unusually mild has shown signs of exceeding the average temperature as late May this year has done.

June is the month of the year most popular for marriages. Now the spring geaches its fullest development this month before the year steps over into the full sweep of summer in July. June has been popular with the poets. The American poet, James Russell Lowell, has left some lines treasured by schoolboys and schoolgirls as well as by adult readers:

"And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then heaven tries earth if it be in tune
And over it softly her warm ear lays."

June is the month that closes the schools and sends hundreds of thousands of children free from classrooms to build up their strength in the great outdoors in the happy summer time. June sees plans laid for vacationing by the city folk while in the countryside it is a time of intense activity and growth in nature. It is the month that brings first fruits of the growing season in the gardens and on the farm plots to the markets for the tables that crave the season's offerings in berries and such like.

Shades of David Harum!

(Minneapolis Morning Tribune)

The shade of David Harum must have wrung its ectoplasmic hands in horror when a court in Maine awarded the purchaser of a horse a $200 verdict because the horse which he bought for $125 would not "back up." This would seem to be the very end of that old exhilarating doctrine of caveat emptor, and when one sort of horse trading the last droplets of joy and individual initiative.

From time immemorial, horse trading and horse selling has been a field for the exercise of ability and judgment. No holds were barred and to "skin" an opponent was not only considered profitable, but something to boast about. It heightened a man's reputation in the community.

Now, alas, it has been put down on a business basis with federal trade commission rules. Gone is the glamor, the wit, the beguiling frankness, the artifice and the subtlety that made horse trading an adventure instead of a real estate transaction.

German Morale Said Sinking

(Montreal Herald)

Most of us have been a little skeptical about these latest declining-German-morale stories. So much has been heard along this same line in the past—so much that evidently was and any basis in fact—that one naturally is skeptical.

But after reading about the curious development that followed the discovery of a new secret by a Finnish professor, one is more inclined to credit these stories.

Evidently what happened was that many jittery Germans interpreted the appearance of this new secret as the sign of disaster. Dr. Goebbels was so disturbed by the reaction that the Berlin radio broadcast an appeal to the German people to ignore the old superstition.

"Those cowards have their rational explanation," a German astronomer radiod his countrymen. "There is no need to have cold shivers running over your spine."

If that comet had appeared four years ago many Germans would have put quite another interpretation on it—a good deal depends on the state of your morale.

I fear nothing but doing wrong—Sterne.

The unspoken word never does harm—Kossuth.

TALKING TO A FATHER

"He's in the Marines!" his father said.
And he was proud, as all fathers are.
It seemed in my eyes my thought he read,
For he followed with this: "All right—so far!"

"The Gilberts, the Marshalls, at Makin, too,
And never a scratch, so his letters say;
But we'll both be glad when the war is through—
His mother and I—and he's home to stay.

"She worries a lot, as, of course, you know;
For all mothers worry." But this I knew—
Though he tried his best not to let it show—
The fathers of brave boys worry, too.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 3rd, 1924.

A junior section of the First Belleville Girl Guide Company has been organized here with a membership of seventeen members. Following are the officers: Brown Master, Rev. Dr. Masters; Assistant Scout Master, James Naylor; Troop Leader, Ted Pollard; Patrol Leaders, Harold Rainbird; Patrol Leaders, James Churchill, Albert Edwards, George Rowbotham; Corporals, George Pepper, John Lapteste and Clifford Irwin.

Miss Jean Swenor and her brother, Clayton, of Toronto, will spend the weekend with their parents at Point Anne.

Mr. Walley Reeves has left for Toronto, where he will act as one of the judges at an International Rug show.

30 YEARS AGO

June 3rd, 1914.

The city of Belleville gave a hearty welcome yesterday to the Governor General, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, his fair consort, the Duchess of Connaught and their charming daughter, the Princess Patricia. The Royal train conveyed the party in a special car from Ernestown to Belleville, opposite the coal house. Large platforms, beautifully decorated, was erected at the steps leading to the main house and the visitors stepped from their train to the platform and passed through a guard of honor of one hundred and fifty men under the command of Captain Fred Wallbridge, Lieut. Poston and Lieut. Ketcheson. At the side of the guard of honor stood by His Worship Mayor J. F. Wills. Addresses were presented to the Duchess and Princess Patricia from the following organizations: Womens Canadian Club, presented by Mrs. George Wills, daughter of Mayor Wills; Argyll Chapter Daughters of the Empire, presented by Mrs. Jack Marsh, son of Lieut.-Col. L. W. Marsh; Quinte Chapter Daughters of the Empire, presented by Barbara Hastings Institute, presented by Mary Roberts and Lois Thompson; Alexandra Institute, the pupils of the High, Public and Separate Schools, presented by Miss Vera Vermilyea and Claire Hughes. The following were present: Mayor Wills; Mrs. Corby, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. L. W. Marsh, Mrs. G. E. Lester, Mrs. George Walbridge, Mrs. F. J. M. Anderson, Miss Guest, Col. Ponton, Stewart, J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., F. J. M. Anderson, R. F. Wallbridge, J. B. Flint, A. M. Chapman, Robert Coulter, Thos. Montgomery, Henry Bleecker, J. L. Moore, H. Sneyd, J. L. Hess, Rev. Canon Beamish, Rev. Dr. Campbell, Rev. H. D. Ridgeway and Prof. Dan Cameron. The Rev. Canon Beamish in a brief prayer dedicated a handsome silk flag, after which Mrs. L. W. Marsh handed it to the Duchess and she in turn presented it to the Duke who presented it to a representative of the Ontario Street School Cadets, who won it in competition with the other schools here. The flag was donated by the Daughters of the Empire. The hundreds of school children under the direction of Prof. Cameron, sang enthusiastically. Thousands of citizens and visitors from various parts of the district were present. The Royal party at the close of the ceremony at the court house visited the O.S.D. and St. Agnes School and then left to board their train for the east.

BILL MUST BE CARELESS

Athol, Mass., June 2 (AP)—William Bill, 76-year-old farmer had a horse. Some time ago the horse, hauling a wagon, bolted and threw Bill to the ground. A month or so later Logan got two broken ribs when the horse ran away again. Then Logan's son severely injured when driving, by the same horse. So Logan sold the horse and turned to an automobile. Today Logan is recovering at his home from chest injuries caused when the car crashed into another.

Ottawa, June 2 (CP)—Defence Headquarters made public last night a list of 323 long-service awards and decorations to members of the Canadian Army stationed at home and abroad.

The list includes such awards as the Canadian Efficiency Decoration, Canadian Efficiency Award, First and Second Clasps to the Canadian Efficiency Medal, Canadian Medal for Long Service and Good Conduct, Colonial Auxiliary Forces Officers' Decoration and Colonial and Forces Long Service Medal.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Our pioneer grandfathers used to have nightmares in which they fought monsters made of clay. These sudden creatures arose from upon the settlers' shoulders, like the Old Man of the Sea, and forced them to sink deep into a bottomless pit filled with mud. Some of the scenes of the dreams was the unremitting struggle with mud. Roads seldom existed in Canada in the first years of the 19th century and when attempts were made to do so when a wagon was upset, "One boy was killed outright, and several were very much hurt; one man got his arm broken, and one his own finger, in spite of all his care and skill, was badly, his horse having thrown a jerk just at the road where he stuck fast; and even after he was loosed from the yoke the poor animal strove so much to purpose that he left them in a state of complete exhaustion three times, the mire was so tenacious, a chain, in two places, was compelled to disengage his feet from the clay. Such, however, before we got him freed . . . For, unsafely a team of oxen can travel, which the owner loosed from the yoke and fastened to the wagon. With these and the horse together the wagon was at length pulled out.

"Next morning . . . when we came again to the road it appeared so bad that it was not to be attempted stand, seeing no way of getting through. It was then concluded that the only alternative left us was to pull up the Summer Roads, which, in the two places, we had gone down, and then cleared them up again . . . and then closed filling up fine behind the dam. We got up our teams at about seven right in the morning, and it would have if it hadn't rained a little all in the night.

The first day's work was what I heard my father say downstairs and in a minute give a yell like a lot of scandalized hyenas. I had an awful clip and I ran down to see what was happening and he was looking out the kitchen window in the garden and swearing and I looked and the whole garden was under water and you couldn't see the potatoes or anything but just some bean poles sticking out here and there and if I could tell that the rain had washed all the seeds out of them in row and that all the extra water was in a kind of hollow where the soil was good. I was sorry to say that my father and me had a good garden and now it would be very, very good and I wanted to do something.

So I said maybe if we could let the water out of the garden and dig down and my father turned around and stopped and said, "Don't be a damn fool." I told him and before I could say anything more he said that was the reason the dam was and he went right out on the road and I got a hoe and went in him, and let him down and the soil and the seeds and the plants and he went down the brook on his back, yelling and gurgling. Then I went back and told my father to Pat Mallory's, but he got stuck in the mud and I had to help him.

I ran and my mother came and we got him out and he was more furious than I ever saw him before.

He was furious with which it, all right, and I didn't hardly blame my father, but by the time he got the water out of the hole it was as not to be late to work and he went down to the dam and the brook went down pretty fast with the water and we thought that from the garden to the brook and the seeds and the plants and things wasn't spoiled at all. Honest, when my father came home that night he was pretty cheerful and I guess it needed that extra water.

Then I went to Pat Mallory's and he said maybe the garden wasn't spoiled at all and I went myself and for me to step right down cellar with him to the Mallory's.

Washington Spotlight

By G. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, June 2 — (CP)—One of the reasons for going through Congress the business of those who serve in the Statutes-Senatorium bill appears to be the provision for the allotment of civil service positions. The National Civil Service Reform League is making an apparently fruitless effort to defeat it.

The league proposes that the bill have a lifetime of five years, and that it define a "disabled veteran" to be one with 25 per cent disability. It would make statutory provision that in the selection of applicants preference over an applicant whose only claim is that he is a veteran.

It also would provide some degree of preference for a non-veteran of long service over a veteran who was in the armed forces a comparatively short time, in cases where disabilities were necessary, because of staff reductions.

The bill went through the House of Representatives with none of these changes inserted and now the Senate Civil Service Committee has before it the league's and the league's proposed amendments.

But there may be a battle on the floor of the Senate.

Belt-tightening Brazil: A crop of wide-awake Brazilian textile business men has been in Washington seeking new ways of cooperation with the war program. Their report that wartime life in their country is not pleasant. The reason, they say, is that "Brazil has played the game."

They said Brazil voluntarily accepted low quotas of gasoline, oil, and food that must be transported by hauled long distances. Result: no pleasure or non-essential driving, restricted travel, cold homes and offices when the weather is chilly, and shortages in the big cities.

They were not complaining but contended that under the circumstances they were failing to share the sacrifices.

The Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. MacArthy entertained them at the Embassy.

Trivia: Representative John M. Vorys (Rep.-Ohio) had a back pat from Canada when he told the House that Canadians, with their Mutual Aid Bill, were "keeping away from us the headache of collecting reverse lease;" they have a realistic bill on this subject." . . . the Army's $94,000,000 Pentagon building had a record of one skilled bricklayer replacing himself out bulks in the W., 600 light sockets at the rate of one a day, and . . . the telephone switchboard is that of the Chesapeake & Potomac Republic 7200 with 14,000 extensions!

6 AUSTRALIAN MINES IDLE IN PERCENTAGE STRIKES

It Seemed Like A Good Idea At The Time

(From the Providence, R.I., Bulletin)

There had never been any fish before in the brook that ran through my land, so there was no reason why something came way up in there and laid its eggs and that they hatched and about a million little fishes, we were pretty sure there would be that we could build a dam in the brook and they would have to stay in the pond and then we would have our own fish pond.

You would be surprised what a hard job it was. The water wasn't very deep, but the mud was about as high as our heads, so we had to dig down to the bottom and then we would get it built up a couple of feet and then it would break because the stones were not very flat and didn't fit together good, so we got wading wet and Pete got a cold, though it was in the middle of the summer and the mother said it was most likely hay fever, and we thought about it. And once when the dam fell down in a big storm and we had to start in and I could hardly walk for a couple of days. But we kept working on it and after a while we got the dam built, and it didn't fall over and it held the water back and it was by tomorrow the water ought to be pretty deep, so we went down and out that we were making a pond for them.

We could hardly wait for the morning to look at it, but when we did, the water wasn't any deeper than it was the day before and it had run out through the holes between the stones and we thought maybe that was all there was to it, but we cut hunks of sod and stuffed them in the holes and they worked and the water stopped coming through.

But the pond still was not deeper. Below the dam there was a hole where the water was funny to see the brook goes right through, and it was pretty and the frogs squatting around and the minnows and things and we followed the brook to see how far it was dry and we found a place where the brook was all dammed up and mooed and then other cows came down and looked and they mooed and pretty soon Pat came down and said it was all right, no matter was, but we thought we had better not talk to him so we went back and looked in the new hole.

By that night the brook was

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

When the federal government was organized this phrase was interpreted by Thomas Jefferson to mean "Jade" as the name of a gem stone, legislators would collect "jade." stone of the side. During the old days of the Orient, people valued that jade, when applied to the side, would prevent colic.

"Lord" and "lord" are believed to be derived from Anglo-Saxon words meaning "breadgiver" and "bread-guarder" respectively.

Up until the time of the Revolution the lower house of the Virginia legislature was called "the House of Burgesses."

"Independent Action"

By the Associated Press

Washington, June 2 — (AP) — The phrase "independent action" by the United States, which President Roosevelt has used in describing the policy to be followed in the Allied military occupation of Germany, has been a key phrase in American foreign policy for more than a century.

It was first used by President James Monroe in his message to Congress on December 2, 1823, when he declared that the United States would not interfere in the internal affairs of European countries, but would maintain its own policies "independently" on the American continents.

Mr. Roosevelt used the phrase in his message to Congress on January 6, 1941, when he declared that the United States would not be "isolated" from the rest of the world by the success of "independent action" by the forces of aggression.

Secretary of State Hull has used the phrase frequently in describing the policy of the United States. He has said that the United States would not enter into any "entangling alliances" which would prevent it from acting "independently" in the interests of world peace.

Mr. Hull has also said that the United States would not "dictate" to other countries, but would act "independently" in the interests of world peace.

WEDDINGS

BROWN—POWERS

Wooler.—The altar of Wooler St. Alphonsus Church, banked with beautiful and attractive decorations was the setting for a pretty wedding on Wednesday, May 31, at ten o'clock, when Beatrice Mary Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Powers, Brighton, became the bride of Keith Robert Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jabez Brown, of Trenton. Nuptial Mass was offered by Rev. F. L. Rishea, Mrs. W. Bowes was at the organ and also sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a radiant picture in a floor length gown of white satin and all white accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses and sweetheart intermingled with fern and lied, with huge ribbon bows.

Miss Isabelle Powers was her sister, bridesmaid. She wore a floor length gown of heavily blue rayon with contrasting accessories.

Mr. Jack Brown, Trenton, was groomsman and the ushers were Ernest Glen Brown and George Powers.

The bride's mother received the guests at the reception, assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Powers.

For a wedding trip the young pair went to Toronto and other points.

WOMEN STUDENTS ALMOST DOUBLED

Hamilton, June 2. (CP)— War conditions have changed the attendance at Universities, Rev. W. T. Brown, president of Victoria College told the Hamilton Conference of the United Church here tonight. The number of women students also was the war began has almost doubled.

Dr. Brown spoke of vocational education and said there was a need for more technical and skilled experts. Men trained in the things of the world would be the type required for vital leadership. He gave a review of the relationship existing the United Church and the plans for uniting the Congregational and Methodist bodies, with the union in the higher type than in the past.

Rev. Wilbur Howard, general secretary of the Church for Boys' Work, praised the services of the other organizations but said the church must relieve the church of the responsibility for leading boys to Church. Officers of Hamilton Trail of the Older Boys' Parliament. The boys was expressed that full responsibility for the camp in the camps and other activities planned this Summer.

Women's Activities

The regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Auxiliary was held on Tuesday of this week. The meeting opened with a devotional period. A number of items of business were transacted by the Secretary, Mrs. Barlow, from St. Andrew's boys and Girls' Auxiliary. Accordingly, girls sent to them recently by the Guild.

Miss Beatrice Powers presented a splendid financial statement, evidence of great effort and enthusiasm by the various groups. The Guild contributed generously to General Church activities, and voted to donate $10 to the British Missionary Auxiliary.

The Overseas Comforts Shower, by Wood Guild, to the Guild members, to be knitted during the Summer, to those serving in the Forces, was announced.

Mrs. Ferguson was in charge of Mrs. Springer's Group. Mrs. Elmhirst's Knitting club were short point-free dishes are made, not necessitating every turning, but substantial main dishes. Everybody knows "Mother Sizer" Wren Are Red Like This One. Dear Miss Fairfax:

A girl I know is married to a Servicoman who is overseas, and she has been drawing her allowance and spending it on good times. She has a very good position in Government office besides. The other day she learned that he was coming home, after having been overseas for two years. He has arrived unexpectedly and she has not been home all day. She is out with a very particular boy friends with whom she has been going around since her husband went away.

When she opened his telegram, this is what she said: "Now why does he have to come home just when I have a date with J. Why couldn't he have picked another day?" Needless to say we were horrified. She married him only a month before he went across. What do you think of girls like this? Surely a man, get his allowance and never want to see him again.

(Mrs.) B. G.

No, my dear, if I expressed my opinion of that soldier's wife, this page would probably be censored as being improper for the mail. "J" will probably deal out to the same cards as she is dealing to her husband and I hope sincerely he will stop her allowance. Such women should not go on?

It Doesn't Do to Be Too Fussy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year and a half ago I met a girl at the plant where I am employed and took her home several times. I'm 37 and she's 32. Her folks refused the service at the time and she told me she was in love with him.

I continued taking her out and fell in love with her, and she told me she loved me. When her boy friend in the R.C.A.F. came home on furlough I asked her not to go out with him, but she did anyway.

And now I'm wondering whether she's really in love with me, or is she trying to get the boy friend home from the war before making up her mind. I really am deeply in love with this girl.

A. V. F.

Don't you think it was pretty high-handed to tell the girl not to go out with her first love when he came home on furlough.

It doesn't do to be too possessive, especially with a high-spirited girl. Like thousands of men before you you'll have to take your chance with the young soldier, and the girl's post-war plans. But since the young lad's not married I think he is open to lay siege to her heart with those attentions girls appreciate.

A Husband Who Makes a Cult of Cruelty.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am so unhappy. I'm 23 years old, have been married five years and have three children, 4, 3 and six months. I'm a devoted wife and mother, and love my husband, but he doesn't seem to care about me. He never tells me anything about finances, won't let me touch his money except to pay the milk bill or the paper boy. Occasionally there's a little change and this I may keep but that's all the spending money I have.

I have one fairly nice dress, and the children wear hand-me-downs which I make over. I sew all our clothes when I can get the material. I never go any place except to my mother's and I seldom go there because it's so hard to get the children over yonder. My mother says I'm a fool to put up with this. My husband is a bus driver. He works his shift and instead of coming home immediately he sits around and talks with the other men. I'm sure there isn't another woman. On his day off he goes out by himself. I've leaned a lot of things since I've been married to him, from his own words. I've never even given me a wedding ring. When we were married he said there was really no use in spending money on rings. So we dispensed with the ring.

I've asked him to leave me, but he won't do that. What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? I can hardly finish this, for my tears.

F. F.

When a man makes a cult of cruelty because he holds the purse strings, there is either got in his inhuman treatment or quit. In the latter case, the welfare of the children must be prayerfully considered. Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

They're Seventeen But Feel Considerably Older.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm just 17 and like many other girls of my age, often find my weekends gateaux and empty. I love to dance and the fun all 17 and 18-year olds like, but as the boys are away I'm left in the parlor or soon to go. I feel more like a wall flower than anything. I'm sure hundreds of girls are in the same position as I am.

What can we do with ourselves? The week is filled with homework, but while I used to look forward to weekends, now I dread them. Do you know of something we can do? What organization can give us war work to do?

D. W.

Why don't you 17-year olds who feel like 70 get up a weekend club?

Have some definite object in view like a cooking club where you'll learn dishes are made, not necessitating every turning, but substantial main dishes. Get your menus from someone's wife or a Red Cross lady to make suggestions, and you will not have any fear of dancing men coming to test your cooking ability.

Everybody knows "Mother Sizer" Wren Are Red Like This One.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A girl I know is married to a Servicoman who is overseas, and she has been drawing her allowance and spending it on good times. She has a very good position in Government office besides. The other day she learned that he was coming home, after having been overseas for two years. He has arrived unexpectedly and she has not been home all day. She is out with a very particular boy friends with whom she has been going around since her husband went away.

When she opened his telegram, this is what she said: "Now why does he have to come home just when I have a date with J. Why couldn't he have picked another day?" Needless to say we were horrified. She married him only a month before he went across. What do you think of girls like this? Surely a man, get his allowance and never want to see him again.

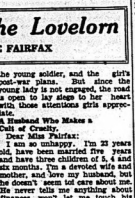
(Mrs.) B. G.

No, my dear, if I expressed my opinion of that soldier's wife, this page would probably be censored as being improper for the mail. "J" will probably deal out to the same cards as she is dealing to her husband and I hope sincerely he will stop her allowance. Such women should not go on?

It Doesn't Do to Be Too Fussy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year and a half ago I met a girl at the plant where I am employed and took her home several times. I'm 37 and she's 32. Her folks refused the service at the time and she told me she was in love with him.



I continued taking her out and fell in love with her, and she told me she loved me. When her boy friend in the R.C.A.F. came home on furlough I asked her not to go out with him, but she did anyway.

And now I'm wondering whether she's really in love with me, or is she trying to get the boy friend home from the war before making up her mind. I really am deeply in love with this girl.

A. V. F.

Don't you think it was pretty high-handed to tell the girl not to go out with her first love when he came home on furlough.

It doesn't do to be too possessive, especially with a high-spirited girl. Like thousands of men before you you'll have to take your chance with

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A "Thank You" is Never Out of Style

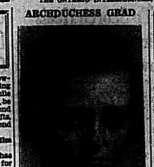
Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A friend of my daughter very much wanted a certain book, and fortunately I was able to get it for her through an influential friend of my husband's and mine. She has never communicated with me in any way, even to tell me she got the position let alone to thank me. Another says it's "old-fashioned" for me to expect her to thank me, but personally she does not know that she is grateful for what I did for her.

Ann.

My guess is that your daughter is only trying to "cover up" her friend's rudeness, and that at heart she's very ashamed of her friend's discourtesy. Of course she knows as well as you do that it's not the act of a gentleman to expect a person whom you've put ourselves out to help, to be grateful enough (or decent is the word) to write a note to tell you the outcome and to thanks is for our good offices. How can you tell that this girl is grateful if she doesn't express her gratitude? Yes, please, put down your sound point of view about this . . . it is cad, and I'm sure will cause a considerable stir in your own daughter. The lesson that it will teach is a practical one that in the world, we must have the time to write a bread-you note to acknowledge a favor.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,



Both Consideres.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A friend has been invited to a shower for a girl in my office. She is to be married in a few weeks and has told me that she is going to send a gift to the bridegroom's aunt and to the reception afterward. My bridegroom has to be invited to this girl very much, and I want to do the right thing. Must I go to the shower? A shower gift and a wedding gift?

E. L.

Since you will be invited to the reception, you should send a wedding present, and if you go to the shower, you really must take you

Newly Wedded Couple Feted

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Mary Hall, Front of Thurlow, on May 20, when over thirty neighbors and friends gathered to honor her son, Frank, and his bride, the former Phyllis Powers, of Belleville. Mrs. Hall presided efficiently.

After some social intercourse and music, the bride and groom, were asked to be seated. A very complimentary address was read by Mrs. Gordon Cummins and Clinton Cummins and Clinton Brown, carried in two large baskets of gifts composed of china, pottery, glass, Pyrex ware, towels, cutlery, kitchenware, cooking utensils and utensils and a clothesline and clothes pins.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall each made short replies thanking all for the many useful and beautiful presents, and inviting all to visit their home in Front of Thurlow.

"For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung and a lunch was served by the ladies present.

Previous to this, a miscellaneous shower was also held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson, Second Concession of Thurlow, and about forty of the groom, where he has spent the past few years.

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Hall was given a cup and saucer shower by a number of her girl friends, as well as a kitchen shower, all proofs of the popularity in which the young couple are held by their many friends.

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

Be Foot-Loose and Fancy-Free.

You're using your feet a lot nowadays. They carry you, and it is up to you to see that the arrangements will get hotter and hotter, and you might as well get your feet in condition to get through the summer with the least possible amount of discomfort. Abuse them, and you'll get corns, bunions and that they can get even. One small, painful corn can make you wish that you'd never been born. Discurdle the disposition of a saint. Corns can make a person want to spank the children and kick the cat.

Girls in the army are wearing practical shoes—calf and "sensible" heels, "comfortables"—and many of them can walk comfortably and without fatigue. Girls in factories they adopted sighted heels. The best precaution you can make is to exchange your shoe ration coupon for a pair of shoes that don't make faces, or fancy your good-looks regret it. A fussy old doctor says these days, you're walking a lot, and this is no time for fussy economy. Your shoes should not be higher than one and one-inches outside the city wear. The lady of fashion selects conservative shoes, and sensible, well covered with a lot of senseless trimmings.

Weight should be carried by that portion of the foot that is directly below the ankle bone.

If the shoe is not wide enough, the foot will spread to the sides over it; that means that the shoe is too small. Avoid it and get under. When that happens, the nail presses against the toe, and it is the same old story; the majority of foot ills are caused by the fact that women will not take the time or the trouble to select shoes that conform to the contour of their feet.

If the shoes are cute looking—most of us fall for them—but as a rule they are made of light materials, are casually designed and are no help to foot health. A shoe that is satisfactory in every way must support the foot. It should not flap at the heel.

Play shoes, like spitzel heels, are not suitable for city wear. The lady of fashion selects conservative shoes, and sensible, well covered with a lot of senseless trimmings.

HEALTH CHATS

Ulcers of the Stomach.

No one has learned, as yet, what causes ulcers of the stomach. Scientists are constantly studying and reporting to learn that important secret. Some authorities believe the ulcers is due to a germ infection. Others think they may be due to a disturbance of the nerves. There is no doubt that misery seem to occur in spells of time, for example, those who are more nervous and active.

Doctor John A. Crabb, of Topeka, Kansas, believes that ulcers are due to some disturbance of the glands of internal secretion, that is, the endocrine glands, such as the thyroid and the pituitary glands. He believes that the parathyroid glands, which are small bits of tissue located behind the thyroid gland near the neck, are responsible for the ulcers. He treats his life of patients by giving them thyroid extract every third day for three doses, and then every five to seven days for from six to twelve doses. Doctor Crabb also uses alkaline powders which are taken twenty to thirty minutes after meals until ulcerity develops pain. Each patient can determine for himself the amount when that pain will begin, and Doctor Crabb believes that the alkali should be given thirty minutes before the expected pain. He does not think it advisable to give these powders immediately after meals as they interfere with the digestive fire with the proper digestion of foods.

The outstanding symptom of ulcers is pain, which comes on from one to three hours after meals, sometimes after meals. The is the time when that pause of the stomach.

In the treatment of ulcer of the stomach, the diet is usually restricted to a great degree. A typical elementary address was read by Mrs. Gordon Cummins and Mrs. Clinton Cummins and Clinton Brown, carried in two large baskets of gifts composed of china, pottery, glass, Pyrex ware, towels, cutlery, kitchenware, cooking utensils and utensils and a clothesline and clothes pins.

Detroit Continues To Scorch Heels Of Front Runners in American Loop With St. Louis Browns Holding Lead

Tigers Now Only 1½ Games Behind Pace of the Brownies

FIGHT NIGHT GAMES

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

If the baseball season ended today the St. Louis Browns would win their first pennant by .0008 of a percentage point over the New York Yankees, but October with its cash is still far away.

Detroit continued to scorch the heels of the front-runners in the Harridge loop with its seventh straight yesterday, while Mel Ott's surprising Giants ripped along the same win path to No. 7 at the expense of Pittsburgh. The Tigers are only 1½ games behind the Brownies.

Ott was the big individual story for the second time this week as the Giant pilot banged out home runs Nos. 11 and 12 in a 6-4 nod over the Pirates. Master Melvin has hit eight in the last 10 games.

The St. Louis Cardinals pulled out in front by 4½-lengths as Mort Cooper came up with another brilliant eight-hit effort in trimming the Phillies, 9-3. The Majors broke out with a rash of five night games attracting 10,339 fans.

Jim Tobin grabbed his third shutout on a three-hit performance against Cincinnati and drove home two of the Boston runs in the 4-0 edge.

Chicago ended its six-game losing streak behind Claude Passeau but Leo Durocher put on his biggest storm act of the year before the Dodgers bowed, 2-1. Lippy Leo was rejected from the game after Umpire Jocko Conlan disallowed a Brooklyn run.

In the American League Bob Muncrief blanked the Athletics, 3-0 as his St. Louis mates won on four safe blows. Hank Borowy stopped the New York slump with an eight-hit, 5-1, performance against Cleveland.

Thurman Tucker upped his average to .415 with three singles in Chicago's 5-2 edge over Washington, helping Thornton Lee finally make the victory grade after six defeats.

Detroit's seventh straight triumph was a 4-1 nod over Boston on first-inning homers by Rudy York and Pinky Higgins.

CHICO RODRIGUEZ LEADING BATSMAN OF INTERNATIONAL

Took a 14-Point Drop in Averages During Past Week

MAIER SECOND

New York, June 3 —(AP)— Six new names adorned the International League's "Big 10 at Bat" today, but Antonio (Chico) Rodrigues of Syracuse clung to the No. 1 spot despite a 14-point skid to .374.

Close on his heels were two newcomers, Bobby Maier of Buffalo and Elmer (Red) Durrett of Montreal, who jumped from nowhere to the place and show positions with sensational speed.

Maier, youthful third-sacker who hit .360 for Hagerstown last year, leaped from 14th to second place by belting 16 bingles in 34 trips, hoisting his average from .317 to .356. The figures include games of May 31st.

Durrett, Guadalcanal veteran, came up with the big jump of the week, however, climbing from 18th to third place as his percentage soared from a respectable .306 to a robust .344.

Joe Overman, Rochester, sixth with .327; Carroll Lockman, Jersey City, seventh with .323; Tony Castano, Toronto, tied for eighth with .321, and Frank Heller, tenth with .320 are the other first-timers.

Holdovers are Jack Sturdy, Rochester, fourth with .366; John Corriden, Montreal, fifth with .333, and Stan Benjamin, Baltimore, knotted for eighth with Castano at .321.

Maier's base hit outburst gave him the lead in that department with 48 safe knocks.

Morris Aderholt, Montreal, leads in home runs with seven, is second in runs batted in with 33, and in stolen bases with 10.

Jersey City leads in team batting for the fifth straight week with a mark of .284. Toronto retained its fielding honors with a percentage of .969.

Sam Lowry, Baltimore, and Kemp Wicker, Rochester, are tied for pitching leadership, each having won four and lost one.

Sexton Ducks Return Bout With Katan

Palermo Panther Claims Frank Sexton Left the Country So Signs to Meet Baxter

Crying for a return bout with Frank Sexton didn't do John "Fingers" Katan, the Palermo Panter, much good, but it did get him another bout at the Hume Arena next week against Vern "Legs" Baxter, the former Oregon Lumberjack.

"That guy Sexton left the country as soon as he heard I had demanded a return bout. I don't care who it is, but get me some person who thinks he can wrestle and I'll show Belleville fans a few tricks about this wrestling decision business," cried John Katan in the willing ears of Promoter Frank Tunney. However, when Tunney tried to locate Sexton he was no place to be found so Tunney signed six foot four elongated Vern Baxter, the man who made such a fine impression on last week's card to meet Katan in the main bout at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night.

"Baxter is a former Oregon Lumberjack who got his early training topping 60-foot pine trees in the woods of Oregon. Baxter's long legs make his favoured hold the flying scissors, which he has perfected to a degree equal to that of the great Jim Browning. Baxter's heighth will be an asset against Katan and I'm looking for a great bout between these two," suggested Promoter Tunney today.

A new face was added to the card in the person of Abe Zvonkin, the Chicago Jewish champion, who meets Al Dunlop as one of two great preliminaries.

Pensive Goes To Post As Favorite To Win 76th Running Belmont Stakes

By The Canadian Press

With victories in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness to his credit, Warren Wright's Pensive goes to the post today at Belmont Park as the favorite to cop the 76th running of the Belmont Stakes against seven other three-year-olds. A win for the Calumet Farm chestnut would permit him to join the select circle of six horses which have accomplished the triple-win in U. S. turf history. If the eight entries go into the race, the winner receives about $55,000. In the case of Pensive, this would send his winnings for the year to $195,000. Chief opposition is expected from George D. Widener's Platter.

Six races form the card for the 10th annual U. S. scholastic rowing regatta on the Schuylkill River at Philadelphia today, the only crew from Canada being the four from the Wentworth Technical School, Hamilton, who travelled by automobile to the scene.

Famed in the ring as lightweight rivals, Philadelphia Bob Montgomery and Beau Jack both turned their immediate attention yesterday to war fighting. Montgomery, N.B.A. champion, was inducted into the U. S. Army at New Cumberland, Pa., while Jack entered the Army at Fort Benning, Ga.

Johnny Ray of Pittsburgh yesterday intimated there had been discussions regarding a 15-round bout, without purse, between his fighter, Cpl. Billy Conn, former light-heavyweight champion, and Sgt. Joe Louis, holder of the heavyweight crown. It would be held overseas or in the States to entertain servicemen, he said.

A crowd of 17,021, wagering $1,895,968 on eight races, saw jockey Ted Atkinson of Toronto ride three winners at Belmont Park yesterday but he did not figure in the Orchid Hills feature which went to a 12-to-1 outsider, Grant Thorn's Sticky Kitty, by a head over the favored Miss Barbara.

Bishop Scores

A well-known bishop was just home in England after a long stay at one of our distant colonies. Broad of mind as well as physique, he was strolling round the crowded London streets. Suddenly out of the sea of faces he recognized a friend of many years past. He stopped in front of him and put out his hand. The friend looked puzzled and said:

"Where in hell have I met you before—"

The bishop, equal to the occasion, and in no wise disconcerted by this tactless remark, asked good-naturedly:

"Let me see—er—what part of hell do you come from?"

(Townsend takes chance.)

H. W. "Red" Townsend came to bat today with his selection of a No. 1 and No. 2 all-star softball team selected from players who have performed in Belleville and Point Anne for the past ten years or so. Of the 18 players selected the Point Anne "Cementmen" placed six in the running, three in each group. This is one third of the entire selection all of which should reflect with proud admiration upon Bubby Gaulin. Red calls Johnnie Bawden as Belleville's No. 1 pitcher, which seems like a good suggestion if only for the fact Johnnie hurled Belleville to its lone O.A.S.A. championship back in 1936. Red names Jim Hunter as his second choice, but here we like Stan Luffman, if for no other reason than the fact he pitched 18 consecutive victories in the intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns and without suffering a single defeat on the way up. There isn't much question but that Murney Green was and still is the top-ranking catcher, and Murney can hit.

Red named Green, Nicky Sero and Art Genereau from Point Anne on his No. 1 team and Stan Luffman, Art Whitehead and Phil Loft on his second squad from the Cementmen and that speaks well of the Ox Pointers. It's too bad Frank Sedore couldn't read about this selection.

Three members of the No. 1 team are now in the armed services—Art Cole is in the army, Art Genereau in the Air Force and Nicky Sero in the army, the latter two being overseas.

Now that Red has started the ball rolling, how about some other all-star selections? Red's first and second team complete selection will be found elsewhere in today's issue.

(This and that.)

Tex Hughson, Boston Red Sox pitcher, sings cowboy ditties in the orthodox "yipee" style, while his teammate, Frank Metkovich, is a crooner a la Sinatra...Both are of near professional calibre...With all the criticism of big Ernie Lombardi's lack of speed, smart baseball men in both major leagues will tell you that Schnozzle is still the best backstop in the business today... Too many old-timers in comparing the batting averages of early baseball stars with those of today forget that for quite a spell the hitter was not charged with a time at bat when he drove in a runner with a fly ball...Virgil Trucks, who is winning games in brilliant fashion for the Great Lakes Bluejackets, will, according to reports, be a great improved pitcher when he returns to the Detroit Tigers after the war..Encouraged by Lt. Comdr. Mickey Cochrane, Trucks, who used to rely too much on his speed, is said to have developed a sharply breaking curve ball...As a matter of fact, Trucks was working to control a curve before he left the Tigers to join the Navy.

(Remember when.)

John J. McGraw, dynamic baseball leader of the New York Giants, resigned his post as manager of the Polo Grounders 12 years ago today after having served as pilot of the club for 30 years. Altogether he had been active in the game for 42 years. Two years later he died in 1934.

(Gets run around.)

Despite the fact John "Fingers" Katan screamed loud and long in demanding a return bout with Frank Sexton, his protests went for little. It seems Sexton ups and leaves Promoter Tunney's jurisdiction and flies home to safer climes down around Columbus, Ohio. So perturbed became Katan that he accepted a bout with Vern "Long-legs" Baxter, the Oregon woodchopper for next week.

JERSEY GIANTS SET TORRID PACE

Defeat Hapless Syracuse Chiefs Who Lose Last Ten Games

(By The Associated Press.)

Jersey City and Baltimore, currently the hottest clubs in the International League, continued to set a torrid pace as both were victorious in Friday night's games.

The Little Giants, behind effective pitching of Andy Hansen, defeated the hapless Syracuse Chiefs 5-3, who now have lost their last 10 games. The win gave the Giants eight victories in their last nine games and increased their first place lead over Toronto and Baltimore to 1 1-2 games.

The Orioles won their seventh in succession, downing the last-place Newark Bears 9-7, to deadlock Toronto for second place. Frank Skaff made three of the Orioles 10 hits and drove in two runs.

Montreal and Rochester were halted by rain after the Royals had gained a 3-0 lead in three innings.

Toronto, June 3—(CP)—This is a slack season for Canadian sports, so naturally the columnists are hard put to get their daily efforts together, and have to reach for material. That's the reason more than a few of them been delving than a few of them have been delving into the intricacies of female participation in sports and getting themselves in the bad graces of the girls.

Latest to get involved is H. A. Cole of the Guelph, Ont., mercury. He doesn't object to the girls in games, but is unkind enough to believe that the men spectators aren't so interested in the keen competition as they are in the keen curves on display. And, says Mr. Cole, it's quite often the older men who display much eager interest in the softball lasses.

"They may totter down to the park on crutches," he says blithely. "They may laboriously trundle themselves along in wheelchairs . . . Just the same, they'll get there if it's the last thing they do."

Perhaps in all this we may have discovered the Elixir Ponce de Leon was looking for!

St. Kitts In:

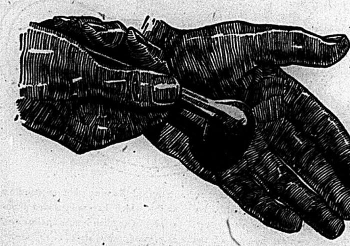
The rumor had been spread abroad that St. Catharines, Ont., thrice holder of the Dominion Lacrosse championship, would have no team this year. But now comes word St. Kitts will field a senior boxla team after all, and that backers of the game are waking to the importance of encouraging the juniors and juveniles in the sport. Lacrosse could use the boost that the younger players could give it in a few years.

Saturday Subjects:

Bicycle racing in Winnipeg has been hard hit by the war. So far, 63 riders from the Belgian Club are in the armed forces, leaving only a dozen or so to hold the fort for the duration . . . Latest trouble on the labor front is the referees' strike ultimatum in Toronto. Unless they get more beans in the pay envelopes by June 10, soccer officials threaten to walk out and leave the boys to play by themselves. There'll be spirited opposition, but the Halifax Defence Baseball League is seriously considering staging Sunday ball games—with no tariff collected at the gate of course. The fight for Sabbath sports has always been keen, but so far its advocates have made little progress . . . Hazel Baynton and Jean Aiken, Star Battery of Stratford's Girls' Softball team, have been lured away to Montreal by the female Royals . . .

'Red' Townsend Selects All-Star Softball Team

Who would you select as the best softball player to perform in the Belleville and District Men's Softball League over a period of the last decade?



Well, H. W. "Red" Townsend, veteran mentor of junior softball in Belleville, didn't select the best softball player, but he delved deeply into his memory to select not only the No. 1 all star team, but an alternate team to protect his No. 1 selection. Three of the players selected on Mr. Townsend's first team are today in the armed services and two of these have been overseas for sometime. The trio in the services are Art Cole, Nicky Sero and Art Genereau. Then on his second team he has Harold Reid and Archie Green also in the King's uniform.

If you are at all interested here are Red's two selections:

First Team	Position	Second Team
John Bawden	Pitcher	L. Bateman
James Hunter	Pitcher	Stan Luffman
M. Green	Catcher	C. Tuttle
Art Cole	1st Base	G. LaBonne
Ted Henn	2nd Base	A. Whitehead
G. Ethier	3rd Base	H. Reid
Nick Sero	Shortstop	Cy Barriage
J. Barriage	Left Field	E. Dickey
A. Genereau	Centre Field	Arch Green
Stan Amo	Right Field	Phil Loft

Now there are "Red" Townsend's selections, any others or any comments?

LESSON NO. 22

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Now Elsie Crow can get your goat, with every glance, she'll raise the boat. Such lots of points dishes out and yes mam, yette she's satisfied with pennies.

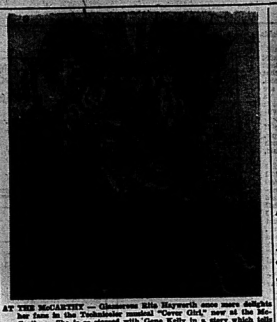
Our first hand of this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠ K Q 4	♠ 5
♥ K Q 8	♥ 7 6 5 4 3
♦ K 8	♦ 9 7 2
♣ Q J 8	♣ 5 4 3
WEST	EAST
♠ J 10 9 8 6	♠ A 7 3
♥ 10 9	♥ A
♦ None	♦ A Q J 10 6 5 4
♣ A K 7 6	♣ 10 9 2

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 S	2 D.
2 S	4 NT
5 D	5 PT
6 S	6 S

Now some of this bidding sound screwy to you? Could it be the last two rounds of bidding? If so, you are not familiar with ace and king shooting conventions.



From the moment south opened, north had slambidding. When south showed a stiff, trick with the raise to four spades, north was able to see 12 tricks in their pair. Slam then looked even better.

All north bid four no-trump, the signal for asking partner how many kings he had. The south six heart response was the signal for showing two kings.

If south had shown four kings, north was ready for a grand slam. Because an opener shows two sure tricks. And with no aces, sure trick, must be 7 Q combinations. So, south must have queens with his kings.

But when four queens will not assure grand slam with two kings in the hand of opponents. So, north stops at six spades.

All without the aid of mirrors.

AT THE McCARTHY — Glamorous Rita Hayworth once more delights her fans in the Technicolor musical "Cover Girl," now at the McCarthy. She is co-starred with Gene Kelly in a story which tells how a Cover Girl gets that way.

AT THE CAPITOL — Jack La Rue and Richard Norris in a violent attempt to get a "mickey" in "Three Muskly," Sunday, midnight at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Design for Scandal," starring Rosalind Russell and Walter Pidgeon.

AT THE BELLE — Glorious Irene Dunne is co-starred with Spencer Tracy in M.G.M.'s "A Guy Named Joe," featuring Van Johnson and Ward Bond. It is a stirring story, entertaining and down to earth for all moviegoers.

"Design for Scandal"

Ladies, there's a weak moment for every gal! Whether she's 16 or 60, whether she's a judge or a housewife, she succumbs at her weak moment, but it takes the right man to find it! Rosalind Russell's a lady judge. But watch Walter Pidgeon make her change the law for love! When she weakens and the love-laughs fly fast and furious designed for howls! "Design for Scandal" opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

Hitherto forbidden scenes within the walls of California's San Quentin Prison form the background for much of the dramatic action in "Prison Mutiny," the Monogram picture which opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre with Edward Arnold, Gloria Dickson and Jack La Rue in featured roles.

San Quentin is the largest penitentiary in the United States, with more than 4,000 prisoners confined in its cells. Through the co-operation of Warden Clinton Duffy, director of institutions, Monogram cameramen were permitted to photograph scenes inside the prison, including not only the "yard" where the inmates exercise and recreate, but interior work department and cell blocks. Many of these scenes were incorporated in the picture, while others formed background for closeup scenes of the players in the film story.

The Canadian "Universal News" completes the big bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cover Girl".

A dazzling, kaleidoscopic musical, Columbia's "Cover Girl" starring Rita Hayworth, opened today at the McCarthy Theatre and the packed house found it completely enchanting. Miss Hayworth moves through the songs and the numerous sparkling production numbers with the grace that suit is the 6th best musicals of the year medleyed into one.

AT THE BELLE

"A Guy Named Joe"

In the film now playing at the Belle, one of the characters explained the title as "Any guy who is a right guy, is a guy named Joe," and all those in the American Air Force glorified in the movie, "A Guy Named Joe," and right guys. The film pivots around the old superstition that fliers never die.

"A Guy Named Joe" is the story of two air officers, Irene Dunne and Van Johnson, who fall in love as the result of a chance meeting. Dunne plays the part of a girl who is left behind by Johnson when he goes on a mission. Johnson is presumed dead, but returns to earth as a ghost to help Dunne find happiness with another flier, played by Ward Bond.

Spencer Tracy, a reckless and carefree pilot. His work is characterized by a disregard for his fellow officers and to Dorinda Durston, played by Miss Dunne, a Ferry Command pilot, who loves him desperately. Their love affair is marred by only casual attention paid by Dorinda's worry. Finally, Pete agrees to return to the United States as an instructor, but before his departure he is sent on a reconnaissance mission. He goes to his death bombing an enemy transport.

His awakens to find himself in a strange place, the "heaven" of dead airmen. Here he learns from "The General", played by Lionel Barrymore, that he has a new job that of aiding young student pilots to become proficient airmen. Pete's charge specifically is young Van Johnson. Unseen by any mortal, Pete sits with Van as he flies and Pete teaches him all of his tricks. Soon traits of his personality begin to appear in Van. When Van is assigned to combat duty in New Guinea, Pete follows. There he finds Dorinda again, still grieving for him until she falls in love with Van, unaware that he is the ghost of Pete's friend. After a thrilling climax during which Dorinda carries out a dangerous mission, she returns safely to Van and a happy future life, Pete returns to the "General" for another assignment content with what he has done.

The Canadian News of the Day, and the M-G-M cartoon cartoon, "Batty Baseball" precede the feature attraction. The engagement ends on Wednesday.

JOYCE DEFEATS H. ARMSTRONG

Gains Unanimous Decision In Fifteen Fought 10-Round Bout

Chicago, June 3 (AP)—Henry Armstrong, boxing's former triple title-holder, stepped on a broken rung on his climb back up the fistic ladder to the game's pot of gold last night.

Willie Joyce, the 26-year-old negro from Gary, Ind., who broke even in two previous encounters with the former king of three boxing divisions, upset the fistic dope book and won the rubber match by a unanimous decision in a 10-round, fiercely fought bout.

Belying his 29 years and 13 years of ring warfare, and apparently not bothered by the heat, the Los Angeles negro, an 8-5 favorite, never stopped swinging from the opening bell to the end. And while he displayed the championship form he had power and motion, many of his punches missed their mark.

The 130-pounder, who weighed 126 compared to Armstrong's 141 1-4, broke Kayo Ray Robinson's native ring victory string of 15 bouts before 10,387 fans, and dealt him the second of four beatings suffered by the former champion since he returned to the ring two years ago.

In Manhattan

By PAT THERES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 3. (CP) — The first foretaste of Summer heat hit Broadway this week, causing managers to speculate morosely on the habits of playgoers, who abun theatres when the mercury and the humidity mount.

They reflected unhappily, too, on the increased federal entertainment tax—raised last April from 10 to 30 per cent—as a deterrent to the patron.

But the outlook isn't as gloomy as it might be from a business standpoint.

New Yorkers and the visitors who are thronging the city still find it almost impossible to book seats for long-standing hits like "Oklahoma!", "The Voice of the Turtle", "The Searching Wind" and "One Touch of Venus".

Summer Slump

Attendance has fallen off for a number of less-popular productions and some that have been drawing well during the cooler spring days have quietly folded up. As Summer proper approaches, there are fewer new shows appearing, too.

One newcomer is "Carousel", but it is not strictly a newcomer to New York. The Theatre Guild staged this satire-fantasy based on orphanage in the Southern States last Autumn and it now has opened at the National Theatre. The play is amusing but lacks the Pollyanna touch to make it a success.

Also opening this week is a double bill, consisting of "Accordion to Love" and "A Stranger". These productions, at the Mansfield Theatre, opened too late for review here.

INITIAL ACTION TAKEN

Toronto, June 3 —(CP)—Initial action for the formation of an American Federation of Labor Union affiliated with the Bartenders' Union and embracing in its membership employees of the Ontario Liquor Control Board was taken last night with the formation of an organizational committee. Date set for the next meeting was June 14.

PLANE WRECKAGE

REPORTED IN B. C.

Vancouver, June 3 — (CP) — A search party left today for an isolated spot in the interior of Vancouver Island where wreckage of an airplane is reported lying somewhere between Nanaimo and Youbou. Officials said they had no proof the machine was the R. C. A. F. trainer bomber which disappeared Monday with five airmen aboard.

CHAPTER 7.

"You shouldn't have gone there alone. At night too! It wasn't that important!" she scolded gently, and then told Dad: "Kay lost her compact over there this afternoon. The one I'd just given her".

Dad plainly accepted the explanation.

"Too bad. Was Roberts with you?" he asked.

I shook my head.

"You were alone? But—how did you get in?"

"The door was open. The one in the rear we'd used when we left", I lied, after a pause that would have made anyone but Dad suspicious.

He shrugged helplessly.

"Quite a mess you walked into—for a powder compact! Well, I'd better tell the police and get the wire cleared before this interferes with my Washington call".

A moment later he was talking into the phone.

Philip Wentworth speaking. I want to report a murder. Please send someone to the ground floor apartment of the old Burton house. . . .No, the murder didn't happen here. I'll tell your man when he comes".

The police! I felt as if someone had struck me over the head. They'd ask questions. It would all be dragged out of me now, my poor secret that I'd guarded five long years. tI mustn't be dragged out. There must be a way, and I'd find it—

I pulled myself up from the chair by sheer will power. "I'll go to my room and freshen up. I must look a sight", I said wearily—with an imploring glance at Aunt Millie.

She understood, and came with me. Wordlessly, her arm protectingly around my waist.

My foot was on the lowest step of the stairs when the strange presentiment of disaster came back to nervous reaction to the low, excited me. It probably was nothing but whispers behind the closed kitchen door. But it was so strong, I walked out of Aunt Millie's arm and into the kitchen.

Nettie and Mae were putting something into a basket, on a side table, with Roberts standing close to them. They were talking in hissing whispers, their heads glued together, and when they saw me, they drew apart and stared at me guiltily.

"There's been a murder in the other Burton house", I told them, mechanically. "In the library, on the second floor. Its Professor Stodward, the gentleman who was here for lunch. The police will be here any minute".

They didn't answer. Not one of them cried out with surprise or shock about the dreadful news. They just stared mutely, with fear written all over their faces.

Fear. Not horror.

"You didn't tell them a thing they didn't already know", Aunt Millie said pensively, on our way upstairs.

Upstairs in my room Aunt Millie went into action.

"Quick! Tell me what happened. Everything, Kay!" she urged. "With the police on their way here, we have to decide on what we'll tell them".

I realized the necessity as well as she, and so I told her the story of my unfortunate expedition, concisely, but with as many details as I remembered.

"Do you think your— er—Bruce killed Stoddard?" she asked when I had finished.

"I don't know", I said—somewhat hysterically. "I'm afraid. "And I don't care. It's mean and it's selfish, but—all I want is to keep out of it, protect myself, see that my stupid marriage isn't dragged through the tabloids, all mixed up with murder".

"Same here", Aunt Millie agreed emphatically. "That's why we must have our story ready".

"No one suspects the missing heir was married", Aunt Millie continued. "No one has an idea he's here—outside of the few who know and, I bet, have a real good reason for keeping quiet about it. So, why should you let the Cliffport police in on somethnig that is really none of their business?"

"All right. What'll we tell them?" I asked.

"That you'd lost your compact and went after it. It's what I told your father—and we're stuck with it".

"I'll pick one out and plant it somewhere", I agreed, slowly getting out of my chair.

Aunt Millie pushed me back. "None of yours is good enough. I'll lose my black enamel case with the jeweled tree. We'll say I'd just given it to you as a present".

"But it's so lovely and valuable", I objected. "If someone stole it—"

"I'd have lost a trinket to avoid a family scandal", she finished for me. "Don't you see it has to be valuable, to account for your going into a dark, empty house. Your cheap two-dollar grimcracks would n't do at all".

"But—" I began again.

"Don't waste our time", Aunt Millie cut me short. "The compact is lost. We go on from there. You looked for Roberts, and when you couldn't find him you tried the door in the rear wing and it opened. That's what you told your father. So that's the way it was".

"But the door'll be locked", I worried.

"So it is locked. So you slammed it shut when you ran out";

"And the window is wide open. What do I say about that?" I puzzled.

"Nothing. "You don't know a thing about the window", Aunt Millie advised, and then gasped: "Oh, megosh! It'll be full of your fingerprints".

"It won't", I told her. "I wore gloves, to protect my hands".

She let out a long breath of relief. "Whew! That's a help! Then we have nothing to worry about. Here, come to the dressing table and fix your makeup. You look like the wrath of God".

I did as I was told. That is, I tried to. My fingers were so shaky I couldn't get my mouth on straight.

"Here, I'll do it". Aunt Millie took the lipstick from my hand and swiftly and surely went about renovating my face. "I can't make up my mind, did the 'heir' do it or didn't he", she cogitated during her occupation. "That fool Professor was plainly doing a Raffles—the Lord knows why—so, if Bruce surprised him at it and, well, killed him in a struggle, he was within his rights. Why should he run away then?"

"Perhaps he didn't. He may still be there", I ventured when she was through with my mouth and I could talk again. "I'm not at all sure it was Bruce running past me in the dark".

"That's what I'm driving at. Should you tell the police that part of your adventure, or keep it to yourself".

"Whatever you say". I was still too number with horror to be anything but docile.

"You tell them", Aunt Millie decided. "Whoever it was he probably left fingerprints, or something, behind. And they'd get him anyway. Besides—something tells me our vanishing problem number one is safe by now, murder, manslaughter or what have you notwithstanding".

"What makes you think so?" I asked hopefully.

She nodded downwards. "Your help. They were packing a lunch basket when we burst in on them. For whom?"

"Roberts, probably. They feed him all the time", I said after some deliberation.

"Roberts me eye!" Aunt Millie sniffed. "They know that you know they feed him. So, why should they turn into wooden Indians when you catch them at it? No, my pet! They knew about the murder. I told you that on the stairs. They know a darn sight more than you do. They—"

A knock at the door ended her conjectures.

It was Nettie, calm and composed again, come to announce: "Mr. Wentworth asks, will the ladies please to come down. The police has arrived".

Two tall, broad-shouldered men in raincoats were dripping all over the hall rug when we came down, and a third one, who had shed his coat, was in the library with Dad.

He was Inspector Pettengill, the important member of the trio. Given name Joe. Short for Josiah, not Joseph.

About forty years old and an inch or so below six feet, he stood firmly planted on sturdy legs. Not fat, but big-boned and heavily muscled, he gave the impression that he enjoyed his three square meals a day, while his friendly round face, with eyes twinkling from between innumerable fine laughing wrinkles, and a mouth turning distinctly upwards at the corners, indicaide that the enjoyment extended to all the other good things of life including a joke.

Althogether, he was the direct opposite of what I had pictured a Yankee policeman to be, and I felt a load slipping off my shoulders at first sight of him.

"Your father — Mr. Wentworth here—just told me what a bad shock you've had, Miss Wentworth", he said pleasantly, after Dad had introduced us. "And I'm afraid I'll have to add to it by asking you to face your distressing find once more. But first let's sit down, and you tell me exactly what happened. We have a good fifteen minutes before the coroner and the rest of my boys can get here. Not to mention Mr. Forrestall, seeing I only just phoned him to come".

His smile, and the chatty way in which he approached the gruesome subject were so reassuring, I dropped into the chair, he indicated with a sigh of relief, and dived right into my tale—that is, into the edited and amended version of it Aunt Millie and I had concocted.

"Courageous young lady, ain't you? Going into a dark, empty house looking for a lost powder box", he commented when I had ended, without a trace of disbelief. "What was the time, did you say?"

"I hadn't said. And I didn't know. Dad came to my rescue.

"It must have been after eight-thirty", he pointed out. "My sister and I sat down to play chess at that hour, and Kay excused herself and went to her room. I'm expecting a long-distance call from Washington, that's why I've been keeping track of the time".

"Hmm. I see. And when did Miss Wentworth come back? Can you help me with that too?" asked the Inspector.

"At nine-ten or eleven", Aunt Millie answered for Dad. "I happened to glance at the clock on the mantel a second before she rushed in'. Her lips twitched in a slightly malicious grin. "I was timing a move my brother—wasn't making, on the chessboard".

"Hmm, I see", said the nspector again. Then he decided: "Well, might as well go ahead as wait. Go and put on a coat, Miss Wentworth. It's coming down hard.—You can come too, Mr. Wentworth and —er—Miss Wentworth. And, if you don't mind: it's kinder awkward, having two Miss Wentworths, and I don't like to say the old and the young one, so —may I say Miss Wentworth and Miss Kay?"

The permission was granted readily. But with his invitation to view murder the Inspector had only partial success. Dad had to refuse it—with honest regrets, I believe—because of the pending call.

Aunt Millie, however, assented eagerly, and quickly ran upstairs for a coat, throwing it over her shoulder: "You needn't come with me, Kay. I'll bring your things".

I wondered at the time whether the remark was instinctive, or meant to allay any lurking suspicions of conspiracy the genial Inspector might harbor.

If it was the latter, it only existed in her guilty mind. Inspector Pettengill forgot her existence the instant she was out of sight and started bellowing orders to his men.

"You—Hatch!" he called into the hall. "You stay here and wait. When Doc Toble and Jim Palmerton come, send 'em over to the new Burton house, and when Mr. Forrestall arrives, bring him over. From the street, everybody. No trampling up the gardens—Flynn, you come with us. But first see if you can find out where Roberts is. Nettie and Mae will know".

It was uncanny. Even if Cliffport wasnt' New York, how could the Inspector know the names of everyone in town, and their occupations too!

"Roberts was in the kitchen a short while back", I offered.

"Oh, You went looking for him all over the place and he was setting in your kitchen?" The Inspector twinkled at me, a great deal too fatherly for his years.

"It does seem silly", I agreed. "But —I never thought of the possibility. Besides, I don't know if he was there when I left. I only saw him after I came back".

"Hmm. And how was that?" the Inspector inquired.

"I went to tell Nettie and Mae the awful thing I'd discovered. And he was there", I said—truthfully. Flynn reported when he returned, with Nettie and Mae in tow.

"Why, he went out right after Miss Kay told us. Said he better get back where he belonged", Nettie informed the Inspector. And Mae added her firm "Ayah".

The Inspector was helping me into the raincoat Aunt Millie had produced in the meantime when the twins made their statement, and I could see a frown pass over his cheerfulness.

"Hmm, I see", he murmured, half to himself, and then added in an official tone: "Let's go. Same way you went, Miss Kay".

"That would be—through the service door" I told him, turning in the right direction.

The Inspector followed me, trailed by Aunt Millie and Flynn, and only came up, beside me when we were in the grounds.

"Why?" he asked suddenly, with a jerk of his thumb toward the door through which we had just passed.

"Didn't want Dad and Aunt Millie to stop me", I answered in the best imitation of his manner I could manage.

"Would saved you a peck of trouble if they made you stay to home", he came back with a dry chuckle.

And that was all he said. From then on, he walked beside me in silence, concentrating his attention on the wet, narrow path and flashing his powerful torch to right and left.

We were about five steps from the rear entrance, when the house before us sprang brilliantly into light.

"Well, I'll be—! I call that service", the Inspector said under his breath. "Flynn, you been phoning the light company?"

"The light company had nothing to do with it", I told him quickly. "The electricity has never been turned off. Roberts must have thrown on the main switch in the basement".

"You know a lot, don't you?" Inspector Pettengill beamed on me.

Somehow, I didn't like his smile. "Only what Mr. Forrestall told us this afternoon". I said stiffly, and pushed ahead as if to open the door—which, I am sure, I would find locked.

But it wasn't. It gave under my touch and swung inward, disclosing the long, carpeted passageway through which we had left in the afternoon, between the back parlor and a few smaller rooms on the opposite side. And from the end of it, Roberts was quickly advancing toward us.

"Oh, here you are, Roberts!" Inspector Pettengill greeted him. "You always keep the doors open so the burglars can walk in?"

"Only this here one. Till I make my evening rounds", Roberts answered sourly. "And they never been no burglars in Cliffport long's I recollect".

"That's right. Nor no murders neither", the Inspector agreed. "Well, nice of you to fix it so we can see. Where's the corpse?"

"I dunno. Upstairs somewhere, the young lady says", Roberts shrugged sullenly. "Me, I got no stummick for corpses".

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night, and after supper we were playing games and arguing and calling each other different insulting names, and ma said to pop, Isn't that dreadful, William? Why cant 2 boys play together as though they were friends instead of bitter enemies?

Because they're 2 boys, pop said.

Being a good answer, and he kept on reading his paper and ma kept on reading hers, saying, Here's that word again, William, Hypothetical. It seems lawyers in the paper are always asking some witness a hypothetical question. What does it mean in a few simple words, William? she said.

A hypothetical question is an if question, pop said. For example, what would be your attitude if such and such were the case? he said, and ma said, It's still not clear.

Giving me an idea, and I said, I think I know, ma. For instants if I said to Artie, "How would you feel if I told you that you had a natural expression like a squeezed handfull of left over mud?"—that would be a hypothetical question, I said, and Artie said, Sure, Aunt Pawleen, if I said to Benny, "How would you like it if I told you that you remind me of a last year's tomato stuffed with fish bones?"—that would be a hypothetical question too.

Cease firing, you two, I'm sure the lady has a clear understanding of the word by this time, pop said, and ma said, Indeed I have. For instants a hypothetical question would be if I asked you boys whether you'd be surprised if you were sent right off to bed after one more any such outbreak, and believe me I'm asking you, she said.

A perfect example, pop said, and I said, Well anyways, ma, me and Artie proved the meaning of it to you, so that shows experience is the best teacher.

Thanks kindly I'm sure, but the hypothetical question still stands, ma said.

Meaning we better watch our step, which we did.

Did Not Advocate Radio Licence Fee Increase

Ottawa, June 3 — (CP)—J. D. Carson, Toronto, executive vice-president of the Periodical Press Association, told the Commons Radio Committee Friday he wanted to emphasize that "we did not yesterday and do not today advocate any increase in licence fees."

He referred to a report carried by The Canadian Press in which he was quoted as saying he would like to see radio licence fees boosted from $2.50 to $3, so that the CBC's advertising revenue could be cut.

He then quoted a section of the transcript of his evidence yesterday in which he said he was referring to conversations which had taken place in 1936 between a press committee, government and CBC officials. The transcript said in part:—

"When we were asked as a group if we were in favor of increasing the licence fee to increase the service to the public, we said that we were and would very readily support a $3 fee. It was finally found more expedient to make it $2.50 and we supported that fee."

"The discussions go back to 1936 when many matters of corporation policy were still in the making. A study of licence fees being exacted in other countries revealed that annual fees as high as $5 and $7.50 were then currently being imposed. It seemed to us not at all out of line with such figures to contemplate at that time a licence fee in Canada of $3 per annum for the purpose of better serving the Canadian people by extending and improving the facilities and programs of the CBC."

He said the transcript of evidence as given yesterday showed he had said this:—

"We do feel that if there is to be unlimited growth in the drive for advertising revenue, which comes out of the one pocket available to support the press in all its phases in this country, then it raises the question of whether or not the licence fee should be continued in fairness to the public.

"We would rather see, I think I may say this very definitely, the licence fee continued and the amount of advertising revenue limited, so that there is an adequate amount for the CBC to carry on its program but at the same time a minimum of invasion of that field of revenue by means of which the press, lives, moves and has its being."

Dr. J. J. McCann (L — Renfrew South) and committee chairman then asked him if the CBC commercial revenue was held to a certain scale would he now support an increased licence fee, say of $3. Mr. Carson answered "No."

Ottawa, June 3 — (CP)—Parliament approaches subjects like the handling of empty beer bottles with a certain diffidence, but once the step is taken anything can happen.

P. C. Black (PC — Cumberland) raised the question of handling empty beer bottles in Nova Scotia thus:

"I am expected to discuss beer bottles although I am not an authority on this article."

When he finished, he said:

"I am sorry to have taken up all this time dealing with beer bottles, upon which I am no authority."

When Douglas Abbott, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Ilsley, replied, he began:

"I am not an expert in second-hand beer bottles or Nova Scotia politics . . ."

Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC — York-Sunbury): "Deal with Quebec politics."

Mr. Abbott: "Nor Quebec politics."

Robert Fair (SC — Battle River), rising to speak on tea, coffee and milk prices in restaurants:

"If we now are through dealing with second-hand bottles, perhaps we can return to the cup that cheers."

J. W. Noseworthy (CCF — York South): "I sincerely hope that the Prices Board can survive the attack that was made upon them with empty beer bottles tonight."

Teeth: Mr. Fair (speaking of a restaurant beef sandwich): "If you get your teeth into it you will be lucky to get them out again."

J. R. MacNicol (PC — Toronto Davenport): "I suppose you would leave false teeth in."

Mr. Fair: "False teeth are better than none at all."

Lonely: Mrs. Cora Casselman (L—Edmonton East) commented on the CBC efforts to send programs to remote regions, and said lonely places were not always in isolated areas.

Paul Martin, parliamentary assistant to Labor Minister Mitchell: "No, Toronto on Sunday for instance."

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — The May meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church was held in the vestry on Tuesday with ten ladies attending. Two quilts were quilted and a pot luck dinner served at noon.

At the usual time the president, Mrs. J. E. Bateman, opened the meeting. The president, being the delegate to the W.M.S. Presbyterial in Belleville, gave an interesting report. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

The teachers and public school pupils enjoyed a holiday on May 24th.

Mr. Donald Richardson of Toronto spent the weekend at his home here.

Mrs. J. E. Brown spent Wednesday at the home of her brother, Mr. R. A. Morton, Foxboro.

Mrs. Wilson Sherry of Belleville is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Coulter.

Mrs. M. Deacon of Grenfall, Sask., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. A. Richardson and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reid of Ivanhoe spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Reid.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton of Toronto spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Ervine Bateman.

Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Flatt of Belleville spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mrs. A. A. Richardson and family.

The War Today— Vast Allied Power Held in Leash Awaiting Hour to Strike

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

While nobody yet has been able to put salt on the tail of D-Day one gets the definite impression that the gigantic Allied forces which are drawn up in battle array on the vital eastern and western sides of Hitler's European fortress are so well set that they could strike at will.

There's an atmosphere of vast power held in leash, pending the arrival of that mysterious moment which the favored few of the Allied high command have chosen. You get what I mean from events on the Russo-German front in Romania.

There in an effort to forestall the coming storm, the Germans have been making furious attacks against a Red line which has held them with contemptuous strength. Up in southeastern Poland—gateway to Germany—the Nazis also have been making anxious exploratory thrusts, only to beat their heads against a similar stonewall.

So it is, too, with the western Allies. The intensive, invasion-type bombing continues apace. Perhaps the Allied air fleets still have considerable spade work they want to do before the amphibious forces get into action—or perhaps the task is about done. That's not for the public to know. Still, many observers feel confident that the invasion force can strike at any moment it wants to.

Meanwhile Field Marshal Kesselring will have to use all his undoubted skill to save himself from the total disaster which can grow out of the defeat he already has suffered.

The Marshal sustained nasty blows when Allied forces got astride Via Casilina, thereby cutting the main line of retreat from his southern front, while others thrust through the German line into the Alban hills south of Rome. Loss of the Alban hill defences would be a catastrophe for him, since he would be cut off from the highways, most of which lead to Rome. Thus much depends on the outcome of the fierce battle for the Alban hills.

Torpedoed Tankers Saved

(By Carl Wall, condensed from "The Nautical Gazette")

The gray tanker wallowing through the sea was an easy target. Within a few seconds, three torpedoes tore through her steel sides.

Less than a hundred yards away the submarine surfaced. The U-boat commander surveyed the damage. Already the ship was losing trim. It was always the same with these tankers. One torpedo usually finished them. This one had had three. The British seamen heard the Nazi skipper bawl the order to submerge.

This particular tanker, however, was not finished. There were gaping holes in her hull through which a truck might be driven, but under her own power she made her way 1,100 miles across the Atlantic to a United States port.

Ironically the basic factor behind the tanker's miraculous escape was the same power which drove the torpedoes to their target. Compressed air, harnessed in a device called the Nelson Airline, is giving the vulnerable oil tanker, once the sitting duck of the Battle of the Atlantic, a defense against undersea attack.

The airline—now used on many tankers, both British and American—is the brain child of a 53-year-old British engineer, William Lynn Nelson, who himself worked for 20 years in the engine rooms of tankers. In London recently, I talked with Nelson, a ruddy-faced man of medium height with quick, birdlike eyes and an air of restless energy.

"First of all", he said in a matter-of-fact way. "I'd like it clearly understood that this is not an invention. It is merely application and I am only an engineer".

With that settled, he placed a model oil tanker on the desk between us. A tanker is really like a half-dozen oil tins, soldered together lengthwise. When her separate, watertight compartments are loaded with oil, she lies low in the sea. She stays afloat because there is a certain amount of air as well as oil in those compartments—as well as in the rest of the ship. When a torpedo strikes, water rushing in through the shattered side displaces the air, throws the tanker off balance and she turns turtle. That was how most of the tankers were going to the bottom.

From the start of the savage U-boat attacks, Nelson wrestled with the problem. Then one day he was called in as consulting engineer on a salvage job. A tanker had hit a magnetic mine and lay, half-submerged, on a sand bar. From the decks of two tugs alongside rose the put-put of air-compressing machines.

As soon as he heard the chatter of those air compressors Nelson knew he had the answer. If there were some way to blow air into the holed compartment of a torpedoed tanker, and maintain the pressure in sufficient strength, the water could be forced out and a wall of compressed air built up to hold back the sea.

Nelson caught the first train back to London and his drawing board. In the engine room of his blueprint tanker, he placed an air compressor exactly like the ones used by road gangs to drive pneumatic drills. This would obtain its power from the tanker's own Diesel engines. Since the ship's engines might be crippled, he installed on deck, in the bow of the tanker, a duplicate compressor powered by a small four-cylinder engine. Along the deck he ran a metal pipe through which air could be pumped from either of the compressors. At intervals along this airline, he welded a series of quick-action connections for a flexible hose. A similar connection was welded to the top of each of the tanker's oil compartments.

Now, if a torpedo struck the ship, the crew could swiftly couple the hose to the airline and to the damaged compartment, and the air compressor would build a lifesaving wall of air holding back the ocean.

Nelson's blueprint tanker had a chance with torpedoes now — but what about other hazards? Fire, for example? In a torpedoed ship, the suction lines which feed the fire fighting hose are often disabled.

Why couldn't these same air compressors be used to power portable pneumatic pumps? So down on the drawing board went specifications for light, air-driven pumps which could be carried on a man's shoulder. By throwing the pump's hose line over the side, sea water could be sucked up and poured on the flames at the rate of half a ton a minute.

Oil fires often need chemicals. So Nelson provided the pumps with alternate nozzles which could be used to spray pyrene foam.

Nelson's airline took seven months of meticulous planning. But at last it was ready.

In August 1942, newspapers printed the incredible saga of the tanker Ohio, which, though torpedoed, dive-bombed and shelled, managed to get through to Malta with desperately needed fuel. Other reports told equally unbelievable stories. One tanker was torpoed forward. Gasoline flowed out of her tanks in such volume that the submarine, which surfaced close by, dared not risk shelling because of the fumes. Yet, when the tanks were put under pressure, the vessel stayed afloat and limped to port.

Tanker masters began using the airline for things even Nelson had not foreseen. On one occasion, the steering machinery of a torpedoed tanker was crippled by lack of power. The chief engineer solved that by coupling the steam pipes of the steering machinery to the airline. The crew of the same tanker was able to have hot meals when the compressors were put to work pumping fuel oil into the galley stove.

A complete installation of the apparatus can be made on most tankers in 48 hours and at small cost.

According to marine experts, the saving of a single ship more than paid for intallation on every vessel of the British tanker fleet—to say nothing of the saving of human lives.

Mr. Nelson has not patented his device. It has been made available free to all the United Nations. His only financial reward has been $200 given him by the Royal Arts Society. He gave this to Merchant Service Charities.

"I am not a sentimental man," he told me, "but I did spend 20 years at sea with the men on the tankers and I have an unbounded admiration for them. If I have saved one of those lives, I feel amply rewarded.

On the way down from Nelson's office, I remembered that the months he had devoted to working out the plans for his airline had been at the height of the blitz. I asked the elevator about it.

"Stayed right here in the building, day and night, Mr. Nelson did," he answered, "Slept on a cot and never went home except for the weekends and then he'd take his precious drawings under his arm. Right through the worst of the blitz he worked with the masonry falling all around us and Jerry dropping eggs right on the doorstep. A good man at concentrating—that's what Mr. Nelson is, sir."

Later I learned one other thing. Nelson had had a son on a tanker. The ship was torpedoed on its first voyage out.

BABY VICTIM OF GERMAN SUB

The baby, centre, is Beatrice Trapunski, 56-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Trapunski, Polish refugees, shown with her. The baby was one of three persons who lost their lives when a German submarine stopped the Portuguese liner Serpa Pinto in mid-ocean and forced the ship's passengers to take to lifeboats. The baby was lost in the transfer. Later, on orders from Berlin, the castaways were permitted to return aboard the liner and proceed with the exception of two Americans who were taken prisoners of the U-boat. The child in rear centre is Irene Trapunski, another child of the family. The photo was sent to Rabbi Fishkin of Baltimore, friend of the Trapunskis, some months ago.

House Hears Plea That Men And Women Pensioners In Canada Receive Pensions Immediately

Govt. Urged to Take Over Full Administration of Old Age Pensions

WANT INCREASE

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 3 — (CP) — A plea that the men and women pioneers of Canada be granted a pension "right away" — "in the eremtide of their lives" — as a matter of right and not as charity was made yesterday by several members of the Commons.

The plea came from several members in opposition groups and from two government supporters during examination of a $56,000,000 item in the Finance Department's war appropriation estimates, which provided a supplement to pensions for the blind and the aged.

The members urged that the Federal government take over full control of the administration of old age pensions; that the pensions be increased, and that the eligible age for pensions be reduced from 70 to 60 or 65 years.

Making the suggestions were Ch. G. McGeer — Vancouver Burrard), Gordon Graydon, Conservative representative House Leader, — A. W. Neill (Independent — Comox-Alberni), C. E. Johnston (CC — Bow River), How, and Green (CC — Vancouver South), Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre), John R. MacNicol (PC — Toronto Davenport), Miss Cora 'Casselman (L — Edmonton East), and several others.

Member Supports Plea.

Support for more generous assistance to the blind came from W. K. Esling (PC — Kootenay West). Mr. Esling, who is almost totally blind, urged that the ceiling on pensions for a blind person should be raised from 40 to 25 years."

And from Labor Minister Mitchell came support of a contributory pension plan under which everyone, "even the president of the C.P.R.," should be entitled to a pension by right.

Mr. McGeer said the aged of Canada should no longer have to live on the edge of pauperism. The Dominion had the wealth to provide a comfortable living for the men and women who built the country, but this apparently was not recognized by some forces within the government.

Fail to Follow Policy.

The government had failed to follow the policy advocated by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in 1931 when he favored the Dominion's taking over the pension system.

Mr. Graydon said the time had come "when human values very definitely must replace material values in a way we in this nation have never known."

"It seems easy for promises to be made and often bidding takes place, but what the older people want is action," he said.

Mr. Neill said a Commons committee should be set up to frame the basis for a sound post-war pension plan. In many cases the regulations passed by the provinces had led to unfair conditions and pensions had been long delayed by technicalities.

T. L. Church (PC — Toronto Broadview) said the Dominion government should take full control of the pensions and not share it, as at present, with the provinces.

Amend Criticized.

Mr. Johnston said Finance Minister Ilsley would "be a lot shinier than he is today" if he had to live on a pension such as is paid to the aged of Canada. Mr. Ilsley would probably find it difficult to keep a home and feed and clothe himself on $25 a month—the maximum old age pension.

Practice of taking assigned pay from soldiers for accounts in computing the amount of old age pensions came in for criticism from J. W. Noseworthy (CCF—York South).

Finance Minister Ilsley, replying to a question by Mr. Noseworthy, said both dependents' allowances and assigned pay were omitted as income and reduced the pension.

Mr. Noseworthy said pay assigned by a soldier was his property and the government had no right to use it to reduce pensions.

Allies Capture Large Quantities Of Ammunition

Kandy, Ceylon, June 3—(AP)—Reinforced Allied columns fighting their way into the Japanese North Burma base of Myitkyina from both the north and south have captured large quantities of supplies and ammunition, a headquarters announcement said today.

Allied forces pounding into the important railhead city from the south have reached the railway station in hand-to-hand fighting while another column driving down from the north has crashed to the town's edge, said a press note from headquarters of Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of American and Chinese forces assaulting Burma.

Yesterday's communique said a column driving from the north had gained 1,500 yards in the face of stubborn opposition that cost the Japanese many casualties. The column penetrating the town from the north was reported to have gained an addition 400 yards.

Mop-Up Squads Ferret Japanese Out of Caves

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 3—(AP)—Mop-up squads ferreted Japanese snipers from innumerable caves and burned down machine-gun nests on wooded ridgetops as the week-old Allied invasion of Biak Island, stalemated since Monday, moved back into high gear today.

A big push by reinforced American units toward three airfields—potential bases for bombing the Philippines—was pointed along a coastal road, hitherto a death trap because of murderous fire poured down from the ridges.

Biak, main island in the Schouten group 600 miles southeast of the Philippines, was invaded in Dutch New Guinea's Geelvink Bay last Saturday. The Japanese pulled out of Bosnek village on the southeast coast of the island as invaders drove west along a shore road to within half a mile of Mokmer and then cut loose with withering blasts which forced them back 1½ miles.

Police Seeking 3 Armed Bandits

Winnipeg, June 3—(CP)—Police spread a dragnet throughout Manitoba today in their manhunt for the three armed bandits who shot and killed S. W. Caughey, 45, bank accountant at the north-end branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce yesterday during an attempted holdup. The men escaped in an automobile.

The trio—one armed with a sawed-off shotgun and the others with revolvers—were between 30 and 30 years of age and all had foreign accents, said Chief Constable George Smith in announcing a reward of $1,000 for information leading to their arrest and conviction. Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Railway Police and police in nearby towns all were taking part in the search.

Toronto, June 3—(CP)—Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said last night crop prospects in Ontario are "beyond all expectations."

Wallace Greeted Warmly in Russia

London, June 3 (CP)—Speaking in Russian to a native audience in the Siberian town of Irkutsk, Vice-President Henry Wallace of the United States said that "it is becoming quite clear that only the full collaboration of these two countries and their Allies can insure to the world a stable peace and true development."

The Moscow radio, reporting the speech last night, said Mr. Wallace, en route to China, was greeted warmly.

He told his audience development of the American northwest, Canada, Alaska and Soviet Siberia must play an important part in post-war construction, and that Canada and the United States must make "a decisive effort in the task of developing their northern regions" as has been done by Russia.

Four Are Dead After Shooting Affray in Sask.

Brewer, Sask., June 3 (CP)—Four persons are dead and one man is in hospital at Melville today as result of a shooting affair at two farms near here Thursday night which police said was motivated by jealousy.

Death Friday night of Julius Bella, 24, wanted for questioning following the deaths of Mrs. Anthony Calcki, 50, and her two daughters, Helen, 18, and Mrs. Jacob Mann, 23, and the wounding of John Wolaschuk, a neighboring farmer, ended a day-long manhunt in bushland during a rainstorm. Police said Bella shot himself when cornered by a posse near McKim, about 125 miles northeast of Regina.

Condition of Wolaschuk, in Melville hospital, was reported as "critical" but attendants gave him a fair chance of recovering.

Night Inspector Canada Mounted Police, assisted by the police dog "Dark of Yonder," searched heavy woodland for the armed man for almost 24 hours until they spotted him about 10 miles from the scene of the shootings. As the officers drew after Bella, a shot was heard, and he was found dead with a bullet wound in his head.

Piece Details.

Piecing details of the shooting together since a nine-year-old boy reported finding two women dead on a road near Mrs. Calcki's farm home, Police said Helen Calcki had been friendly with both Bella and Wolaschuk and that jealousy apparently was the motive for the tragedy.

Helen Calcki's body was found in a wagon pushed into brush beside a road. Wolaschuk had been shot at his farm home near the Calcki residence.

Police were unable to say which of the two men fired the first shot or whether the Calcki tragedy occurred before or after Wolaschuk had been wounded.

Mrs. Calcki's husband was away at the time of the deaths and there apparently was no eye-witnesses. A full-scale inquest has not been decided yet.

ITALIAN UNDERGROUND ZONED

The Allied High Command has divided Italy into six zones in which the "underground" is to "prepare for action," when directed by radio, and play their part in the final overthrow of the Nazis in Italy. These zoned districts are shown on the map. (1) Areas immediately behind the present front lines of the Fifth and Eighth armies; (2) areas around Rome, concerning which "there is official secrecy"; (3) a coastal strip from Leghorn to Pisa; (4) the entire Appenine region; (5) the Adriatic coast from Pescara to the north of Rimini, and (6), all north Italy—that is all sections north of Rimini and Pisa.

Tito, Churchill's Son Escape Nazis As Enemy Captures Headquarters

Bari, Italy, June 3—(AP)—German paratroopers supported by glider-borne infantry swarmed down on Marshal Tito's Bosnian headquarters of Marshal Tito May 25 but failed to catch the wily Yugoslav leader, Partisan sources have disclosed.

Gen. Marshal Erwin Rommel, whose whereabouts had been a mystery for weeks, said he had directed the attack personally.

Two escaped to the mountains along with Maj. Randolph Churchill, son of the British prime minister, and almost all Allied officers attached to Tito's staff.

Two Allied correspondents, John Talbot of Reuters News Agency, Stoyan Pribichevich of Time, Life and Fortune magazines, and two photographers, were captured in the Nazi stroke, but Pribichevich escaped later during a Partisan attack on the Nazis.

The Bloodiest single dive-bombing attack at 4 a.m. preceded the airborne assault on the headquarters, situated in a vast grotto near Drvar, 70 miles north of Split. Paratroopers and gliders followed quickly, coordinating their attack with a powerful ground assault in which tanks led the way.

With bitter fighting raging over the wide area and various points changing hands numerous times, German transports and additional gliders poured in more men, field pieces and supplies throughout the night and early morning hours.

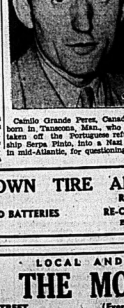
Tito's Partisans regained much territory the first night but on the second day the enemy managed to push an armored column into Drvar, meanwhile taking the important airport of Petrovac, 14 miles north.

Belgrade and their jealousy apparently was the motive for the tragedy.

Helen Calcki's body was found in a wagon pushed into brush beside a road. Wolaschuk had been shot at his farm home near the Calcki residence.

Police were unable to say which of the two men fired the first shot or whether the Calcki tragedy occurred before or after Wolaschuk had been wounded.

Mrs. Calcki's husband was away at the time of the deaths and there apparently was no eye-witnesses. A full-scale inquest has not been decided yet.



A. F. OF L. TO REORGANIZE UNIONS IN ITALY, SICILY

Boston, June 3—(AP)—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor disclosed last night that an American Labor Union representative would leave in a few days to help reorganize the trade unions in the liberated portions of Italy and Sicily.

FISH INSPECTED

Windsor, June 3—(CP)—Dr. John Howie, Windsor Medical Health Officer, said last night whitefish caught in Western Canada now are being inspected before being shipped east. This move was made as a result of large shipments of the fish being turned back at Detroit by United States officials who said the fish were infected.

ALLIES SWEEP PAST ROME TO PURSUE NAZIS
FRENCH FORTIFIED COAST HEAVILY POUNDED

Eternal City Taken Early Sunday By Clark's 5th Army

Forces Go Across Tiber River, Pressing On To North Of City To Harass Enemy

CANADIAN-U.S. UNIT

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, June 5 — (AP) — The powerful 5th Army drove across the Tiber towards Northern Italian horizons in pursuit of the 10th and 14th German armies today—with hardly a look at captured Rome, ancient seat of western civilization fallen a prize to Allied troops after nine months of warfare.

Last-ditch German rearguards held within the shadow of the Roman forum and in the streets of the government center in bitter clashes as Italian Partisans, bare-chested and wearing hammer and sickle insignia, fought hand to hand with Fascists and Nazis in a brief battle for liberation.

The Italian populace cheered Americans and Canadian infantry and Allied tanks as they threaded the city's streets, rushed to kiss the bearded and grimy combat men and with shrill price warned of ambushes ahead.

The Allied forces which entered Rome yesterday included a Canadian-American task force, known as the special service forces of the Allied fifth army, which was ordered to hold the Anzio beachhead during the months preceding the current offensive and played a prominent part in the thrust northward from the beachhead to Rome's civil-akirts.

Some of Rome's inhabitants died in the city's closing hours of German domination—victims of machine-gun fire and shells—but the Nazi-led 10th and 14th armies barred the way.

Enemy Escaped Unscathed.

But despite the sporadic clashes, which continued even though the German High Command had pretended until the last that Rome was an open city, the Italian capital with its store of cultural and religious treasures apparently came through unscathed for the most part.

Police officers said all was quiet at the Vatican, where the Pope has been a virtual prisoner of German bayonets since last September.

A Berlin broadcast asserted Baron von Weizsacker, German ambassador to the Holy See, had left his residence in Rome. Villa Bonaparte, and moved to the Vatican. Other diplomatic missions of the Tripartite Powers also were in the Vatican City—namely those of Japan, Hungary, Slovakia, Romania, and Finland.

(Dispatches from Madrid to London said the Pope spent Sunday in prayer, and in consultation with Cardinal Secretary of State in hours of liberation of the city. The Pope had been much disturbed about Vatican City to prevent an influx of refugees.

Expected to Hand Over Power.

(King Victor Emmanuel was expected to hand over his power to Crown Prince Humbert at a formal ceremony in keeping with his promise of several months ago to act when the Allies entered Rome.)

Although first reports from Rome were sketchy concerning damage in the city, a number of demolitions were carried out by the Germans. Dispatches said the Fiat factory had been the scene of one such destruction. Bridges, also, apparently were made to wreck gas, electric and water utilities.

Allied Headquarters formally announced the occupation of Rome by troops of the 5th Army last night, and thus was realized one of the first objectives of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Harold Alexander started the Allied offensive May 11.

The other main objective, the destruction of the German 10th and 14th Armies, remained to be carried out, and towards this objective the 5th and 6th Armies pressed today.

Fighter-bombers hammered away at the fleeing German columns, leaving congested highways to the north littered with dead and wounded and smashed vehicles.

The 5th Army took off and chewed up two more divisions of the German armies, the 10th and 14th, enemy and destroy him."

Fall of Rome Will Speed The Grand Assault on Hitler's Europe, Satellites

KING MAY ABDICATE

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 5 —(AP)— American diplomats viewed the fall of Rome today as speeding the grand assault on Hitler's Europe and confronting Axis satellites and wavering neutrals with clear evidence of the ultimate fate of Berlin.

Officials examined reports on the Balkans and other European areas for signs of reaction as President Roosevelt prepared a 15-minute radio broadcast summing up his momentous official inaction.

The broadcast, over all major American networks, is set for 9 p.m. E.D.T. tonight. It was expected to emphasize the symbolic fact that one of the Italian conquest and to bear upon the political aftermath.

It has long been a theory of diplomats and political leaders both here and in London that the fall of Rome would be the real beginning of the end for Nazi domination of Europe.

Fall of Germany throughout Europe.

A Tough Problem.

At the same time military authorities and international political experts grappled with two tough problems stemming directly from the military triumph. Admittedly the more difficult was the problem of pushing food supplies, medical equipment and clothing to the populations of the cities.

Information available here was that the Italians had suffered severely at the hands of the enemy during the nine months of occupation even though the city itself had escaped destruction of a siege.

The other task confronting directly the Allied command, Gen. Henry Maitland Wilson, and indirectly the London, Washington and Moscow governments was that of reorganization of the Italian political regime headed by King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

King Victor promised weeks ago he would retire when Rome fell and Crown Prince Humbert, will take over in his stead as head of the regency.

The Allied governments have taken the position that this fulfillment is expected momentarily.

Dover Weather

Dover, England, June 5 (CP)— Clouds that brought rain to Dover during the night cleared at dawn, and the sunshine sent the temperature up to the 70s by 9 a.m.

A light west-southwesterly wind freshened during the morning, but the breeze was choppy. Visibility was limited to a few miles at first but improved during the day. The barometer was fairly steady.

'I Doubt If 14th German Army Is Any Longer Capable of Fighting'

—Gen. Clark

London, June 5 — (AP) — The Naples radio said Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark of the 5th Army in a speech to his corps commanders had declared "I doubt if the 14th (German army) is any longer capable of fighting."

"It is a great day for the 5th Army," Gen. Clark was quoted as saying on the capture of Rome "French, British and American troops have made it possible, and I want to thank Gen. Eaker, (Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Mediterranean theatre air commander) for his support . . .

SEVENTEEN DROWN IN LAKE ERIE AT PORT STANLEY

Motor Boat Crowded With Excursionists Capsizes About Mile From Shore

THIRTEEN RESCUED

Port Stanley, Ont., June 5—(CP)— Seventeen persons feared to have drowned Sunday in the capsizing of the motor launch Clio today rose to 17 as police announced that 14 persons were still missing. Previously it was believed 13 were missing. Three are known to have drowned.

The police announcement came after carefully checking of the names furnished by the 13 persons who were rescued when the Clio, crowded with Sunday excursionists, capsized a mile off this Lake Erie harbor.

Three bodies recovered.

Bodies of three persons have been recovered: William Babcock, 10, of London, Ont., and formerly of Yorkton, Sask.; Bernice Woolcott, 16, and Barbara Mayo, 20, of nearby St. Thomas.

The missing: Edward Goodge and Shirley Haydukiewicz, 8, of St. Thomas; Sidney Smith, one of the Thomas; Sidney Smith, one of the Smith family of London, Stella Meaye, 17, Gayle Cobbett, 4, and his sister, Russell Hannett, 40, and his nephew, Gordon Hannett, 9, both of Port Stanley; Jack Gardner, 20, Donald Mills, 9, Bob Ellis, 12, Earl Book, 16, all of London; Clifford E. Skeath, 21, and Robert Martin, 20, of nearby St. Thomas, and 14th other RCA.F. personnel. Seven more RCA.F. men were announced.

Ted Vining, operator of the launch with Mr. Smith as one of the rescued, said he was in the wheelhouse with a few of the passengers when the accident occurred.

"The passengers were piled aft," he said. "Nothing could be done. It was an accident. If the passengers hadn't become panicky it never would have happened."

The capsizing occurred about a mile from shore, in full view of spectators on the pier and on the beach. The fact the accident was noticed prevented the death toll from being even higher. An R.C.A.F. crash boat and motor launch left Port Stanley and a private sailboat were at the scene quickly.

Mr. Vining left her dock at about 4 p. m. and went outside the harbor to the pier. Then Mr. Vining swung her in a wide circle back toward the harbor. Suddenly and then ran for a couple of seconds. It choked again, then settled down and started to idling speed and asked his assistant on the trip, Jack Mc-Donald, 18, of Port Stanley, to get a pair or pilers and turn a tap on the bilge pump.

"A swell caught the starboard stern, and the Clio lay," Vining said. "The passengers in the wheelhouse crowded to the right. We both hit the wheelhouse and then the swell caught her broadside.

BIG OBSTACLES ABOVE ROME

JAPANESE RISK 70 PLANES, LOSE 30 IN S. W. PACIFIC

Set Up Mortar Fire Resistance to U.S. Ground Offensive

OTHER JAP PLANES LOST

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 5—(AP)—Japan flung more of her hundreded air warplanes into action today in the Southwest Pacific—risking 70 planes, losing 30—and mounted fierce mortar fire resistance against a new American ground offensive on bloody Biak, reports disclosed today.

Loss of only one Allied plane was listed in the accounts of air action during which seven other Japanese aircraft probably were shot down in addition to the 30 which were destroyed on the ground.

On Biak, gain inland in the Schouten off North Netherlands New Guinea, American invaders characterized as tactics after units which landed there May 27 failed in the face of a coastal road toward three airfields.

In the new drive, which one column moved back from retreat along the coast, another bucked treacherous terrain in an accompanying drive along the ridges from which the Japanese previously had poured down a murderous fire. The columns crunched ahead slowly against intense enemy mortar, machine-gun and rifle opposition.

Twenty Japanese dive-bombers were sent against the invasion beachhead, Australian dispatches said, but only six sick-sack gunners got another.

Air Fight Over Base of Babo.

To the southwest on the Netherlands New Guinea mainland, American fighters tangled over the Babo area with nearly 50 Japs, downing 11 and probably four others for a loss of one plane.

Another air battle took place Friday over Truk in the Caroline Islands, enemy planes tried vainly to break up a strong daylight raid by heavy bombers. Gunners shot down at least 10, perhaps three others, during a long running fight, and bombers dropped their 36 tons of explosives on Dublon Township. All got back to their Admiralty bases.

Aground along the New Guinea coast, a growing toll was taken of Japanese transport by a series of leapfrog landings.

SERVICEMEN AND ZOOT-SUITERS CLASH, MANY HURT

Montreal and Verdun Scene of Encounters That Keep Police Busy

ZOOT SUITS SHREDDED

Montreal, June 5 —(CP)— Two members of the Merchant Marine were taken to hospital today, and a civilian was taken into custody on an attempted murder charge as an early-morning aftermath to weekend clashes between service personnel and "drape-shape" sootsuiters in various sections of Montreal and its suburbs.

Police arrested Andre Bouchard, 23, on the attempted murder charge, but a companion escaped. Howard Sayre and Jack Dropsell of the Merchant Navy were taken to hospital, Sayre with a bullet wound in the foot and Dropsell with a back injury.

City and military police broke up the downtown battle in which the two sailors were injured, after several shots had been fired. They said only four men were involved.

Larger clashes had kept city, provincial and service police on emergency schedules throughout the weekend, with scores of persons suffering minor injuries. Thirty-odd sailors, and two civilians appeared in court today on charges of disturbing the peace and were remanded until tomorrow.

The battles started in earnest Saturday evening and by the time police and naval short patrol units had the situation under control, 38 servicemen and two civilians were arrested. In addition to those appearing in court today, the police took scores of other sailors into custody.

The climax came last night when steel-helmeted provincial constables were called to quell the 45-minute battle between 100 soldiers and sailors and a gang of zoot-suiters at east-end Lafontaine Park.

Sentry Chased.

Hundreds of persons gathered at the park on Saturday night, which hampered police efforts to master the situation. Following the example of the sailors on Saturday night, the soldiers took every opportunity to rip the "drape-shape, reet-pleat, stuff-cuff" apparel off the backs of the wearers and chased them through the streets in semi-nude state.

Of those arrested, 26 were sailors, one a soldier and one airman. The rest were civilians, many of them leaping to avoid the blows.

ROME IS SPARED ENTIRELY FROM RAVAGES OF WAR

Enemy Demolitions Limited to a Few Installations of No Importance

VATICAN INTACT

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 5 — (AP) — Rome, shining brightly in sparkling sunlight, and spared almost entirely from the ravages of war, today gave 5th Army troops a welcome, which turned the Eternal City into a near carnival.

The city is virtually intact. The Germans, last of whom slinked from the capital last night after beating dogs, limited their demolitions to a few installations of no actual religious importance.

Columns of troops skirted the Piazza where Vatican City begins. Otherwise there was no sign of life at the Vatican. It was wholly intact and the only remarks of a demolitionist that the Germans always had respected its neutrality and that is hoped its edifices would.

There was no special guard around the Vatican and at the portals of the Vatican City, at the left of the facade, there were only a few papal gendarmes.

Cut Capacity of Oil Refineries Under 25 P.C.

Naples, June 5 — (AP)—Productive capacity of Romania's Ploesti oil refineries has been slashed to less than 25 per cent of normal as a result of Allied bombing attacks and on the vital German fuel sources, Allied officials estimated today.

A total of 4,500 tons of bombs have rained down on the rich oil region in those five raids, of which took place between May 5-31.

It is estimated here that the Ploesti oilfields in April of this year were capable of producing all at the rate of about 9,000,000 tons annually. Now it is believed they are producing at no more than a quarter of that.

Aerial photos show great oil tanks with their tops ripped away in the raids, while important distillation and cracking plants have been heavily damaged.

1,250 U.S. Bombers Drop 2,000 Tons Bombs Near Calais

Fourth Attack in Row on Area of France Closest to England

COLOGNE ATTACKED

By W. W. HERCHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 5 (AP)— Approximately 1,250 American Flying Fortresses and fighters—leading an Allied aerial assault of powerful proportions "against the fortified French coast—smashed yesterday at installations in the Boulogne and Calais areas today with an estimated 2,000 tons of bombs.

This was the fourth attack in a row against the Pas de Calais, the area of France closest to England; it came after R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers attacked French coast objectives and targets in Cologne, Germany, Sunday night, and laid mines in enemy water, all without loss.

Watchers on the English coast from Rookgomer over reported rocket shells rising from the ground, leaving a thin white trail of smoke and exploding high in the air.

For more than three hours powerful fleets of American and British bombers thundered across the English Channel. Clouds which replaced the earlier clear sky failed to halt the attack.

Since June began, the more than 200 miles of French coast line bristling with German guns—has been shaken from end to end by Allied bombs.

Some Targets Neglected

The R.A.F. British and Canadian bombers made it their target for the third consecutive night Sunday night. The U.S. 8th. Air Force also neglected strategic targets deep in the continent for the last four days to concentrate on immediate tactical targets behind the invasion wall.

It is estimated that considerably more than 13,000 tons of bombs have been dropped on France by American and British day-night bombers alone in the last 72 hours.

The greater part of this devastating weight of explosives has fallen in the Pas-de-Calais area and on Nazi strong points surrounding the Channel ports of Boulogne, Calais, Dieppe and Dunkirk. The rest has been aimed mainly at railway and communications as deep into Northern France as Paris.

Cologne was attacked by 800 or more small formation of American heavy bombers in the second night attacks by British Mosquitos which have been peppering the city with 2,000-pound block-busters.

The raids last night appeared to be on a smaller scale, but the Allies' aerial offensive gained momentum with each new showing powerful force of bombers returning to England for refuelling and over the Dover Strait later became clouded with the first sign of slackening of the attack.

Passed Like a Roar

For one moment about a half-hour aircraft passed over Folkestone with a roar like that of express trains rushing through tunnels. Waves of medium bombers were recognized, as well as very large numbers of fighters and fighter-bombers.

At noon the German radio reported that "single enemy raiders were over Bavaria." These might have been from either British or Italian bases.

In three separate attacks on German installations in France yesterday, Flying Fortress United States heavy bombers from Britain made two assaults in the vicinity of Boulogne in the bomb-pitted Pas-de-Calais department and then penetrated to the Paris area in an evening foray.

Invasion Flash Bulletin Soon Killed By A.P.

New York, June 5. (AP)—A young girl teletype operator employed in the London bureau of The Associated Press punched out a strip of practice tape Saturday night and within a matter of moments was responsible for transmission throughout the United States, Canada and Latin America of an erroneous announcement that the Allied invasion had begun.

Through almost incredible circumstances, the error slipped through the most elaborate system of safeguards and censorship ever established both by The Associated Press and Allied authorities.

The girl, Joan Ellis, had been practicing on a disconnected machine, and in violation of instructions included in her exercise this urgent message.

"Flash. Eisenhower's headquarters announce Allied landings France".

At 7:39 p.m. Eastern War Time appeared on the AP's direct London printer in what was to become a period immediately throughout the United States and to Latin America and to Canada as far as Canadian Press.

Corrected in Two Minutes.

Less than two minutes later came a correction: "ignut that flash" and word was flashed to editors to withhold publication. At 7:44 p.m. another London message directed that the flash be, "killed", and this was done.

Millions of Americans were electrified when their radios broadcast the erroneous report, but the excellent safeguards worked quickly when, in a few minutes, the error was discovered.

Fresh Spirit Emerged in Great Britain From Flaming Cradle of Dunkerque

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 5 (CP)—Four years after Dunkirk a fresh spirit emerged in Britain from the flaming cradle of that tragedy.

It was a spirit epitomized by Prime Minister Churchill's declaration that "capital and labor have each made their contribution to the common stock."

It was the day Mr. Churchill told a solemn House of Commons little else than the story of Dunkirk: over 335,000 men, French and British, saved by the will, the courage, the shame, to their land and to the tasks which lie immediately ahead.

He rallied the country that day with the magnificent declaration "We shall never surrender."

But in retrospect there was little indication that Britons realized they soon were to stand alone against the Nazi juggernaut, the finest of any English summer in years, made it difficult to visualize the drama that was taking place in the Channel.

In London, parks were crowded, pub life nearly at peacetime standards and people went on "as usual."

Only those at the ports and along the coast saw the railway stations who gave the returning men their first food in days could comprehend Dunkirk. Disaster had come too quickly for Britons to understand what had happened.

Only one Canadian division and a handful of British troops stood ready to defend the channel coast.

Then came the call to Dunkirk and the tug-of-war began.

The country's mood changed to grim determination.

Today, four years after, Britons await the opening of the forthcoming invasion from the west that will, the Allied world hopes and prays, sweep the Nazi from the armies and make aggression in the future impossible.

James Day, Trenton, parked his automobile on the Belle theatre parking lot off the upper end of Pinnacle Street, on Saturday. When he returned he found his motor car had been stripped and a motor rug stolen. Police were notified.

PORKERS TUMBLE OUT OF MOVING CAR

Three Belle pigs went to market unexpectedly Thursday.

On Saturday morning Joseph Larye, Roslin, Ont., was transporting two small pigs on the Belleville market for all intent and purpose of fattening them for next winter's table consumption Mr. Larye placed the shoats in the rumble seat of his motor car and covered them over securely, at least so Mr. Larye thought.

While proceeding along the bay bridge road one of the little pigs managed to escape and rolling from the speeding vehicle rolled over on the highway a few feet before regaining its feet and last seen the shoat was running at top speed northerly on the bay bridge road back towards Belleville. The porker was still missing Monday day. Mr. Larye was unaware of the escape until informed by a motorist who picked up the second pig, while following behind. He was minus the pigs when arriving Belleville.

Excitement Prevails in News Office When Erroneous Bulletin Flashed

The error of a young British teletype operator who sent an erroneous report of landing of British troops in France on Saturday evening, quickened investment in the city and sent a number of citizens scurrying to telephones seeking news.

Shortly before six o'clock telephone calls started coming in to the Ontario Intelligencer begin to jangle, switchboard girls asking for the perpetual or federal elections.

These interest of feminine readers was explained when the bulletin announcing the invasion was evidenced in the form of approximately 75 per cent of the telephone calls came from women.

Air stations of the district sought confirmation of the report, which came over the city after a sports broadcast emanating from a famous American race track, was interrupted to tell a listening public that Hitler himself had announced the landing of British troops in France".

One lady who, after hearing that there was no immediate confirmation by news services of the radio broadcast, told a staff reporter that "It could be true, for I heard bells ringing". The "Bells" she heard was the city clock striking the hour of six.

Local telegraph offices contacted for confirmation had no word of the alleged landing. The Canadian Press advised its members that the Associated Press, Reuters and all announcing landings in France was "premature". Nothing official was sent.

Joan Ellis, the young operator who erred, said she had been practicing on a disconnected machine and thought she had thrown away the last tape.

However, before transmitting the first part of a Russian communique she said she noticed that the fourth part of the tape which she thought she had destroyed.

The Canadian Press and Associated Press said, broadcast a factual account of the error for Saturday's

Tom O'Brien, Bancroft Soldier, Fixes Town Clock in Italy, Serves on Patrol With Indians

Many Bancroft Men With R. P. E.'s Can Tell of Deeds of O'Brien

HIS RESOURCEFULNESS

By DOUGLAS HOW

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, June 5 (CP). — The soldiers said it was impossible, but they wasn't around this day. Tom, they said, 'was a long, droll Irishman of 32 who could do most anything and who was the sort of fellow who got himself into places and situations that grow into stories worth telling. Before 1939 he had wandered from one job to another, had been a farmer, a lumberjack, a miner and for a time a woodsman, worked as a gunsmith. They used to say the men got bought and sold over those years got to the town limits and Tom lived in the last house.

With a lot of other Bancroft men he went overseas in 1939 with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He won for himself a new reputation in recent months with the soldiers here. He is the likeliest man around to fix your broken watch.

The O'Brien reputation reached its height the time the regiment was in reserve and Tom took just half an hour to fix the huge town clock which, when the Germans had been trying to do for days since the town fell, put it out of commission.

Seized on Side.

The O'Brien job as the battalion moved along through Italy was that of a rifle company, but he kept going off by himself to do a bit of sniping on the side.

When the regiment formed a scout and snipers' platoon, Tom and O'Brien left his truck for good. He brought along his own sniper's rifle with him. He had made himself in between firing watches, and two days were his longest stretch anywhere along the way. He carried them both when he went out on patrol.

His experiences were those of the other scouts and snipers, close brushes, long hours of watching and finally, one night, the battalion headquarters waiting for new orders. Tom had already happened to him it always had a Tom O'Brien story.

Then, in one spell of inactivity, he made a call on the Indians who were fighting in the same sector, went out on one of their patrols that night, carrying his own revolvers as usual. They bumped a German position and Tom kept firing until his ammunition had run out. Then, like a sporting shot, he bawled one of his revolvers at the enemy and left for home.

There are a lot of Bancroft men with the R.P.E.'s to tell you about Tom O'Brien. Many of them have been overseas since 1939 and they include Capt. Harold Ray; Sgt. Jim W. E. Morris, already twice wounded; Pte. C. C. Neil, Sgt. N. C. Mooney, Cpl. E. Smith, Pte. William and Gerald Fuller brothers, Pte. R. Crawford, Pte. J. R. Kelly, L. Cpl. J. M. Millen and his brother, Sgt. J. O. Millen, Pte. Dick and Fred Hennessey, cousins, Pte. Percy Palmenter, and Sgt. Ross Bullied, another scout, who comes from nearby Coe Hill. Pte. Gordon Crosby was killed by a mine.

4 Men Charged With Breaking, Entering, Stealing

Following weeks of incessant investigation looking into a series of thefts and robbery at the National Grocers on Pinnacle Street, Provincial Constable Police apprehended four local young men over the weekend and charged them with breaking and entering the National Grocers premises and of theft. The men, all residents of this city, are Stanley Hall, Donald Hall, Ross Gordon and Gordon Sanford. The four are being held in custody pending their arraignment today.

The investigation of the case came only after lengthy and diligent police investigation that, by complete harmony between the Provincial and city authorities until very recent were efficient Sunday. The first of the four men held was apprehended at 4.30 o'clock Sunday morning and police laboring 48 hours in succession finally succeeded in getting their man day morning.

The premises of the National Grocers was entered on the morning of May 12th, but when over $60 in cash was stolen from an office desk drawer along with cheques amounting to $200 and scraps of the cash taken. Entrance was gained through a window at the rear from the company's loading door. Upon investigations at the office safe was found to be empty being near the room where cigarettes and tobacco were stored. It was that the intruders had originally intended to steal "smokes", police said.

Police officials of the district find the same method of breaking and entering other places robbed in the district were used, especially in removing window or door panes of glass.

Police are continuing their investigations today surrounding robberies from warehouses of the Belleville Creamery Co., the Provincial Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated after consultation with investigating officers.

ed up additional chunks of the pavement under which which had tried valiantly to stem the advance of the Italian engineers who had hoped open an escape route for hard pressed troops in the Cassino area to the south of the city.

The danger to Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's army still fucked the left flank of the 5th Army between Rome and the seacoast grew perilously.

Escape Route Lost.

Should that escape route of these forces was lost when Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops entered Rome including a Canadian-American special force—possibly brought the defensive screen on the outskirts of Rome yesterday out of contact with the enemy as they met only sporadic resistance.

Kesselring's hurried entry into Rome—climax of nine months' of hard fighting in Italy—was accompanied by heavy gains in other sectors of the front.

Allied airfields an important retreat road north of the Via Casilina, 10 miles southeast of Valmontone was cleared of the enemy.

At the same time the British 8th Army, with which Canadian corps units are fighting, drove the enemy completely out of the Sora valley, clearing the towns of Poggi, Piglio, Paliano, Guarcino and Colle Mezzo, a mountain position 2 miles Saturday between Canadian troops of the 5th Army and forces on the Via Casilina 10 miles to the southeast.

The British 8th Army forces on the Via Casilina 31 miles south of Rome.

Outflanked at Enley

An official account of the drive into Rome said:—

"Mobile armoured elements entered the southeastern outskirts of the city at two points about 8 a. m. and 9 p. m. respectively and a few hours later had pushed on to within the official limits.

"The principal break-through toward Rome was made in a sector defended by the Hermann Goering Panzer Division, reinforced by the 3 H. Africa and Sicily as well to stay the 15 Panzer Grenadier.

"One American force moving forward from the southeast, reportedly had fought its way around nearly 5 miles, then met stiff resistance from the Hermann Goering Panzer division.

"Elements severed highway 5 at the junction of Valmontone and Rome. Meanwhile an advance group pushed on into the outskirts to the southeast at 8 a.m.

"Three miles due east of Rome Allied troops entered Palestrina, 20 with leading tanks encountering many mines.

"Other 5th Army forces meanwhile had moved into Valmontone, 20 miles south of Rome and highway 7."

A simultaneous advance from the Allban hills northwestward by-passing Rome, cutting off the enemy's forces at Civita Castellana, Marino and Genzano were taken in that area, Retreat Re Terte.

British troops on the left flank drove 8 miles and 31 miles of the Tiber south of Rome and began bridging the Tiber.

The 8th Army, pushing into the Liri valley northwest of the 5th Army and Sacco Valley, encountered heavy resistance in a great mass, many covered by fire from well-situated guns to prevent repair.

A British spokesman said the towns being taken were perched on hilltops, sometimes as high as 2,000 feet high, and the Germans had blown all the approaches to them and the roads with fire that destroyed the bridges and culverts.

Driving north along Highway 82 on the right edge of the offensive front, the 5th Army captured Valmontone, a junction, centre of a strongly-fortified area.

Evidence of the disorganization of the German forces was seen in the fact 771 prisoners taken at Velletri were members of 50 different Italian companies.

Enemy Loses Mount Heurty.

German losses continued heavy as the 5th Army hammered at retreating rearguards. Allied warplanes strafed fleeing Nazis on the clogged roads north of Rome, while mopping up of trapped enemy pockets proceeded.

The 5th Army's attack on Velletri, 20 miles southeast of Rome, overran Mount Artemisio, 2,480 feet high, and Mount Heurty, 2,000 feet high, and the Germans had to withdraw from the ridges to avoid being outflanked.

Velletri, a road junction 20 miles southeast of Rome, was captured by the 5th Army on Saturday.

Allied troops in the Liri valley, 10 miles southeast of Valmontone, were reported to be within 3 miles of Ceprano, a road junction 10 miles southeast of Frosinone.

Ceprano is the junction of the Liri valley and Sacco valley highways.

Allied troops in the Sacco valley were reported to be within 3 miles of Ceprano, a road junction 10 miles southeast of Frosinone.

Provincial Police Hold Four In Garage Break-in

Left abandoned on a side road after having been stripped of four tires, a Chrysler sedan stolen from Irwin's garage in Deseronto was found by Provincial Police Const. Wm. Wood on the road way No. 2 a few miles east of Shannonville. Provincial Police Officer Provincial Police found the damaged and broken car at 4.00 o'clock Sunday morning. The car was stolen at the same time as the garage was broken into. The door had been battered and broken until it fell off to the ground. Entrance gained, confronted a small sum of money, were stolen.

Robbers apparently entered Irwin's garage in Deseronto some time early Saturday morning and battered the garage safe into Mr. Irwin's Chrysler sedan drove away with the four tires. Const. Wood on the west of Marysville the robbers battered down the safe door and removing the contents tossed the safe into the ditch. Entrance to the garage was gained by Provincial Police as evidence.

The robbers then forced the door up and removed all four wheels, making their getaway on four bare rims, tubes and rims. Inspector Harry Storey, District Provincial Police, O.P. P., stated today that Provincial police here had constantly been on the case since the theft and reported early Saturday morning and Inspector Storey added that they were holding four local young men for investigation in the matter, as well as a fifth Deseronto man had not been preferred as yet the names of the men were not made public.

Pte C. Cunningham Killed In Action

Going overseas when only 17 years of age, Pte. Charles Cunningham, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cunningham, Herchimer Street, has been killed in action on the Italian fighting front according to word received by his parents. The young soldier, reported missing, stated he had been killed May 23rd.

One of the youngest lads on the fighting forces, Pte. Cunningham left Queen Mary public school and also high school here. He and his brother, Gunner, enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment at the same time and went overseas together in March, 1940. Another brother, Norman, is in the R. C. N. V. R. and has been stationed aboard a destroyer. He is also overseas.

Although having gone overseas together Pte. Cunningham and brother in Italy had not recently seen each other as they became separated and were stationed with different companies. The father is a veteran of the First World War, having served 25 months at the front.

Besides his parents and two brothers in the services, Pte. Cunningham is survived by one sister, brother, Irvin, still at school.

In honor of the fallen soldier, the Hall in the local Memorial Hall is today flying at half-staff.

Letter, Salvaged From Sea, Read By Son And Returned

Posted to her son last March 19th, a letter from Mrs. Ethel Fisher, Bessborough, 3 Norvill Street, has been salvaged from a mail bag having been washed ashore on the Normandy coast by the United Farmers' Co-operative. The letter, together with numerous other letters, parcels and other commodities used on district farms.

Secretary-manager of the club during the year, amounted to $29,718 with expenses totalling $27,883. Membership fees collected from district farmers amounted to $433. The Pontypool and District Farmers' Club was formed less than four years ago and since has seen rapid growth, the club conducting both a purebreeding business and also the sale of livestock. Secretary treasurer for the club is Mr. Frank Tummon of Pontypool.

$25,898 Business During Past Year

A purchasing business amounting to $25,898 was conducted by the Pontypool District Farmers' Club during 1943, it is indicated by the association's annual report. Figures and messages purported to be from their son Pte. Donald Fisher, who is reported to be held a prisoner of war by the Japanese, has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Fisher. Notice of concern.

Although enclosing the envelope, Ottawa could not vouch for its authenticity, indicating that the Japanese had control over the preparation and the transmission of such messages and the contents should be treated accordingly.

Received at Ottawa on May 26th and reported to be from their son, the message forwarded by the Department of National Defence to Mr. and Mrs. Vanclief was as follows:—

"Dearest Mother:

I am fine and in good health. I am working every day. Thank you very much for the comfort parcels you sent me. I appreciate it very much. Give my love to the rest of the family I hope Dad is in good health.

Your loving son
Donald."

Pte. Don Vanclief Writes From Jap Prison Camp

Enlisting in the R. and F. E. Regiment, Pte. Vanclief later transferred to the Midland Regiment and was among the party of Canadians sent to Hong Kong as reinforcements. He was taken prisoner, when the battalion fell on Christmas Day, 1941. His parents reside near Consecon and a sister Faye attends Consecon High School.

Two From District Awarded D.F.C.

Included in the list of awards released today by H.C.A.F. headquarters, Ottawa, are the names of Flt. Lt. T. G. Reid, Delora and F/O. G.N. Miller, Trenton, both of whom were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The citations accompanying the awards follow:—

Flt. Lt. Reid:—"This officer has completed a large number of hours flying at night over enemy territory and has displayed commendable skill and gallantry. He has at all times, the greatest keenness and his determination to complete his missions successfully has impressed all. He has destroyed at least two and assisted in the destruction of another enemy aircraft."

Flying Officer Miller: — "During the past two years this officer has completed a large number of operational sorties, the majority of which have been in transport operations in support of the Army and Air Forces in North Africa, Sicily and Italy. His task part in both the landing of troops and supplies by air in the operations in Burma where despite adverse weather he showed the utmost determination to reach his objectives . . ."

O.S.D. Children, Principal Express Thanks for Outing

Appreciation of the foresight and thoughtfulness of the Bellville Kiwanis Club in entertaining and treating the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf at No. 5 I.T.S. on Wednesday last, was evidenced in two communications received by Kiwanis President Jack McVeigh from the staff and pupils of the O.S.D.

Superintendent W. J. Morrison, of O.S.D., in writing his appreciation, stated, in part . . . "We appreciate very much the time, labor and expense given by you and members of your staff in giving our children such an enjoyable afternoon.

It is one more example of the unusual service that the Belleville Kiwanis Club is rendering."

In a signed note, the girls and boys of the intermediate class of the O.S.D. their collective appreciation as follows: "We, the boys and girls of the intermediate class of the O.S.D. want to thank you all for the lovely day you gave us last on Wednesday.

We were very glad to see our school again. We also enjoyed the movies and the races. The lunch and the ice cream were grand, too.

Sergeant To P.O. In Ten Months

From a sergeant in the Air Cadets to the rank of pilot officer in the R. C. A. F. in ten months is the proud record of Gerald E. Petsold, Bloomfield, Ontario, who on June 1st graduated as a Navigator from No. 1 Air Observer School at Malton. He enlisted in the R. C. A. F. in 1943, when he reached the age of 18. Prior to his enlistment he was a member of No. 16 Squadron Air Cadets at Kingston.

Selected as a Navigator during his course of training at No. 5 I. T. S. at Belleville P/O Petsold won the "outstanding airman" award during graduation from that unit. This award is in the form of an engraved identification bracelet which is presented to the airman making the highest marks and for leadership and deportment. He stood sixth in his class at Malton.

A brother of P/O Petsold, LAC R. Petsold is now in training as a pilot at Uplands, Ottawa and expects to graduate shortly.

2 Pilot Officers Killed In Crash Near Madoc, Ont.

Madoc, June 5 (Special)—R.C.A.F. officials are dragging the waters of the Moira River one mile north of its junction with Moira Lake four miles west of this village in an effort to recover the body of the remaining member of a crew of two, whose aircraft crashed Friday afternoon. The other body was recovered on Saturday.

The victims, two young pilot officers, whose names cannot be released until next of kin have been notified, were flying their aircraft over this region, when it is believed it struck high tension wires carrying 44,000 volts and crashed into the river.

The aircraft and its ilitated crew came from the Trenton Air Station.

Hammer Rail Junctions.

Four bombers and three fighters did not return from these operations, a communique said, adding that one German plane was destroyed out of the few put up by the enemy to counter the blows.

In the course of the heavy bombers hammered a railway junction at Mezzy-Moulaine, an airdrome at Bertigny, a locomotive depot at Villemaldeix and several rail lines at Villeneuve-St. George, all in the Paris area, and a number of German airdromes southwest of Paris.

Other attacks launched from British bases yesterday included:

1. Bombing and strafing runways by R.A.F. Spitfires against German radio installations along the northern coast of France.

2. Attacks by United States 9th Air Force fighter-bombers, on two bridges over the Seine at Rouen and railroad targets in the Oise valley.

Sweeps by American fighter-bombers against rail junctions south of Paris.

4. Attacks on French coast military objectives by 9th Air Force fighter-bombers.

Sweeping up from southern Italy, between 300 and 750 heavy bombers of the U. S. Air Force made a strong attempt yesterday to sever two main rail lines between France and Italy.

One force hit the Turin yards, the double-track Mount Cenis railroad leading west from Turin to Lyon, a bridge on the Italian side of the Modane tunnel through the Alps, and tracks near St. Michel on the French side.

Fly Riviera Line.

Other bombers singled out the Riviera line, bombing a viaduct southwest of Cannes and the Var river bridge, southwest of Nice. Still lobber formations hit the Genoa rail yards and the Recco viaduct to the east. The yards at Novi Legire and the harbor at Savona, both about 25 miles from Genoa, also were targets.

British-based R.A.F. bombers attacked the big chemical centre of Ludwighafen in Germany, objectives along the French coast and scattered mines in enemy waters without loss of any aircraft in operations Saturday night.

It is estimated now that Allied planes poured more than 147,000 tons of bombs on continental targets during May. Of this total, nearly 100,000 tons were carried by seven British bases and 46,000 from the Mediterranean.

Allied airmen in the European, Mediterranean and Middle East theatres shot down at least 430 German planes last week as against an Allied loss of 260.

1,250 U. S.—

Italy-based Planes Out.

The German radio soon after noon announced that single enemy planes were over the lower Danube, suggesting that Italy-based bombers were out. The Nazis asserted that Germany itself was free from enemy planes.

Rocket-carrying Typhoons of the British 2nd Tactical Air Force struck radio-location installations in Northern France for the second successive day.

Preceded by fighter-bombers which disregarded flak defences, a small force of U. S. mediums attacked the Northern France invasion area around midday. Pilots reported moderate flak and no fighter opposition.

Britain enjoyed another raid-free night last night, the German Air Force evidently husbanding every available plane for the day of the Allied invasion.

Major Parties' Leaders Warm Up In Saskatchewan

Regina, June 5 (CP)—Political issues were tossed at electors in many sections of Saskatchewan during the weekend as the three major parties—Liberals, C.C.F., and Progressive Conservatives—warmed up with election day less than a fortnight away.

Federal Agriculture Minister Gardiner in an address at Sturgis said that the socialist plank would lead to dictatorship.

D. C. Doherty of Saskatoon, speaking in a Provincial Broadcast in support of R. D. Ramsay, Progressive Conservative leader, claimed the C.C.F. wants to use Saskatchewan for a "guinea pig" to set up the only socialist government in the Dominion after election day, June 8.

M. J. Coldwell, National C.C.F. leader, advocated control of banks by government and said under a C.C.F. administration the people's money would be "safer than ever."

Another C.C.F. spokesman, E. B. Jolliffe, leader of the opposition in the Ontario legislature attacked editorials in newspapers.

Mr. Jolliffe told a Shaunavon audience that attacks on the C.C.F. last summer of 34 or 35 Ontario newspapers was a joke. The same criticism was appearing in the Regina Leader-Post and the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix now, he added, in reminding them at the meeting that the people in Ontario didn't take the attack of newspapers.

"In Ontario the result was a joke on the newspapers for the papers had represented, not the opinion of the people, but of the publishers who installed the intelligence of the people with their silly notions."

Mr. Gardiner warned that in a dictatorship people either support it or you'll be taken out and lined up against a wall." After mentioning that the C.C.F. has outlined what they intend to socialize, the Federal minister spoke of interrogations. "I notice that even the C.C.F. storm-troopers are in the audience."

"Liberals stand for trade with other countries and not for a self-contained Canada such as the C.C.F. has proposed," he said.

JAPS WITHDRAW FROM WEST END OF BURMA FRONT

Chinese and American Forces Register Gains in Myitkyina

Kandy, Ceylon, June 5 — (AP) — Chinese and American forces have gained 200 more yards in their drive on the southwestern section of Myitkyina in continuing severe fighting in that beleaguered Japanese base in North Burma, it was announced today.

A communique from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters also announced that on the extreme western end of the North Burma front the Japanese are withdrawing from the town of Maungdaw.

British air-borne Chindits were declared to be continuing their attack from the south of Myitkyina from the neighboring village of Wingmaw, and Allied Lewes have raided Naopaup, north of the key Japanese base.

Forty miles to the west at Kamaing the Japanese garrison "is making more closely invested," the war bulletin said, explaining that Allied troops have reached positions 4 1/2 miles east and 6 1/2 miles southeast of the town.

Chinese troops thrusting down the west side of the Mogaung river valley were said to have captured a village.

More Than Match

Allied troops have proved themselves more than a match for the Japanese in India and Burma, it was opined, training, toughness and endurance," and those campaigns can now be regarded with added faction though not with complacence, an official headquarters operational review said.

Noting that arrival of the monsoon season had brought little alarming in Allied operations, either aground or in the air, the review said with guarded optimism:—

"By the Japanese, Burma shows signs, which must appear ominous, of becoming a dangerous jumping off, draining away men and supplies whose reinforcement and replacement will grow more costly and difficult as Allied pressure increases."

Rome in Allied Hands

Rome in the hands of the United Nations is the first European capital lost by the Germans. Its importance from the standpoint of propaganda value is important. Rome is a mark on the way to Berlin, another step taken by the Allied Powers that leads them inevitably nearer to the destruction of Hitlerism and the German militarism. How hard pressed the German must be in their retirement is seen by the rapidity with which they have lost territory and the readiness with which they left the vicinity of Rome. To the German people, however, the Goebbels group may talk and seek to decry the strategic advantage of the United Nations' progress, the advance through Rome of the Allies must seem a symbol of events yet to take place.

The people of Rome according to reports were jubilant at the liberation of their capital from the Germans and happy now Rome, their capital, is back of the front-line of battle. Reports of their welcome with flowers and wine to the advancing Allied troops show that the presence of the Germans was looked upon by the people of Italy as an evil of which they are glad to be relieved. The message of the Allied command and of Marshal Stalin to the Russian about the coming liberation of their capital and of their duties in the protection of their city and in helping the Allied progress to crush the German armies served to make a profound impression upon the Roman people.

The smashing of the German military power and the liberation of Italy are the main objectives of the Allies and the taking of Rome is one of the steps in the campaign, but of course a most impressive incident for the moral effect it will have on the Balkan states and the effect it will have on the Germans' morale.

All eyes have been looking towards Rome for the months of the Allied invasion of Italy and now in the powerful new offensive of the United Nations the Eternal City is in Allied hands. The meeting of the Fifth and Eighth Armies offers a powerful indication of the irresistible power of the Allied drive which also sweeps the German defences away swiftly, with three lines of defences broken through and fallen in a few weeks.

Allied power has a terrific momentum as raided Germany knows and as the Battle of Italy has revealed. It comes at the time when Hitler's power is on the wane, when he cannot get the effects he once managed to secure.

100 Years After

It is one hundred years ago on June 6th since the Y.M.C.A. came into being—one of the great world movements which has fitted into the world of the past century and has expanded in a way which makes very clear the great potentialities of such an organization which has within it the germs of meeting ever new problems as the years decide pass.

The centenary has been marked and is being marked in many cities and towns and in many lands. The complexity of modern life is no barrier to it, the Y.M.C.A. fits into the problems of life because it serves so profound a truth and purpose in every age. What the world would be like without it is difficult to conceive.

The anniversary brings into highlight the influence of an inspired thought and institution. The founder could not have foreseen the extent to which the movement has spread into a world institution. It offers, too, the hope that other inspired men will rise and start other movements which will sweep on for the benefit of human life.

Recently there was another anniversary, that of the conversion of General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, another inspired man the benediction of whose service to mankind will go marching on down the ages.

These great movements do not pass away because they profoundly interested in humanity.

"Where Are You Now?"

(Montreal Star)

How much do the German people know of the progress of the war? How much do the Japanese people know? It is impossible to give accurate answers to these questions, but there is plenty of evidence, in the case of Japan, at any rate, for believing that the Japanese troops do not even know where they are fighting. Some of them, ever since Pearl Harbor, believe they are on the American continent.

Two such pieces of evidence have just been made available. Private Joe Morris, of Lakewood, Ohio, who was wounded in the Solomons, said a Japanese prisoner taken there remarked to him: "The Americans may take Australia, but will never recapture San Francisco." Morris asked the Jap where he thought he was. "In the Florida Everglades," the prisoner replied.

The second bit of testimony is from Lieut. Jerome Langer, a Coast Guard navigation officer and the first man back from Wakde Island, where Americans recently landed. The Japanese forces there, he said, believe they are fighting off the California coast.

Their bewilderment is understandable—they are meeting so many Americans.

What Makes Birds Sing?

(F. Thone in Science News Letter)

Small birds singing lustily in the spring-time are not caroling hymns of praise, as a former generation of rather sentimental poets once declared. Neither are they merely wooing their mates, as other bards liked to imagine. At the outset, at least, their mates-to-be simply are not there. In the spring, cardinals of most species, males come first, and females follow in a later wave.

In the meantime, the males have staked out their respective claim on hunting grounds that will have yield caterpillars, or insects, or whatever it is that the hungry brood will need. They proclaim title by singing as loudly as they can, and it is a rather bumper crop of insects with fierce little wing buffetings and pecks. Thus small birds' singing, though more melodious, serves pretty much the same purpose as the crowing of roosters or the gobbling of tom turkeys.

Feeding War in Bulgaria

(U. S. Foreign Commerce Weekly)

The shortages of essential products that exists today in many parts of Nazi dominated Europe are giving rise to expedients that may appropriatively be described as distinctly unusual.

Among such is a recent measure in Bulgaria. Recognizing the tremendous need for cotton, the two Bulgar archbishops (of the eastern Orthodox Church) requested permission from ecclesiastical authorities for the cultivation of this fibre on all free church and monastery lands, including graveyards.

The Bulgarian press reports that permission was granted. Even graves are not immune from the iron necessities of war.

Boys' Prank Ensnares Gestapo

(New York Herald Tribune)

From Norway came this tale of how some boys, unconverted to Hitler's "new order," amused themselves one day:

They placed a bundle of underground newspapers in an Oslo office building lobby, then notified Gestapo plainclothesmen that the papers were to be picked up by patriots. Next they called a Nazi-controlled police station, reported about the papers and suggested that plainclothesmen be sent to retrieve them in order to avoid attracting undue attention.

The ensuing fight between the waiting Gestapo men and the city police was everything that the boys had hoped.

JUNE IN WARTIME

June, the month that used to be
Time of wedding bells and roses,
Now through saddened eyes we see.
Love must wait till warfare closes.
Wait or hurry! is the cry;
Sweethearts have no time to tarry;
Speak your vows and say good bye!
Thus it is when soldiers marry.

Time was June was young and gay,
Bashful as a bride and pretty.
Not so light her step today.
Care has come, and it's a pity!
Hurry, hurry, He'll be gone!
Eastward now his ship is heading.
Marry him and send him on!
Haste must mark the soldier's wedding.

June, the month of love, life-long,
Now by hate is torn asunder.
Scarcely heard are bell and song
For the roar of cannon thunder.
Scarcely heard the vows they speak
For the anchor chains that rattle,
Or the engine's farewell shriek,
As the groom goes off to battle.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JUNE 5th., 1924

The Rev. A. S. Kerr and Mr. William McIntosh of this city are attending the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Toronto.

Mrs. McMullen, of Frankford, is spending a few days here with Mrs. R. J. Benson.

Mr. Fred Wallace, of Port Arthur, Ontario, is home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallace, John St.

Mr. J. O. Herity, Secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, delivered an address in Napanee this evening under the auspices of the Masonic Order. His subject was "Canada and the Empire."

Mrs. Thomas Clare, Albert St., is visiting friends at Fenelon Falls.

30 YEARS AGO

JUNE 5th., 1914

The band of the 15th. Regiment, under the direction of Mr. E. R. Hinchey performed in an excellent manner at the reception to the Governor General, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught on the court house lawn.

Lorne Wrest, of this city, left his bicycle on Front Street last evening and when he returned it was gone and it is still missing.

Dr. Mather left today for Montreal enroute to England where he will spend several months taking post-graduate work in the big hospitals.

Messrs. Harry Moorman and William Ketcheson had a narrow escape yesterday when the motor car in which they were travelling was struck by a train of cars moving on the Canada Cement Company's branch line in Thurlow Township. They suffered severe cuts and bruises and the car was badly damaged.

40 YEARS AGO

JUNE 5th., 1904

A Tyendinaga man drove his horse and conveyance down the footbridge gangway on Saturday morning with the intention of crossing the river. "How do they get their darned wagons across that bridge?" he asked, and the spectators gave him the merry he-ha.

Mr. E. D. Gough, the clothier, has returned home from Toronto.

The appointment of Dr. R. Tracy as Surgeon-Major of the 49th. Battalion is a good one. Dr. Tracy has been with the troops three years in the service and was with the field force during the North West Rebellion.

The second drive of new logs is now running into the harbor boom.

Mr. William McNab, of Montana, who at one time was in the office of the late Dr. R. D. Willson in this city, is spending a few days here enroute to his old home in Ireland.

The second phonographic concert given by Mr. M. M. Redder at Holloway Street Methodist Church on Saturday evening was well worth hearing. The selections given by Prof. Caulfield and Miss Caulfield and reproduced by the phonograph were especially appreciated.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

When the Indians saw the first steamboats moving on the rivers and lakes, smoke belching from the tall funnels, they were loud in amazement and called their friends to view the "fire ships". Soon, however, and paddle-wheels became accustomed to the sight of swift-passing steam vessels, propelled, more gradually supersecting paddle-wheelers. The earliest "Maid-of-the Mist," launched in 1846, was a propeller steamer. It is unlikely that daughter or grandaughter craft of this romantic route have ever been embarrassed to or awestruck passengers than those who ventured forth into the "Maid" on the dim, dead days of "forty-six", for the ship as well as the Falls aroused wonder.

The Steamboat Bills of 100 years ago often took their fishing rods along when they undertook a trip by "one of those new-fangled steamers." Even if they did not, they had read a lesson for themselves in misadventure. On the steamship "Enterprise" in the year 1844, the vessel suffered an engine breakdown and the captain set off for Kingston to gain assistance, taking two of the Durham boats being towed by the steamer. Before the skipper had returned, there was a dearth of foodstuffs, and to cap the climax, the cook mutinied. Those on board the "Enterprise" decided that they had best shift for themselves, so they rounded up a couple of oars and succeeded in landing enough fish to satisfy the pangs of hunger. They also attempted to capture a sheep on the nearby bank but failed in this effort. At long last the captain turned up with help and provisions, and the "Enterprise" was able to reach its destination, Kingston, seven days after leaving Bytown (later Ottawa).

The Treatment of Asthma.

My early remembrance of asthma was observing the patient sitting near a window with his whole attention all or chair attempting to get his breath. Every effort he made would pass over and that asthmatic would very seldom fail. There we no known cure.

Today, physicians are not satisfied to relieve the attack by a hypodermic injection of epinephrine (adrenalin) but in every case try to find the cause of the asthma. Fortunately the cause of asthma can be found in a large percentage of cases.

In cases of asthma caused by allergy, tests are made to find the substance or substances causing the attacks, and then by avoiding these substances if possible or giving injections of these substances as in the case of pollen for hay fever. The treatment of asthma caused by infection is, of course, the removal of this infection at its starting place, then treatment with vaccines and the sulfa drugs.

In mild asthma relief is obtained by breathing in the fumes from a few drops of adrenalin 1 to 100 solution, not the 1 to 1,000 solution which is injected under the skin. A tablet containing 2-8 grain of ephedrine with a barbiturate drug is also used.

In severe asthmatic attacks injecting 10 to 15 drops of adrenalin (1 to 1,000) or breathing in pure oxygen is usual treatment.

In children, treatment for asthmatic attacks is the old remedy syrup of Ipecac, 1-2 to 1 teaspoonful to cause vomiting. The vomiting is often more effective than coughing to bring up the plug of mucous from the small bronchial tubes.

Keeping down the amount of water in the tissues helps to relieve obstruction of the bronchial tubes. Also the amount of table salt be reduced in and on food as salt holds waters in the tissues.

PRESIDENTIAL BEE

During the early days of the republic men with a presidential bee in their bonnets started to work early just as they do today.

Early in 1821, even before President James Monroe had started to serve his second term, several members of his official family already had their eye on the next presidential election.

The bee was buzzing particularly in the bonnets of Secretary of State John Quincy Adams, Speaker Henry Clay, Secretary of the Treasury William Crawford, Senator John Calhoun and General Andrew Jackson.

Four years later Adams won, but in 1821 he pretended he would do nothing underhand to get the presidency.

The state of his mind is indicated by an entry he wrote in his diary under date of February 23, 1821:

"Hopkinson dined with us . . . I told Mr. Hopkinson that I was perfectly aware of the exertions making by Mr. Crawford himself and his friends to secure the Presidency at the next election . . .

"If this effort was to be the prize of cabal and intrigue, of purchasing newspapers, bribing by appointments, or bargaining for foreign missions, I had no ticket in that lottery.

"Whether I had the qualifications necessary for a President of the United States was, to say the least, very doubtful to myself. But that I had no talent for obtaining the office by such means was perfectly clear. I half-believe talent no inclination for intrigue, I can do nothing either in canvas for myself or to counteract the canvassing of others.

"I will have no stipendary editor of newspapers to extol my talents and services and to criticise or calumniate by rivals. I will deserve none of these. I will do defend laws to increase my own patronage or multiply my influence in my favor."

Judging from his diary and letters written during those years, John Quincy Adams thought about little for the next four years except his chances of being elected President.

When he did finally become President he didn't forget Joseph Hopkinson, whom he told the things he wrote in the passage just quoted. He appointed his intimate friend a federal judge! All of which proves that there is more than one way to skin a cat.

Servicing Foreign Trade

It is an historical fact that Canada's prosperity has always been dependent upon export trade.

This will be equally true after the war, when our greatly expanded productive capacity, now devoted to war needs, must find new markets for its surplus output.

Distance, risk and time, however, place obstacles in the way of foreign trade. They can be overcome only by greater mutual knowledge and confidence between parties involved, and by enabling payments to be made easily and without tying up capital.

Bankers' Letters of Credit guarantee prompt payment and help to break down these barriers of distance, uncertainty and time.

This and other services rendered by The Dominion Bank will continue to be of great importance to those interested in foreign trade after the war.

WEDDINGS

SMITH—PARKS

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, June 3rd, at four o'clock, at Holloway Street United Church by the Rev. J. A. Dilts, when Dorothy Jean Parks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller Parks, was united in marriage to Mr. John P. Smith, son of Mrs. E. P. Smith and the late Mr. Smith.

Mr. Wm. Connor presided at the organ and Miss Marjory Hitchon delightfully rendered "Because".

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal March from Lohengrin, the bride looked lovely in her floor-length gown of white silk jersey and shoulder length veil. She wore a gold locket, gift of the groom, and carried a Colonial bouquet.

Her attendants were her sisters, Audrey and Olive, dressed in floor-length gowns of shell pink and heaven blue sheer with finger tip veils and carrying matching nosegays.

Mr. Tom Walker, of Belleville, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. John Gould and Mr. Clifford Parks, brother of the bride.

The reception was held at the Hotel Quinte. The bride's mother chose a black and white silk jersey dress with black accessories and corsage of Rapture roses and lily-of-the-valley.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara, the bride chose a black and white pin-striped suit, with white accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside in Belleville.

MOORE—COULTER

Irises, peonies and spirea graced the altar and chancel of Christ Church on Saturday afternoon, June 3, at three o'clock, for a beautiful wedding ceremony, when Lieut. Nursing Sister Blanche Eileen Coulter, of Kingston, daughter of Mrs. Alfred Alexander Coulter, and the late Mr. Coulter, Belleville, became the bride of Lieut. Robert Taylor Moore, Petawawa, son of Mrs. Robert Moore, and the late Mr. Moore, Toronto. The Rev. G. G. Wright was the officiating clergyman.

Wedding music was played softly throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register by Mrs. Grace Calvert.

Given in marriage by Sgt. James R. McIntosh, the bride looked lovely in her long gown of white embroidered organdy and cape length veil which draped softly about her head from a halo of white tulle, embroidered with bugle beads. She carried an all white bouquet of roses and bouvardia.

Miss Evelyn Coulter, as her sister's bridesmaid, wore a pretty floor length dress of powder blue sheer and sitting daintily atop her head was a matching blue headdress trimmed with pink. She carried pink roses and larkspur.

Mr. Victor Moore, of Toronto, was groomsman and the usher was Mr. Jack Luffman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, who wore for the occasion an effective black ensemble with black and white accessories and corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother was also attired in a black gown, accented with white accessories and corsage of white carnations.

On the wedding trip to Montreal, the bride donned her nursing sister uniform of the R.C.A.M.C.

Out-of-town guests were from Toronto, Kingston and Halifax.

Piano Recital By Pupils of Miss L. Riggs

Youthful pianists, pupils of Miss Leona Riggs, A.T.C.M., share star honors with their musical director, for the enjoyable piano recital they presented to their parents, friends and guests in the Ladies' Parlor of Bridge Street United Church on Saturday afternoon. All those taking part in the program seemed to possess fine musical instinct and incisive musical intelligence. Both the boys and girls seemed very enthusiastic about the whole concert, and assumed a most calm attitude throughout the entire recital, a quality attributed to artists of long standing. They were conclusive proof of constant study, time and work under the excellent training of their teacher, Miss Leona Riggs.

The program was conducted as follows:

Tommy Yates—Gavotte and Musette—Blake.

Frances Jean Finkle— Pratie, Oriental Song, The Giant—All three by Ketterer.

Elinor McCormick—The King Returns.—Blake.

Audrey Jobson—Sonatina—Clementi; The Jolly Roger—Eckstein.

Mary Elizabeth Black —Russian Cradle Song—Berlin; Italian Song —Tschaikowsky.

Shirley Howard — Auto Ride—Goodrich; In a Chinese Village —Quaile and Hart.

Phyllis Beatty—Songs—The Four Leaf Clover—Brownell; The Little China Figure—Leone.

Gordon Babbit—The Picnic.

Billy Babbit—Soft Music is Playing.

Jackie Evans—Jumping Joan — Bragdon; My Fiddle.

Jay Howard—The Little Corporal—Blake.

Gordon and Billy Babbit—Duet —Go Tell Aunt Rhoda.

Buddy Bird—Waltz — Quaile; Country Dance—Johnstone.

Russell Edwards— Captain Kidd —Blake.

Betty Matter—A Little Song — Rogers.

Bruce Neal— John Pershing— A March—Blake.

Shirley Fox—Blowing Bubbles — Auld; From Way Down South—Arr. Rasbach.

Diane Gibson—To Begin With; Little Ballerina.

Katherine Cameron—Barcarole—Bergmuller; To a Wild Rose—MacDowell.

Phyllis Beatty — Nocturne—Boykin.

D. Gibson, F J. Finkle, K. Cameron—Trio—Dreams—Bliss.

Infectious Mononucleosis

Here is a disease that is not well known to the average person. Nevertheless, it has become quite common. It is called infectious mononucleosis.

Three types of the disease have been described. One kind is called glandular. In this type, the disease starts with fever, headache and pain and stiffness in the back of the neck. There is enlargement of the lymph glands in the neck, but after a time many of the lymph glands throughout the body may become enlarged. This glandular enlargement may persist for many months after all the other symptoms have cleared up.

In some instances, that is, in about half the cases, the spleen—which is in the upper left part of the abdomen—also becomes enlarged.

In the second type of the disease, called anginose, the symptoms may be much like those which occur in severe tonsilitis. There is sore throat, swelling of the tonsils, pain in the throat, and fever. Oftentimes, germs known as the spirillum of Vincent and the bacillus of Ducrey are found in the throat. These are the same germs that are found in cases of trench mouth.

The third type of infectious mononucleosis, known as the febrile variety, occurs most often in grown-ups. In this type, the disorder starts suddenly with headache and stiffness of the neck. There may be a skin rash and, if the spleen is enlarged—which often occurs — the disease may have symptoms much like typhoid fever. In this type of the disorder there may also be enlargement of the lmph glands. None of these types of the disease is serious and the outlook for recovery is always good.

A test known as the Paul-Bunnell test is used in making a diagnosis of infectious mononucleosis. This test is made by taking some of the patient's blood serum and mixing it with red blood cells from a sheep. If the patient's serum will coagulate or clot the red boods cells of the sheep, the patient probably does have infectious mononucleosis.

In infectious mononucleosis one of the outstanding things which happen is for the number of white blood cells to increase, particularly the kind known as mononuclear cells.

Doctor James P. A. Halcrow, of Scotland, and his co-workers, have studied an epidemic of this disease which occurred in a group of persons varying from 20 to 45 years of age. Many of the patients who developed the disease had but slight symptoms, while in others the symptoms were quite severe. They attempted to treat some of the patients with sulfa drugs, but found little if any value in this treatment. As a general rule the disease clears up after a time without causing any complications. However, because it is easily confused with a number of other disorders, knowledge of its symptoms would appear to be important.

Women's Activities

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The June meeting of the Plainfield W.I., was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Clarence Hall, with an attendance of twenty-one ladies and four children. Mrs. Hall presided and opened the meeting.

Mrs. Clarence Hall gave a poem, "When the War is Won".

Minutes were read by the Secretary, Mrs. Stan Hazzard. Cards were read from sick folks thanking them for flowers sent during illness. A letter from Mrs. Bill Bailey was also read thanking the Institute for the lovely box sent to her husband, who is with the Canadian Army in Italy.

A Flower Committee to look after the sick was appointed namely: Mrs. Don Hall, Miss A. Hamilton and Mrs. Violet Elliott.

Sewing for Red Cross was handed out by the Convener, Mrs. Fred Hall.

It was decided that the ladies meet at the Orange Hall on June 15, to quilt two quilts which are ready for war work.

Current events were given by Mrs. F. Prindle.

The program in charge of Mrs. Don Hall was on Red Cross work all over the world and some very interesting papers were given by Mrs. D. Hall, Mrs. F. Hall, Mrs. M. Cronkright and Mrs. H. Palmer. Mrs. Ken Hall gave a humorous reading on "Victory Gardening".

"Happy Birthday" was sung to little Bruce Hall, who was four years old.

There was a collection of $1.05. War Work collection for June was $14.50.

Lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Fred Hall, Mrs. Ken Hall, Mrs. Ed. Emmerson and Miss Olive Hall and a social half hour was spent.

Silverleaf Lard

Now in good supply and very reasonably priced, this fine cooking fat should be on every housewife's shelf

There was a time not so very long ago, when there seemed to be a real risk that we in Canada might find ourselves short of cooking fats. Fortunately, the efforts of Canadian farmers have averted that danger and now there is no reason why every kitchen in Canada should not be supplied with a pound or two of that wonderful standby, Silverleaf Lard.

Not only is lard a very valuable source of energy but it also contains other vital elements absolutely essential to health. Use lard in all kinds of delicious dishes, for pan-frying and of course in baked goods. It is good—good for you —and we now have enough.

Martha Logan

RHUBARB PIE

1½ cups sifted pastry flour
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. baking powder
7 tbsps. chilled Silverleaf Lard
Ice cold water

Mix and sift into a bowl the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut half of lard into these dry ingredients, to the size of wheat grains—then cut in remainder of lard, to the size of small peas. Sprinkle with cold water, and mix with a fork, adding enough water to make a dough which will just form a mass that cleans easily from the bowl. Chill.

FOR THE FILLING:

5 cups ½-inch pieces of rhubarb
6 tbsps. flour
1½ cups sugar
1 tbsp. butter

Prepare the rhubarb. Add combined flour and sugar. Turn mixture into a deep pie dish (the sides may be lined with rolled-out pie-paste, if desired); dot with butter. Moisten edges of dish. Roll out paste, slit for escape of steam, and place over the rhubarb. Trim and crimp edges. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for 12 minutes, then reduce heat to moderately hot, 375 degrees, and bake until rhubarb is tender and crust baked and nicely browned. Note: A support may be placed in the centre of the pie dish before turning in the filling.

Peterborough Residents Journey To Cobourg To Attend Reception

Cobourg, Ont., June 5 (CP)—Residents of Peterborough came to Cobourg by special train and automobiles yesterday to attend a reception for the corvette, H.M.C.S. Peterborough, named after the nearby city.

The ship arrived here from Kingston at the noon hour and Mayor Hamilton greeted the ship's commander, Lieut. Jack Raine, a native of Peterborough.

Alderman H. Sands of Peterborough was chairman for the official reception ceremony. Mayor Hamilton spoke on behalf of the city and greetings were extended on behalf of Cobourg by Mayor Jack Burnet and on behalf of Port Hope by Mayor Charles Stevenson. Rev. J. Piler of Peterborough dedicated the ship.

Mother of the first Peterborough boy to be killed in the navy in the present war, Mrs. Cora McDonald bade the ship Godspeed.

Birthday Celebration Is Much Enjoyed

Roslin.—Over one hundred neighbors and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Alford, 9th Concession of Tyendinaga, in honor of Mrs. Ida Colden's birthday on May 26. Dancing and cards were enjoyed with Mr. Elmer Cross and Carman Tracey furnishing the music. At midnight, a lunch was served by Mrs. Colden assisted by Mrs. Wm. Alford, Mrs. R. Copeland, Mrs. N. Wilson and Mrs. J. Brennan. Mrs. Colden received many lovely gifts and also some money.

Friends from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McLean and family from Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Watson and family, of Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tracey and Mrs. Fisher, Belleville.

All departed wishing Mrs. Colden many more happy birthdays.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Play Up Your Eyes.

It looks as though artificial roses are beginning to disappear from the cheeks of the pretty dollies. We suspect that eyeshadows are responsible. Shadows are going strong—in a lovely faint-color way —especially for evening wear. What with laying on powder, tinting the lips, fussing with eyelid pigment, touching up lashes and eyebrows, there just doesn't seem to be anything for the old rouge compact to do. It works a little during the day time, if the complexion is pale, but it lays off in the stroke of six.

Eyes are getting plenty of attention from the beauticians. When giving a facial, Marguerite, the beautiful operator, will spend considerable time seeing to it that the areas surrounding the eyes are getting a wholesale lot of nourishing cream and at least ten minutes of gentle tapping. War worries show up first around the eyes; tissues are soft there, susceptible to fine lines and general depletion. Marguerite, when fluffing on the glamorous make-up, after the facial, will give the cash customer some suggestions about playing up her eyes to best advantage.

Touched up lids seem to suit the evening styles of the moment. They fall in step with long skirts, quaint little jackets, flowers in the hair.

If you have had a rush day—and who hasn't, on all days?—and if you feel that your tottering steps may get you to the party, but that you'll probably be toted home on a stretcher, then boil your weary bones in the bathtub, play for half an hour with cosmetics and make-up. It is heartening to see that freshness can be somewhat restored, that your beauty banners are not really dragging in the dust.

Bathe your eyes with warm water, then with cold. Dry gently, apply an eye cream, going round and round the eye with a single finger, then tapping the flesh gently. As the cream disappears, keep using more. Remove the cream with a piece of gauze that has been dipped in diluted witch hazel.

Proceed with the powder pad. Brush the powder from lashes and eyebrows, putting brilliantine on the bristles to provide luster.

Form clear-cut lines with the lipstick. Do a wide grin, work the pigment into the lip creases.

Now comes the tricky work—painting the lids of your eyes. Be canny, deft and stingy. You'll find the creamy shadows easier to manage than the compact. Start at the lashes, do a seductive fade away as you pass the coloring substance upward and outward. Don't let it extend beyond the far ends of the eyebrows.

There's a grand array of colors from which to choose: brown, bronze, mauve, greens, blues, purples and blends.

WASTE PAPER

IS URGENTLY NEEDED FOR VITAL WAR USES

● Millions of containers, made from waste paper, carry vital supplies to our armed forces.

Waste paper is essential to the production of these containers . . . those sent overseas cannot be salvaged for re-use!

To replace them . . . and supply additional containers for overseas and essential civilian requirements . . . CANADA NEEDS 20,000 TONS OF WASTE PAPER EVERY MONTH:

WHAT IS WANTED

You can remedy this critical paper shortage by saving every scrap of Waste Paper, namely: wrapping paper — store bags — cardboard — cartons — corrugated board — old magazines and books—envelopes and letters—newspapers. These represent the raw material for making vitally needed Paper containers.

HOW TO DO IT

Tie securely in separate bundles. (The little time you take will save thousands of man hours.) Then dispose of it through your local voluntary Salvage Committee or other War Voluntary Organization, or sell it through any known trade channels, your pedlar, dealers or others. The important thing is to get your Waste Paper moving to the mills.

Washington Senators Hailed As Flag Contenders Fall Apart On Western Trip And Now Resting In Cellar

Drop Doubleheader to the Chicago White Sox on Sunday

BROWNS STILL FIRST

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sport Writer

The Washington Senators, hailed as a pennant contender in the American League, are all but falling apart on their first western road trip. The Nats dropped a doubleheader to Chicago White Sox yesterday, 6-5 in 10 innings and 6-1, and plummeted into the cellar.

Bill Gernert, with four hits in the opener, and Tom Turner, with a home run and two singles in the nightcap, sparked the Sox to their double win.

St. Louis Browns retained first place in the American loop by splitting a twin bill with the Athletics while the runner-up New York Yankees divided a bargain bill at Cleveland.

Bob Newsom, added by Joe Perry's relief pitching, twirled the Al's to a 4-3 triumph in the opener. The Browns won the afterpiece by the same score when relief pitcher Jack Kramer singled Mark Christman home from second.

Cleveland's largest turnout of the season — 27,243 — saw Rookie Joe Page pitch the Yanks to a 6-5 triumph in an 11-inning first game. The Indians took the nightcap 4-3 behind the six-hit pitching of Allie Reynolds and Steve Gromek.

Hurls Two-Hitter.

Big Bill Lee twirled a two-hit 1-0 victory against St. Louis Cardinals to give the Philadelphia Phillies a split of their doubleheader. The National League champions won the opener, 4-2, behind Harry Gumbert and George Munger.

Pittsburgh swept a twin bill from New York Giants, 9-1 and 7-4. The Pirates walloped five homers in the opener, two each by Jimmy Russell and Babe Dahlgren and one by Vince DiMaggio.

Cincinnati beat Boston Braves twice. Gerald Walker's first-inning homer won the opener 1-0. The Reds combined 14 hits with four Boston errors to take the nightcap, 7-3.

Detroit and Boston Red Sox split their war relief twin bill. Dizzy Trout chalked up his seventh win for the Tigers in the opener, 2-1. Rookie Clem Hausman then pitched the Sox to a 5-1 triumph.

Chicago Cubs beat Brooklyn, 6-3, in the first game of a scheduled double-header. The second was called because of darkness, after the 10th inning with the score tied, 3-3.

5,555 SITUPS IN THREE HOURS

Great Lakes, Ill., June 8 (AP)—AB. Bill Froehlig did 5,555 situps in three hours and five minutes, recently.

A sit-up is part of your daily dozen to reduce the waist-line. You lie flat on your back, someone holds your ankles, and then you rise to a sitting position.

Froehlig, 150-pound, 18-year-old recruit from Kingsford, Mich., held his pounds, 14 1-2 ounces during his exercises.

"But I stopped too soon, he said. "I could have done 3,000 or 3,000 more, and some of those days I am going to do 10,000."

The navy claims Froehlig's feat is a world's record.

TORONTO LEAFS DROP TO FIFTH PLACE IN LOOP

Suffer Twin Defeat at the Hands of the Jersey Giants

ORIOLES BEATEN

By The Associated Press

Sunday's double headers in the International League resulted in the tantalizing tie of seven clubs for other still kept rolling not so mercury skong.

Rochester put an end to Baltimore's string of eight victories by taking both games, 3-2 and 6-3, but Syracuse kept up its lusty ways by dropping both ends of a twin bill to Buffalo, 6-3 and 10-8.

Roy Gardner, of the Red Wings outpitched Red Barrett of the Orioles in the first opener, allowing only six hits to Rosher's seven. Bill Zimmerman, who hit seventh game in the nightcap, though he needed help from Lou Sakata in the sixth inning.

Zeb Eaton, pitcher-coach of the Buffalo Bisons, made three hits in the two games. He drove in three runs in each game.

Jersey City's league leading Giants captured both ends of a double header from Toronto, 2-1 and 1-0, keeping the Leafs in the second division place. Bob Barbalace and Jack Miller checked sixtight to register the decisions. Miller allowing only two hits in blanking the Leafs in the nightcap.

The last place Newark Bears ended a 14 game losing streak by taking the finale of a double bill from Montreal, after losing the 1st 8-4. Stan Breard, rookie Royal pitcher, singled twice with the bases full to drive in four runs in the opener.

Gerald Walker and Arnold Cejka, Reds.—Walker clinched Braves with four hits in opener, winning 1-0; Walker hit homer in first for only run of game and used his hits to pace Reds in second victory.

Babe Dahlgren and Frank Colman, Pirates.—Dahlgren hit his fifth and sixth homers of week in opener; Colman's pinch single in eighth inning scored what proved to be winning run in 7-4 victory over Giants.

Ben Johnson, Cubs and John Mooty, Phillies.—Johnson's single in ninth drove in winning run in opener; Bolling made four hits and drove in four runs in nightcap to be responsible for Dodger tie.

Joseph Hopp, Cards and Bill Lee, Phillies.—Hopp made three hits and scored twice in Cards' 4-2 win in opener; Lee held Cards to two hits in finale, registering 2nd win.

Joe Page, Yankees and Mickey Rocco, Indians.—Page won 11 inning opener, hit triple and scored twice; Rocco made three hits and drove in two runs in 4-3 win to give Indians even split.

Ed Harrell and Tom Turner, White Sox.—Made four hits, drove in two runs in 6-3 win in 10 innings opener; Turner hit home run and two singles in second game to give White Sox double win.

Lightning Destroys Barn on McKenzie Farm

Madoc, Special) — During the severe electric storm that passed over Madoc on Friday evening about 7.45, an old landmark, the barn of more than 100 years, a large barn on the farm of the late Duncan McKenzie estate was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

At present Cecil Holland is living on the farm. There were some pigs in the barn at the time and they were unable to get out. He also lost some hay. The barn was partly covered by insurance.

Pensive Pails To Add Belmont Stakes To Preakness And Derby

By The Canadian Press

Pensive of Warren Wright's Calumet Farm failed Saturday to enter the select group of triple-crown turf winners when he finished second in the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park to William Ziegler's Bomding Home, an outsider that paid $34.70. The winner of the Derby and Preakness was not blamed so much as his ridder, Eddie Arcaro, who was said to have started Pensive's home stretch run too soon. Bounding Home, beaten seven times as a two-year-old, picked up $55,050 for his victory. Pensive adding $10,000 to his earnings of $366,010 for the last two years. Calumet Farm officials are expected to give Pensive a battle, pulled up lame.

Hockey broke into the sport news yesterday when Conn Smythe of Toronto announced the trade of Ken Kilrea for Laurence Thibeault of the Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League. The Wings have also signed three Chinese brothers, William, Alexander and Thomas Low, of Sudbury, Ont., who will play for their Galt farm club.

Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians last night suspended pitcher Vernon Kennedy for alleged insubordination. The twirler had won 10 and lost seven games last year and failed to win his showing comprises two victories and two defeats.

The Canadian Army baseball team last night defeated the Yankees of the U. S. Army Central Base nine at Wembley Stadium, London, before 20,000 fans. Sgt. E. F. Smith of Kingston, Ont., catcher for the Canucks, won the encounter when he poled a homer with the bases loaded.

TORONTO, June 8 — (CP) — The youth of Montreal are said to be getting more baseball conscious, and turning away from the snuhhall pastime, if Montreal Herald Parsley reports. And the reason for this is not hard to find, he continues, but lies in the sudden ascension of Stan Breard, native of the Montreal district, to a post in the International League with Montreal Royals.

Just along, it's been baseball that appealed to the lads, but they are beginning to get the idea, that under proper conditions there are grand opportunities in baseball for a willing youngster who has a good pair of hands or a productive batting stance.

Since Breard grew into home-run-and-key-makes-good complex in the Royals, interest has been seething among Montreal youngsters. A new league was formed in the Montreal district, and enthusiasm has been mounting in the other leagues. So, even if Breard doesn't turn out to be a burning star in the league, he can feel well satisfied with his share in baseball because of the way he stimulated the game in Canada's big port city.

Incidentally:

The heat is on the bookies at Winnipeg tracks this season. Herb Manning reports in the Winnipeg Tribune. He says five of the city plunters' pals paid fines totalling $1,000 as authorities crack down on their extra-permutual activities. . . Johnny Lifford, Detroit boxer, but still game boxing-star, seems to have taken a leaf from Tunney's book. Lifford has been cripples the title aspirations of younger and fleeter boxers all along. His latest victory was over Ralph Walton, tough little Negro scrapper from Montreal. . . . Mike Rodden, former N. H. L. referee, football coach and sports editor of the old Toronto Globe, is handling the Kingston Whig-Standard sports page now, having succeeded Bill Walshe. He is writing a column, "Highways of Sport," filled with reminiscences of old-time athletes and their doings.

A Story with a Moral

The mules ressged and all stood still.
We took their leads and carried on:
Men pulled the cannon up the hill
And reached the top at break of dawn.
Sure it was tough, the mule's stood still.
But we were men and did not stop;
Our orders were to take that hill,
We stuck to it and reached the top.
We hear about the strikes at home,
And wonder what it's all about;
Because, amid the ills of home,
It's just the mules that stand and pout. — (Pvt. C. L. Morehead.)

Baseball Oddities.

The injury which put George Case, Washington speed boy, out of Cecil Travis's infield, has transformed one of the most unusual ever to disable a player. George dislocated his left shoulder—believe it or not—while putting on his overcoat.

That was One for the Book, yet it has been topped by some training camp accidents. Several years ago, when George Mcticrich, Red Sox infielder, was a promising rookie at Casey Stengel's Brave camp at Bradenton, Fla., a catfish he attacked George, rammed one of his tentacles through the palm of his shoe and on through his foot. George had stepped on the catfish trying to get the hook out of its mouth.

But Pat Freddie Fitzsimmons, now managing the Phillies, came up with one that was the most unusual. Taking his siesta on the porch of the training hotel at Sarasota, Fla., one of the mosquitoes out, Fitz rocked on his own right fingers, and got it well which could be heard all over Sarasota. Freddie was out for a fortnight. "Imagine that happening to me!" said John McGraw, his manager, each aggravated pain he required no imagining to Fitz, the guy whose fingers were hurt.

More Softball.

There has been a suggestion made that the Belleville Ladies Softball League affiliate with the Provincial Women's Softball Union and a decision may be reached this week, according to Secretary Hollie Fuhrer. In the event of affiliation if effected the local ladies loop would enter the senior class junior and the intermediate.

Manager Harold Starrie Barnett is keen on the junior setup and says he can round out a contending squad from the material now available with the Belleville Ladies Softball League, but in the event Fenny Barnett is serious about the sponsoring of a senior team in Belleville no doubt the team managers will give Chuck the green light. In the meantime there's ladies softball at the Armouries tonight while the men go at it in a practice scrimmage.

This year Pensive met the Derby and the Preakness but failed to join the greats to win the American triple crown prize by finishing out on the Belmont Stakes Saturday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 39

BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Forces of evil are often at work in a bridge deal. Sometimes they favor declarer; sometimes, his opponents. What's one man's problem becomes easy meat for the other side.

Gaze upon this deal:

	NORTH
	♠A J 10 9 8 6
	♥A 10 5
	♦None
	♣A 8 5 4
WEST		EAST
♠3 2		♠None

♣K J 10 9		♣7 3
	SOUTH
	♠K Q 7 5 4
	♥K Q 6
	♦8 4
	♣Q 6 2

South is declarer at a six spade contract, doubled by west. And when west starts with an opening lead of a top diamond, it looks as if two down is the best he could do.

To save one declarer might hope east has the ace-king. Then he could lead a small dummy club. And if east took the club king, the south queen would win a trick sooner or later.

But the double warns south that west may have the king. In which case, only a stripping-endplay can strike as many suits as possible.

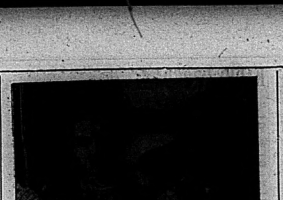
Declarer trumps the first diamond, takes two rounds of trumps, trumps the last south diamond and runs three hearts. He is now stripped of the red suits and opponents are stripped of trumps.

Now, he leads a small south club toward the ace, still assuming west has the king. When west plays the nine, dummy ducks, hoping east will not or cannot win that trick.

That puts west in a hole. If he leads a red card, dummy trumps and south stuffs a club. If west leads a club, the-south queen is good. Clever plays, these strip acts.

Even if west was sure to have the king, it was possible for east to have the Jack. In that case, there is always the chance that east will not deliberately win his partner's trick.

No doubt an expert player in the east would do so. He would misread the aim of south to effect a strip-and-endplay on west. In that case, he would see what trick and take the strain off his partner.



For many polacca there are anti-

"A GUY NAMED JOE"

"A Guy Named Joe," the new movie at the Belle Theatre, is a wistful and different romance, a delightful mixture of realism and fantasy guaranteed to please all movie audiences. In the Air Force any pilot is "a guy named Joe," and in the film, both Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne, who co-star, are pilots.

Tracy is cast as a daredevil and foolhardy pilot whose exploits are the despair of his superior officers and the adorable Irene, Commando pilot who loves him, played by Miss Dunne, fearing that his number is up, she begs him to return to the States with her as an instructor. He accedes, but in a last reckless fling he is killed bombing an enemy carrier.

He finds himself in a strange place — plaid "heaven." There he is taken to the "General," played by Lionel Barrymore, and learns that pilots never die, they live on in spirit helping younger pilots to make the finest kind of flyers. He is assigned to guide Van Johnson, a bright young Joe just out of training, to win the aid of his unseen mentor, Johnson becomes a proficient flyer and under his influence even begins to assume his characteristics.

When Johnson is assigned to active duty in New Guinea, Tracy goes along and watches the young charge meet and fall in love with Miss Dunne, who is on duty in the area. She sees the same things in Johnson that she had seen in Tracy, and falls in love again with the youngster. At first, Tracy resents this, but after a struggle against realism it is for the best and the only way all three of them can be happy.

Spencer Tracy as the daredevil pilot delivers a performance that ranks favorably with his Academy Award winners of the past and creates a character that will live long with moviegoers. Miss Dunne, lovelier than ever, stands out in her part.

The Canadian News of the Day and an M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Hally Baseball" precede the feature attraction.

The engagement ends on Wednesday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"COVER GIRL"

For the first time in motion picture history, the fluidity — that popular method of swinging a film story plot back to the days of yesterday — literally rides on waves of melody in Columbia's Technicolor production Cover Girl, currently co-starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly at the McCarthy theatre. Two of the picture's hit songs — "Sure Thing" and "Poor John" are used with telling effect to bridge the gap between today and the "dear, dead days."

Ever since stories first began to appear on flickering frames of celluloid, the flashback has been a favorite device of script writers. Grandma and Grandpa were shown sitting in their vine-covered cottage, talking about the days "when you and I were young Maggie." Whereupon, the camera dolled up, the picture "dissolved" to a long-legged girl and her side-burned beau, to show them acting out a elaborate scene which eventually cut back to the original in which they were old and worn.

Chalk up one large credit mark to Cover Girl for bringing to the screen the first twist on this technique. In the picture, Otto Kruger, as a middle-aged magazine publisher, is supposed to recall the days when Rita Hayworth's grandmother, by a not-too-old coincidence, is also played by Rita Hayworth using exactly an elaborate dialogue buildup for the flashback. Kruger introduces the subject by simply picking up an old program of Thty Porter's fame, at once. The program contains a still of Grandma, and as he picks it up and brings it close to the camera so that it fills the entire screen, the still comes to life, to show Grandma Rita Hayworth singing "Put-a-Thing" which song and act is one of the big production numbers of the film, but also advances the plot by introducing the song and dance ability of Rita's grandmother.

Cover Girl makes still another innovation in the way it uses smoothly introduce the old-fashioned flashback. In order to make the picture with an unforgettable Rita Hayworth dance routine, while at the same time it established the 60-year-old grandmother as the mother and Rita's grandmother.

It's a safe bet that this idea of a song recalling the old-time flashback will be copied many times. It's novel, it speeds up the action of the film and in Cover Girl it not only has plenty of entertainment value but also is necessary for two grand songs, but brings back the Mayan Decade with all its nostalgic memories.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Design For Scandal"

It isn't legal to kiss the Judge! but it's lots of fun when Joe Judge is charming Rosalind Russell, and Walter Pidgeon gets her a few things that are not in law books. The hilarious romantic comedy "Design for Scandal" starring Rosalind Russell, Walter Pidgeon and Edward Arnold opened at the Capital Theatre Sunday midnight, a thousand laughs are in store for you.

"Prison Mutiny"

One of the most consistently thrilling motion pictures to reach the screen in a long time is "Prison Mutiny," the Monogram prison drama which opened on a regular basis at the Capitol theatre Sunday midnight at the added bit. The locale of the story is a great American penitentiary, which is the scene of a fast-moving succession of dramatic situations and even more exciting incidents. Suspense is the all absorbing interest throughout its length.

Richard Lane, Barton MacLane, Woodbury and Jack La Rue are featured in the principal parts, and all are ideally cast for their roles. The item of casting the entire picture, in fact, has very apparently received particular attention, and the result is a picture whose characters complete conviction. Among those appearing in important parts are Paul McValy, Milburn Stone, Charles Jordan, Sam Bernard, Robert Elmaura, Maurita Hugo and Kenneth Harlan.

AIRMAN RESCUED AFTER 19 DAYS

Santa Cruz De Tenarife, June 5—(AP) — A lone American airman, who said the bomber in which he was a crewman had been forced down at sea 19 days ago by engine trouble, was rescued from a liferaft off the Canary Islands by Spanish fishermen yesterday. Spanish naval vessels were dispatched to search or other members of the planes crew.

English Channel Weather Makes Invasion Tricky

"Look to your ditch," was Cromwell's watchword in the hour of Britain's danger. And, in fact, the narrow sea which the British call the English Channel is just a ditch, George Billinger writes in The Daily Mail Trans-Atlantic Edition.

Wind and water, tides and eddies have dug it. The process is unfinished.

Shakespeare's Cliff at Dover has receded a mile since Caesar's day, landed in 55 B.C. The shores of Orford Ness are still expanding.

On both sides of the ditch the land has the same features. The white cliffs of Kent have their counterpart in Artois; the rock-bound bays of Sussex are reproduced in Cornwall.

Remains of a sunken land between live on either shore.

It is an uneven ditch. Nature is not prone to be unfathomably. Deep Water in Section Near Ushant

At the narrowest angle, off the isle of Ushant, it runs 630 feet deep; and for 60 miles, off the north shore of the Channel Islands, there flows a stretch of deep water 600 feet and more. Eastward the seas are shallower; 130 to 180 feet in the Strait of Dover, a two-fathom height of London's Nelson Column.

The ditch is 140 miles across at its widest south of Sidmouth; 21 miles, at the narrowest, east of Dover. It covers 29,900 square miles, roughly the area of Norway.

All this is a tangled, treacherous area of cross-currents, tides, shallows, sandbanks, and sudden deeps. It is swept by eight gales on the average a year, and two of every three break in November.

Fine weather in the Channel starts in March. It reaches a climax in May, and ends in September. Then between November, 1943, and November, 1804, when Napoleon was waiting to invade Britain, there were not six consecutive fine days.

Prevailing Wind is Westerly

For three days in five the wind blows from the west. The current flows, parallel with the French shore, from west to east as from one to four miles an hour.

The tides are a study in themselves. In places on the British side there are two, in some three, every 24 hours. There are four on the Continental side, but the tide rises higher.

Ever since 1803 there have been projects for a Channel tunnel, increasingly more favored on the French than on the British side.

Yet, so far as through traffic be concerned, British rolling stock could, because of the gauge, run French railways, whereas Continental stock would be useless on British railways.

The Imperial Defence Committee rejected the Channel tunnel in 1924.

Mass Transfer of Army Difficult

Three and a half million people made the sea-passage by six routes every year before the war.

The mass transfer of an army is another matter.

It is true that 8,000,000 fighting men were carried in large bodies from England to Southampton, which has three tides — between 1914 and 1918. There was even a ferry which once took 700 guns across in 48 hours. But neither passage nor landing was disputed.

The most recent successful crossing by an army against opposition was from St. Valery-sur-Somme to Pevensey between six at night and nine in the morning of September 27, 1066.

Norman Landing Unopposed

William Duke of Normandy succeeded in putting 12,000 men ashore from 696 ships. But the defending fleet had already dispersed, no longer expecting his arrival after the Norman armament had been held up by a month of unbroken west wind.

And Harold's Saxony Army had been diverted by a Norwegian attempt to disembark in Yorkshire. And so it arrived after the Normans had effected their landing.

The precedent of William of Orange's landing in Torbay on November 5, 1688, with 11,000 infantry and 4,500 cavalry in 700 transports, is less helpful as a guide to the calculating invasion chances. The landing was not opposed, for the invaders came by invitation.

Actually, however, wind played a big part in the operation. The fleet should have sailed on the first full moon after the autumn equinox, but three unbroken weeks of west winds kept it in the harbor and carried Irish levies over St. George's Channel to fight for James II.

James' Fleet Held by Calms in Thames.

Finally the west wind that did carry William's armament across confined King James fleet to the mouth of the Thames and when it dropped there was a two-days' calm in the Channel.

So while William was putting his men ashore at Torbay, King James' fleet lay becalmed off Beachy Head.

Julius Caesar, having command of the Channel, mustered 80 transports at Boulogne Harbor and 18 more at Ambleteuse, five miles north on August 26, B.C. 55.

Between dusk and midnight he embarked 10,000 men during the ebb tide. A light following wind and a waxing moon, well onto its quarter, sped them to the port by holiday of August 26.

The Roman launched under cover of heavy catapults on their warships, but the operation was not opposed. The Ambleteuse squadron, carrying the cavalry, was too "slow" in getting underway, and missed the evening tide, and when it started, on the morning of August 26, the wind changed suddenly to west and carried it back to port.

Caesar, unable to advance without his horses, held a precarious beachhead till August 30.

Napoleon planned to cross on the calmest seals. One hundred and thirty thousand men of the Grand Army were to sail, in the autumnal of 1803, from Boulogne, Ambleteuse, Wimereux and Etaples in 1,300 invasion craft.

Napoleon hoped to concentrate a fleet in the narrow seas strong enough to command the passage for two days while his troops were rowed over. But Nelson effectively stopped such a concentration from every place.

FUND CHAIRMAN WANTS ADDRESSES OF BOYS NAMED

As Canadian soldiers are being moved from one theatre of war to another with lightning-like speed these days, keeping track sometimes it is difficult for community organizations to keep abreast with the whereabouts of our fighting troops. Such is the case with the Belleville Kinsmen Pag Fund in the matter of assurance of proper addresses and changes of address of Belleville boys serving overseas should be considered with Chairman Buster LaBarr as soon as possible.

Chairman Kinsman LaBarr has a lengthy list of Belleville boys who are not communicated with the fund headquarters for some months past and friend or relatives of these local lads should notify Chairman LaBarr, box 248 Belleville, of any changes of address immediately. Those who have not written for over six months are: A. C. Adams, N. H. Anderson, Ken G. Barrigar, Andrew Bennett, Jack Blaney, Jack Boyd, Robert Bedford, Pat. John Brennan, Lloyd Bulpitt, Richard G. PIGEONS SHUT IN BY CARPENTERS

Nashville, Tenn., June 5—(AP)—Peculiar noises in the attic of a home here sent firemen, police and neighbors scurrying. They found 22 pigeons trapped by carpenters who unwittingly had boarded up the birds' exists.

NOT NEARLY OVER

Halifax, June 5 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston told an audience of men and women of the army district here Sunday that he "doubted the view that the war is nearly over". His words, speaking at the opening of Cathedral Barracks, Canada's newest C.W.A.C. centre.

The secret of his obvious happiness and well-being is before Tommy Hand, of Alberta. It is a matured steer, one of the many than 30,000 prime steers raised by Canadian stock raisers in 1944. Cattle raising has been one of Canada's great contributions to the war effort. It has produced not only fighting troops, with plenty left over to give Canadians all they want without rationing.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 8

"You mean, you didn't take a gander at him, first thing when you got over here?" the Inspector twinkled at the caretaker as if the while affair were a huge joke.

"Nossir, I did not!" Roberts assured him vehemently. "Let them what yells police lead the police, says I. I went right to the basement and fixed that there switch. I didn't put my feet on the stairs even."

"Well, that means you are elected, Miss Kay," the Inspector told me jovially. "Come on. Let's go."

The house was like an aging woman, I thought on my way upstairs. It looked older, less well preserved, in the merciless glare of the many unshaded bulbs blazing from the huge chandeliers and towering wall sconces. The muted dimness of the rainy afternoon had been kinder to it—bluring the defects and accentuating the stateliness.

But also, the clear, sharp light made the sight in the library less terrifying and horribly grotesque than it had been, jumping at me out of the darkness in the sporadic flare of my torch.

Aunt Millie, poor dear, didn't have the advantage of the comparison—if one can call it that. I heard her give a suppressed "blub" of horror, after one furtive look over the Inspector's shoulder.

"Please come in here, Miss Kay," he called to me a moment later.

"Yes, Inspector." I meekly followed the order, my eyes consciously avoiding the still figure on the carpet.

"This is the way you found him? I want to make sure nothing's been tampered with, the room, or him. Take a good look, will you?"

I glanced around reluctantly. The dead man lay as I remembered. Face down, head turned slightly to one side so that his features showed, arms flung out and the hand nearest the door—the left one—clutching at something that wasn't there.

"He's lying the same way, but there seems to be more blood," I said with a gulp.

"There would be. Good girl!" Inspector Pettengill patted my shoulder reassuringly. "Now look around and tell me is everything else the same too."

"I wouldn't know," I protested feebly. "I'm not familiar enough with the room, after my one short visit this afternoon."

He grinned pleasantly. "I don't expect you to make an inventory. Just give me your impression. Anything here you didn't see the first time? Anything added — or missing?"

It seemed pretty futile, but I let my glance travel all around the room, from where I stood near the door.

"Don't be bashful. Come in all the way. Walk around," he encouraged me. "You needn't step over the corpse. Go back to the desk."

Again I obeyed, automatically and without the least expectation of being helpful. And then I stopped short and stared at the desk.

The spot where the large stone had been was empty.

"Why, yes, there is something missing," I gasped. "The stone's gone from the desk."

"What stone?" The Inspector, who had bent over the body during my inspection tour, straightened up alertly.

"The stone that lay between the inkwell and the telephone. A large, ordinary fieldstone, Professor Stoddard said it was. A keepsake of some sort," I explained.

"Oh, it was? And he said so?" Inspector Pettingill's stubby fingers jabbed in the direction of the dead Professor. "And how come you talked about this ordinary stone?"

"Because it was so ordinary. Mr. Forrestall thought perhaps Professore Stoddard could tell us why Mr. Burton should have brought it home with him from his trip and kept it on his desk," I told him. "He was a geologist, you know, besides being a chemist."

"Hmm, I see. And he said it was just a fieldstone. Was that all he said?"

"About the stone? I think so. No—he said it might come from Central America or—around the corner, here."

"Why should it come from Central America?" The Inspector looked more and more bewildered.

"Mr. Burton was supposed to have brought it with him from there," Aunt Millie broke in. She had conquered her squeamishness and was leaning in the door, her eyes now and then straying in fascinated terror to what remained of the baldheaded little Professor. "From some valley he'd found. It's all connected with hidden treasure of some kind. Why don't you ask Roberts, or Mr. Forrestall? He gave us the lecture about it."

"I shall, ma'am, I shall. Thanks for the tip." The Inspector nodded absently. "How big now was this here vanished stone, did you say?"

I hadn't said a word about dimensions, outside of using the word "large." But I recognized by now that this was the Inspector's way of reminding a witness of what he ought to tell him.

"About this big," I indicated with my two cupped hands. "And very heavy for its size."

"How did you know? You pick it up?"

"No. But I saw Professor Stoddard lift it," I told him.

"Hmm. Seems like you use your eyes," he approved and then mused audibly: "About six to eight inches across that would be. Smooth and round, was it?"

"One side was round. As if it had been cut off with a chisel. The rest of it was rough, with jagged bits sticking out," I reported.

"Hmm. Rough — heavy — jagged bits. Looks like it could be the weapon. Specially since it's gone now." The Inspector lowered his vovice and stepped close to Aunt Millie. "Look, ma'am, I been thinking. You only got dragged into this by Miss Kay losing her compact. What I mean, you two are newcomers with no axe to grind. The others—well—they's a lot don't meet the eye in a town this size. Small, you know, with big ideas. So you—play ball with me, and I see you don't get plagued any by the newspaper boys. What say?"

"You are very kind, Inspector. We'll do all we can to help you," Aunt Millie promised for both of us, with a straight face.

"Good!" he said emphatically. And then he bellowed down the stairs: "Roberts! Heh Roberts! I want you to come up and take a look!"

A very reluctant Roberts came slowly up the stairs, his gloved hand sliding along the railing as if for support.

"I can't see blood, Inspector," he urged the Inspector. "If two women can, so can you."

Roberts sighed dolefully, stuck out his neck as far as it would go and took a quick squint into the library.

"It's him, all right. It's the Perfessor what was here this afternoon with Mr. Forrestall and them here ladies."

"I know it's him. I didn't call you to identify the body. Take a peek around. Anything missing?"

"Nothing I can see right off."

"Sure nothing is missing?" persisted the Inspector.

Roberts stepped from one foot to the other uncomfortably. "Sure as I can be with all them things strewed around," he insisted.

"Look on the desk. Anything wrong there?" the Inspector prompted.

Roberts looked—cocked his head—looked again.

"Everything okay," he said at last.

"Ayah? What about the stone that was lying on top of it?" The words whipped like a lash.

"Stone?" Roberts gaped as if he had never heard the word. "Oh! You mean that old rock what I kept, for a keepsake! Why—the Perfessor said it warrant worth nothing and they all made fun of me over it, so—I thrown it away."

"You thrown it away! Where?" I'd never have believed the Inspector's good-natured face could look so fierce.

"Out. In the refuse. Just before they come with the garbage wagon to take it to the city dump."

"Before they —!! To the city dump!" The Inspector was gasping for breath. And when he found it, his anger turned fully on the luckless Roberts.

"So you thought you could get away with it! Murder a man — who probably came here for some innocent purpose—and throw away the stone you'd used as a weapon. Not in the garden—oh, no! In the refuse! So it would go to the city dump! You thought that was safe, didn't you? You thought, you can't pick out one rock in the city dump, eh?"

Roberts' small eyes were getting big and round with fright. "Who—me? Murder a man?" he asked shakily. "I couldn't kill no chicken, much less a man. I tell you. I can't see blood. It makes me sick. It—I am sick, right now—"

He beat a hurried retreat into one of the bathrooms.

The moment Roberts disappeared, the Inspector's smile was back. "I'm sure he didn't do it. Just scared him in the hope I'd learn something," he confided. "Sorry if I scared you, along with him. Well, that's all we can do till the coroner comes. Let's go downstairs."

Halfway down he stopped.

"Now—where hereabouts were you standing when you heard that scream?" he inquired.

"Right where you stand now." I stepped beside him and flattened myself against the wall, spreading my hands against it. "This way."

"Hmm. Musta left a nice bunch of fingerprints on the wall," he grinned at me.

"No, I didn't. I wore gloves," I told him.

Suspicion flared visibly in his eyes. "Why?"

"Because it was a wet night, and dark, and I don't like to get my hands dirty and my nails broken," I explained sweetly.

"That's mighty finicky for a girl what's not scared of —" the Inspector began.

But fortunately a commotion below us interrupted his sarcasm. The coroner, had arrived, accompanied by a number of policemen, uniformed and in mufti. And with them was Conley Forrestall, escorted by Sergeant Hatch.

During the next half hour things moved so fast I have no clear memory of their sequence. There were conferences, in shifting groups. Orders—now shouted, now whispered—men sent hither and yon.

At last Inspector Pettengill, the coroner ,two plain clothes men — one of them with a camera — and Conley Forrestall went upstairs.

The rest of the police scattered through the various rooms on the ground floor, taking Roberts with them, and Aunt Millie and I were left alone to wait. In the back parlor, of all places, and under the guard of Sergeant Flynn.

When the Inspector had ushered us into the room, I hadn't dared glance in the direction of the telltale window, but now, with only one pair of eyes watching us, the urge to close and fasten it was almost overpowering.

Perhaps if I waited my opportunity —

I glanced speculatively first at Flynn, who sat near the door, a solid mass of honesty and righteousness staring blankly into the air, and then at the window—

I must have gasped aloud, for Aunt Millie gave a start and asked "What is it, Kay?"

"Nothing. I was only thinking of—how dreadful it all is," I told her. But my eyes signalled toward the window.

It was closed, just like all the others. And the latch was securely locked. No one could possibly guess that it had been used for unlawful entry, not two hours back, or that I had fled through it in panic, a short few minutes later.

Who had closed it? Roberts? And if it had been Roberts, why had he closed it?

I hadn't yet recovered from the shock of my discovery when the Inspector and Conley Forrestall came in, both looking far from happy, and Forrestall hard put to conceal a full-size attack of the jitters.

"They're taking the body away," the Inspector announced—unnecessarily. We could see the stretcher bearers with their grisly burden over his shoulder. "Verdict is: skull fractured by a blow with a rough, blunt instrument, and dead about four hours. That would make it—let me see—Doc Tobie got here at ten fifteen: Around six o'clock. Three hours after he left this house with the bunch of you. Well, they's nothing more I can do tonight, outside leaving a guard. Wish I could take down your depositions right off, but our one and only police stenographer is on his vacation, and I won't be able to get word to him before tomorrow."

"Perhaps I could help you out," I offered. "I can type and take shorthand. I've often played secretary for my father."

He looked half tempted, half dubious. "Mighty nice of you, Miss Kay. But I don't want to bother you so late at night. It's most eleven."

"The shank of the evening. Come on, let's go over to our house and get it done," Aunt Millie supported me.

The Washington call had come in during our absence, and so had Allan. He and Dad were busy in the study, but they both came out when they heard our voices, to greet us and hear the news.

That is, Allan was anxious to know what had happened. Dad was so full of his own affairs, I doubt he remembered there had been a murder next door.

Presently Aunt Millie, the Inspector, Conley Forrestall and I were installed in the large drawing room at the front of the house which, I am convinced, had never before been put to such sordid use.

"Time until morning for your own deposition," the Inspector assured me—still worried about my beauty sleep apparently. "But if you'd take down what Mr. Forrestall here has to say about himself and the dead Professor, I'd be much obliged."

Forrestall hadn't much to say, it appeared. And what he said was without the least importance.

The Inspector's telephone call had found him at the bridge table and had been (quote) a stroke of lightning. He scarcely knew the victim, had only met him occasionally in Mrs. Libby's house, and had no way of knowing the man's movements after parting from him at our front door, from which each of them had driven off in his own car. Nor did he have an idea why Professor Stoddard had returned to the new Burton house, or what lay behind his palpable desire to get into it in the first place.

"He practically forced Miss Wentworth to include him in her invitation," he moaned, patting the perspiration from his high forehead in much the same way the Professor had done earlier in the day.

"He did, eh?" The Inspector pricked up his ears. "What reason did he give?"

"His admiration for Victorian furniture," Aunt Millie cut in with her little sniff. "Of which he knew nothing, by the way. I trapped him. By raving about two artists who'd 'created' the style. And was he enthused about them! Only—there are no such animals. I used the names of two decorators who are rage of New York, now."

"Hmm. I see. Be sure and take everything that's said about the Professor down on a special sheet of paper, will you?" the Inspector cautioned me, and then turned to Forrestall again. "While he was in the house with you, I hear you asked his opinion about a stone lying on the library table. Remember?"

"Not his exact words. Only that he said it wasn't worth anything," Forrestall told him nervously. "And I'm blaming myself bitterly for having drawn his attention to it. You know how it is? One thing leads to the other. From the stone I went on to a valuable find Burton thought he had made on his last trip, and from that to the hidden safe in the room, where all the Burton papers are kept, in accordance with the will.

Inspector Pettengill whistled softly. "A safe! So that's why he pulled the room to pieces!"

Forrestall nodded miserably. "Yes He must have imagined the papers in it were negotiable securities. It's the only explanation I can find for his breaking into the house."

"He didn't break in. The door was open. They's a difference," the Inspector elucidated.

"Yes. Yes, of course. Very negligent, that habit of Roberts'. But—how could Stoddard know it was open?"

Paratrooper Went Up Not Down

Washington, June 3 — (AP)—The paratrooper leaped from his plane, but he didn't go down. He went up.

He watched his buddies float toward the ground, gazed anxiously as his airplane faded into the distance as he personally floated higher and higher.

"With no more control over his movements than a wisp of thistledown," relates the official service magazine Air Force "the paratrooper was tossed about on the point of a thermal wave.

"He spent half an hour watching his outfit fighting a fierce mock battle on the ground. In time, the thermal wave released the young man and he came down to join his battalion as a fresh reservist."

The magazine said the peculiar voyage took place at Fort Benning, Ga.

GREATLY IMPRESSED WITH CHILDREN.

Ottawa, June 5 (CP)—Miss Marjorie Maxse, chairman of the British Children's Overseas Reception Board, London, and vice-chairman of Women's Voluntary Services, said in an interview that after a five-week tour of Canada she was impressed with the "large percentage" of British children who have remained in their original foster homes.

Personnel of Two Courses Leave ITS

Their training at No. 5 Initial Training School completed, personnel of two courses at the Belleville school were given a formal send-off by the remaining station personnel on Sunday afternoon, when they were paraded off the station with Squadron Leader Dan Fortune, commanding officer, taking the salute. Members of the two courses were transferred to Toronto, either to await posting or to continue their I.T.S. training, thereby reducing the station personnel at No. 5 I.T.S. in preparation for the return of the premises to the Department of Education for re-opening as the O.S.D. in September.

German Press Sees Loss of Prestige In Fall of Rome

Stockholm, June 5 —(AP)— The Germans first learned of the fall of Rome in a 7 a.m. broadcast today, and the Berlin Press said the Allied victory "involves a loss of prestige for Germany."

The German-controlled Scandinavian Press Bureau summed up Berlin newspaper comment thus:

"The evacuation of Rome is the result of Kesselring's strategy and the city itself is not of great military importance. But giving up one of the Axis capitals involves a loss of prestige for Germany."

The Berlin correspondent of Aftonbladet said the Germans made a "lightning retreat" from Rome, withdrawing the main body of German troops to new positions north of the Tiber and north of Rome.

"Now all roads lead to Berlin," Aftonbladet commented editorially.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 5 —(CP)— The Gold stocks posted a small index gain at noon and the Industrials and Western Oils were narrowly lower. Turnover was small at 277,000 shares for the first three hours.

The stronger Golds included Hollinger, Pickle Crow, Wright-Hargreaves, Grull Wihksne, Aunor, O'Brien, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Madsen. Yellowknife was up 15 cents but failed to hold the gain. Negus weakened 7 cents and Lake Dufault was off 3.

Base Metal stocks held steady in the average. Labrador, Steep Rock and Hudson Bay had gains against losses for Waite-Amulet, Falconbridge and Ventures.

Prices were a bit soft for the Papers, Senior Oils and Miscellaneous Industrials and stronger for the Utilities. Steels held steady. Home, Calgary and Edmonton, British-Dominion and Mid-Continent were softer Western Oils.

WALL ST.

New York, June 5 — (AP) — The stock market, apparently having well discounted the fall of Rome to the Allies by its recent climb to a 5-year average peak, today maintained the more or less even tenure of its ways by giving scattered favorites a modest lift while continuing to ignore many leaders. Trends were slightly uneven near the 4th hour.

Improved were Packard, Chrysler, General Motors, Goodrich, Western Union "A," Southern Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio, National Distillers, General Electric and J. C. Penney.

Canadian issues were unchanged to slightly lower. Dome and Hiram Walker each declined 1-4 and McIntyre was down 1-2. Canadian Pacific, Seagrams and Lakeshore were unchanged.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 5 —(CP)— Cattle trade was active at steady prices on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Hogs, veal calves, lambs and sheep were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 3,000, calves 1,400, hogs 900, sheep and lambs 400.

In cattle trade weighty steers brought $11.55-$13.25, butcher steers $11.25-$12.40, heifers $10.50-$12, butcher cows, strong, $8-$10, canners and cutters $5.25-$7.50, bulls $7.50-$9.75, fed yearlings $13-$13.25, good light stockers $11-$11.75 with other stockers downward to $9.50.

Veal calves were $14-$14.50 for choice with a few tops at $15 and common to medium $6-$13.

Lambs were $16.50 for good spring, with yearlings $10-$13.

Sheep were $2-$5.50.

Hogs sold at, Grade A dressed-weight $17.65, sows $12.50 dressed.

Polish Premier To See Roosevelt

Washington, June 5 — (AP) — Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk is arriving here today on an official visit, to exchange views with President Roosevelt and to probe means for closing the gap between Russia and Poland.

Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius announced the visit of Premier Mikolajczyk in this statement:—

"On the invitation of this government, the Polish Prime Minister is arriving in Washington today on a visit of courtesy, his first trip to this country since his assumption of the premiership.

"He is expected, during his short stay, to exchange views with the president and other American officials on general European and Polish questions."

16 More Jap Ships Of Merchant Navy Sunk by U.S. Subs

Washington, June 5 — (AP) — United States submarines have destroyed 16 more of Japan's dwindling fleet of merchant ships in the Pacific, the Navy reported today, bringing the total of enemy ships sunk by American submersibles to 589.

The latest bag included a large transport and a large cargo vessel, seven medium cargo vessels, two small cargo vessels, four medium cargo transports and one small cargo transport.

The total of enemy ships sunk to date includes 148 combatant vessels.

26 Axis Merchant Ships, 5 Naval Auxiliaries Sunk

London, June 5 —(CP)— British submarines sank 31 Axis ships, 26 of them merchantment and five naval auxiliaries, in recent operations in the Mediterranean and Aegean seas, the Admiralty announced tonight.

Seven other merchantmen were damaged, the communique said.

One of the British prizes was a large and strongly-escorted munitions ship bound for the big Greek Island of Crete.

Sumbarines also shelled a number of shore targets on the Italian and south French coasts and on Crete, the admiralty said.

The bag, one of the largest yet announced by the admiralty, included two large supply vessels, two medium sized and 22 small supply ships, as well as the five naval authorities.

In the same area where the munitions ship was blown up, a large supply ship was torpedoed and sunk and a number of smaller vessels were dispatched by gunfire.

The naval ships sunk included a medium-sized salvage vessel, and one of possibly two mine sweepers.

An oil refinery on the Italian coast, a railway yard, a seaplane hangar in the south of France and a raido station on Crete were bombarded by the undersea craft.

'Source of Pride' Canadians Helped Liberate Rome

Ottawa, June 5 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a statement last night that it will always be "a source of pride to Canada" that Canadian forces have had a notable part in the campaign leading to the liberation of Rome.

At the same time, Mr. King said, "we do well to remember that it is almost a year since the Allied forces first landed in Sicily and that harder battles are still to be fought.

131 Repatriates to Arrive On Gripsholm Tuesday

New York, June 5 —(CP)— The Swedish liner Gripsholm carrying 131 repatriates including 37 wounded Canadian soldiers en route to their homeland, is due to arrive at Jersey City tomorrow.

Among the civilians is Larry Allen, Associated Press war correspondent and Pulitzer Prize winner who had been held in Italian and German prison camps.

More than 600 British repatriates, including 11 Canadians, left the ship at Belfast.

MANY FATALITIES IN EAST CANADA OVER WEEKEND

Drowning and Traffic Accidents Swell Total of Deaths

AUTO IN RIVER

By The Canadian Press

At least eight persons are known to have drowned in Eastern Canada during the weekend, a dozen others were feared to have drowned and four other persons were killed in other types of accidents.

Three young women — Lillian Babcock, 23 of London, Ont., Bernice Wood, 20 and Barbara Martin, both of St. Thomas, Ont. — were known to have drowned in Lake Erie Sunday when a 33-foot cabin cruiser on which they were riding with 27 other persons capsized 500 feet from a pier at Port Stanley, Ont. Thirteen of the number were rescued. Twelve are listed as missing.

At Montreal, Damase Forest, 28 and Maurice Tacombe, 26, both of L'Assomption, Que., were drowned in the St. Lawrence River when the automobile in which they were riding plunged into the river.

The body of a Non-commissioned officer named McCarthy was recovered from the Ottawa River at Rapides des Joachim, Que. He is believed to have drowned when a canoe in which he was paddling capsized 30 feet from shore. He was stationed at Petawawa military camp.

Car Crashes Tree

At Toronto, William J. Seitz, 47, general manager of the Peerless Carbon and Ribbon Company, was killed Sunday when his automobile failed to make a turn and crashed over a boulevard into a large tree in the west end district. Frederick G. Richardson, 54, maintenance department executive of the same firm was seriously injured.

Mrs. J. McBride of Carp, Ont., was killed Saturday about two miles east of the little town when struck by a westbound Canadian National Railways train.

At Vineland, Ont., Kenneth Fisher, 19, of Mount Hamilton, Ont., was killed when the motorcycle he was driving collided with a truck on the Queen Elizabeth highway.

At Quebec it was reported that 2 men were drowned and four others missing after a schooner sank during a storm Saturday on the St. Lawrence River off Montmagny about 30 miles from Quebec. Names of the victims were not announced.

Fred Watts, 38, of Orangeville was killed in an automobile crash on the highway five miles north of Listowel, Ont., last night. Mr. and Mrs. William J. Clark of Wingham were injured.

Mussolini Appeal Asks Italians Make Life Hard For Allies

London, June 5 (AP)—Benito Mussolini appealed to the people of Rome today to "make life as hard as possible for Allied troops which captured the former Fascist capital yesterday.

The former Duce's message was read by an announcer in a broadcast on the same wave length as the Rome radio at 7:19 a.m. (1:19 a.m. E.D.T.) and recorded by The Associated Press.

"With the help of the treachery of the monarchy," said Mussolini, who now heads a puppet Fascist organization under German protection in northern Italy, "the Anglo-Americans were able to land in Italy. German troops have courageously contested every step of their advance, but have now given up Rome.

"It is a great sorrow for us, and I do not want to resort to propaganda now.

"Italians! Do not morally surrender to the invader. With all means at your disposal, make life as hard as possible for him. Our will is not broken. We shall continue to fight and to work at the side of the tripartite powers, and especially Germany."

Pope Pius Appears Upon Balcony

New York, June 5 (AP) — Pope Pius XII was "out on the balcony of the window of the Vatican this morning looking on St. Peter's Square," Godfrey Talbot, BBC correspondent in Italy, reported today.

"Crowds of people had gathered in front of St. Peter's beneath the Vatican walls—you'd think that it was London with British soldiers passing through on victory day.

"The whole scene is absolutely beyond belief. People are shouting: 'We've been waiting for you so long—thank God you've come at last'."

CBS recorded the broadcast.

Over 254,750 Tons Of Bombs Dropped

By The Canadian Press

The Allied pre-invasion offensive (figures approximate)

In 49 days, not including Monday, Allied airmen have:—

Dropped more than 254,750 tons of bombs

From more than 178,650 planes

Destroying at least 2,210 enemy planes

Losing 1,703 of their own.

Since Sunday night, Allied planes have attacked French coastal targets.

CHILD BORN IN TELEPHONE BOOTH

Cambridge, England, June 5 — (CP)— Mrs. Winifred Sadler, 24, gave birth yesterday to a baby girl weighing about 8½ pounds in a telephone booth, where she was waiting after a woman friend had gone to hunt a car to take her to hospital.

The mother and child were in hospital today and both were reported doing well.

The History of Italy From Soldier's View

Bois purples of this article is to give you a review of the history of Italy just in case some beer donor tests your knowledge of it, if you ever cross the portals of the Maids of Grapes again, says SSM. "Dick-la" chuffs in The Maple Leaf, the newspaper published for the Canadian forces in Italy.

Now, previous to the landing on the shores of Britain of Julius Caesar the early British had proved a stubborn customer for the Romans. For centuries they had driven on the wrong side of the road. Their forefathers had been content to bathe in the privacy of their own caves on a Saturday night, so naturally they wondered why the younger generation should be made to dunk themselves in the public baths at a time laid down by the local Town Major.

In 100 B.B. (Before Spartan) the Roman High Command despatched J. Caesar to Britain to take things in hand. He landed at the Palace Pier in Brighton, and proceeded at once to pre-arranged headquarters in the Wellington Aldershot.

In no time at all improvements were noted. . . Several high ranking officers were sent to the holding unit, consignments of wine were ordered from Rome, saloon bars were placed out of bounds to all below the rank of sergeant, and villas replaced pup tents.

Soldiers Antagonize Romans

For a few years all went well. Then the quaint Surrey village of Headley the rustics became incensed at the soldiery who marred the peace with early Roman drinking songs. The Headley Gallery and the Wheat Sheaf and formed the British Anti-Fascist League, which, a few years later, under the able leadership of Mrs. Sarah Roadless, made the land too hot even for a Roman.

As a result Caesar was recalled to Rome on the grounds of illhealth and the remains of his legions settled in Soho. So ended that period of history which connected Britain with the Roman Empire.

Jumping a little, we find that in 936 Otto The Great of Saxony went to the rescue of the Pope who was at war with someone." Otto was given the title of "The Holy Roman Emperor of The Okrman Nation," and 5,000 litres of red wine to boot. Otto and the Pope could not agree on who should protect the people. In fact, it got so bad that in 1077 the emperor stood in the snows at Canossa (that's where you saw the signorina with the washing on her head, remember?) and begged the Pope's pardon.

Mad Spike Break up Country

By the end of the Middle Ages Italy was broken up into small states. Foreigners (probably disguised as Nazi tourists or Fuller Brush Men) drifted in and took control. This started about 1494, and, from that date, Italy was a prey to outside intervention until the end of the Napoleonic stepped in and gave her the name of Italy, in 1796.

Petrarch appeared with the Renaissance on his back. Some of the people who caught the headlines during the Renaissance were: the painter Raphael, Michael Angelo and Leonardo da Vinci. The latter was something of an inventor, too. It is said that da Vinci fathered many of our modern inventions, including the flying machine and the portable showers at the 90th Medical Bath Unit.

From 1796 on Napoleon beat the stuffing out of the Austrians in Northern Italy, the country began to unite. This, of course, was a very slow process (ha) to three factors: (a) for three months of the year the place was a sea of mud, (b) the wine harvest had to be gathered in and spirited with leopard sweat and (c) there was a spot of bother in 1815 due to some unrest in parts of the country.

Young Italy Movement Started

The year 1832 saw the beginning of the "Young Italy Movement," which was started by Mazzini with the intention of overthrowing the Austrian (who apparently had crept in again after the last paragraph was written). What with Mazzini, Count Cavour and Garibaldi on the one side, the Austrians and Mosley's gang on the other, and Napoleon on both sides, there seemed to have been too many cooks altogether.

But the State finally washed its dirty laundry, and for the next 50 years the country led the life of any normal land. People were born, got married and died all in a lifetime. The women picked olives while the men got plicked. A few bombs were thrown, and a few threats were cut. Then came the war of 1914-1918.

Italy entered the war on the side of Britain and her Allies. If you want to know what part Italy played in the war, ask a policeman. The war ended in 1918 (so it is said) and after the celebrations and hangovers, the stage was set for a peace conference to set the stage for another war. The Italian delegate arrived late so that his colleagues had cut their islands and small countries with queer names split up among the so-called victors. This settled the Illalian people, and made them ripe for trouble.

Mussolini's March in Fullman

Trouble came along in the shape of a blackshirt by the name of Benito Muscolini who talked the people into a march on Rome. The march was a huge success. Mussolini arrived in a Pullman several hours later after everybody had finished their supper and gone to sleep.

This was the start of the Fascist regime. All the men were given a uniform and made to raise their hand in the old Roman salute; all the women were given a bonus, and made to raise bambinos in any way possible. The Pontine Marshes were drained; so was the treasury.

Ethiopia was overthrew by gas; so were most of the Italians. Great if a blackamith by the name of Benito Muscolini rallied the nations, and Mussolini raised the bonus on babies. Italians who resented to live in Italy became good fascists. Italians who wanted to live went to North America. Mussolini was in the saddle.

When the present war broke out Il Duce moved his saddle over onto the fence and stayed there until France was thoroughly blitzed. From then on the war became a big disappointment to the Italian people—but not nearly as big a disappointment as that cowardly became to the Canadian soldier fighting in it.

FOXBORO

W. M. S. Meeting

Foxboro — The June meeting of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Amelia Clarke. Quiet music was played by Mrs. E. M. Cook and the worship service was in charge of Mrs. Tummon, who read a poem "If He Should Come Today." The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Hodgen. An appropriate duet was well rendered by Mrs. E. AN OLD CONTRACT

(New York Times)

For more than 100 years the City of London has been paying the penny of one Peter Morice £2,750 a year as part of the consideration for rigging up a device to pump water into the city. Last week the old contract which had cost London about $6,500,000 was still being faithfully honored. There are, the House of Commons was informed, only another 139 years to go.

EUROPE INVADED

SCENE OF ALLIED INVASION

Focal point of the world today the French coast depicted in the above map, shows the vital points where Allied armies struck their first blow in the long-awaited invasion. That curving line of coast between Cherbourg and Le Havre, according to German reports, was the Allied objective for the establishment of a broad beachhead. The Cherbourg peninsula, part of old Normandy, as will be noted, thrusts out to the Gap Le Hague and Cape de Barfleur, 85 miles from the Isle of Wight. The peninsula is 75 miles long and ranges from 25 to 60 miles wide with the port of Cherbourg at the tip as a keypoint of coastal defences. Cherbourg is 75 miles from Bournemouth, England, Le Havre 100 air miles northwest of Paris on the Seine River estuary is France's second seaport and has 14 ship basins and eight miles of docks. Penetrations inland would clear all of Normandy, with its good air field sites and provide a pathway down the Seine Valley to Paris. It was with this in view, perhaps, that Normandy, jutting out along the English Channel opposite British invasion bases, forms a natural peninsula pathway into France, and from the first, Allied commanders have recognized it as one of their best bets for beachheads.

Special Services In All City Churches Starting At 8 P.M.

D-Day is here.

The greatest hour in the history of mankind has struck and tense world stands on the threshold of epoch making events.

At this moment the Allied Armies are striking the initial blows of what well may be termed titanic struggle upon which hinges perhaps the destiny of mankind and civilization.

Our Canadian lads—the cream of the country's manhood, stand shoulder to shoulder with their comrades of the United Nations, in a supreme effort to rid the world of Nazi tyranny, and to free peoples who have writhed under the yoke of oppression for years.

We, at home, must "Watch and Pray."

On this day, one that will go down in the annals of history, all people regardless of creed, should humbly bow their heads and pray to Almighty God for victory and ultimate lasting peace.

The churches and ministers of the city stand ready to do their part.

All churches of the city will hold special services of intercession starting at eight o'clock tonight. It is urged that all of us, in this critical hour, to forget worldly things and seek the aid o the Creator in this, the supreme moment.

Mayor Harry Rollins and members of the Belleville Ministerial Association earnestly request that all who can possibly do so, go to a church and pray.

Our sons, brothers, husbands and sweethearts today face the supreme test; ready to give their all if necessary, even life itself. Surely we, at home, can go to a House of God and in earnest supplication and in humility, pray for the success of our arms.

7-Mile Penetration Made in Some Areas Churchill Tells House

London, June 6—(CP)—Allied invasion forces have penetrated in some cases seven miles inland after an effective landing on a broad front, Prime Minister Churchill informed the House of Commons tonight.

The Prime Minister said in his second main report of the day that "the landings along the whole front have been effective and our troops have penetrated in some cases seven miles inland."

Mr. Churchill, after visiting Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters with King George, told the House he had been at centres where the latest information was received and could state that "this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner."

He said that Allied air-borne troops had captured several strategic bridges in France before they could be blown up and that "there is every hope proceeding to the town of Caen."

"Many dangers and difficulties which this time last night appeared extremely formidable are behind us," the Prime Minister added. "The passage of the sea has been made with far less loss than we appeared to fear.

"The resistance of the batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing by the Air Forces and superior bombardment of our ships quickly reduced their fire to dimensions which did not affect the problem."

BULLETINS

London, June 6 (CP) — The German radio reported today that four British parachute divisions had landed between Le Havre and Cherbourg in France.

This was four times the size of the Nazi parachute forces dropped on Crete in the Mediterranean.

NAZIS CLAIM ALLIED CRUISER SUNK

New York, June 6 (AP) — The Berlin radio broadcast a D.N.B. dispatch today claiming that the Allied cruiser and a large landing vessel carrying troops had been sunk in the area of St. Vaast La Hougue, 15 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

MANY FEINTS CONDUCTED

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (Tuesday) (AP)—It can now be revealed that the Allies have been conducting a series of feints in advance of the invasion today.

These feints were predicted some time ago by Prime Minister Churchill, and were designed to lull the Germans so they would never know when the blow was coming.

Gen. Eisenhower's Order of the Day

London, June 6 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower issued the following order of the day to his invasion troops today:

Soldiers, sailors and airmen of the Allied Expeditionary Force:

You are about to embark on a great crusade. The eyes of the world are upon you and the hopes and prayers of all liberty-loving peoples go with you.

In company with our brave Allies and brothers in arms on other fronts you will bring about the destruction of the German war machine, elimination of Nazi tyranny over the oppressed peoples of Europe, and security for ourselves in a free world.

Your task will not be an easy one. Your enemy is well trained, well equipped and battle-hardened. He will fight savagely. But in the year of 1944 we have happened since the Nazi triumphs of 1940 and 1941.

The United Nations have inflicted upon the Germans great defeats in open battle, man to man. Our air offensive has steadily reduced their strength in the air and their capacity to wage war on the ground, our home fronts have given us overwhelming superiority in weapons and munitions and we have the finest air force ever gathered together at our disposal great reserves of trained fighting men. The tide has turned and free men of the world are marching together to victory.

I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle. We will accept nothing less than full victory. Good luck and let us all beseech the blessing of Almighty God upon this great and noble undertaking.

Sees Invasion As Aimed at Paris

Stockholm, June 6 —(AP)— The Berlin correspondent of the Aftonbladet asserted in a dispatch today that the Allied invasion of France "seems directed against the most heavily defended section of the French coast and aimed directly at Paris."

The dispatch declared that "warships of all kinds, including battleships, have been sighted off the coast, covering the landings."

Berlin said newspapers were jammed with calls as word of the invasion spread through the Reich. Other Stockholm dispatches from Berlin said the Allies landed at 12 points between the mouths of the Orne and Vire rivers on the Normandy coast, with the central assault directed at Caen.

Roosevelt Writes Prayer for Victory Broadcasts Tonight

Washington, June 6 — (AP) President Roosevelt spent the early morning hours of the invasion writing a prayer for victory for the Allied forces of liberation.

Mr. Roosevelt, who received reports of the invasion through its early phases, will broadcast at 10 p. m. E.D.T. tonight with the hope that the nation will join him in the prayer he wrote.

Period of Silence Observed In Montreal

Montreal, June 6 (CP)—A special service of intercession for Allied troops taking part in the invasion was held in St. James' United Church at 12.30 p.m.

Churchill Tells House 4,000 Ships and Several Thousand Smaller Craft Used

London, June 6 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill took a cheering House of Commons today that the Allied liberating assault upon Hitler's European stronghold was "proceeding according to plan—and what a plan!"

In tones of confidence he reported that the Allied forces had been transported across the Channel to the shores of France by "an immense armada" of 4,000 ships and several thousand smaller craft — "probably the greatest fleet ever assembled."

Mass air-borne landings also have been successfully effected behind the enemy lines, he said.

"There are already hopes that substantial gains have been established," he continued, "and we hope to furnish the enemy with a genuine surprise even during the course of the fighting.

"The battle which is now beginning will grow constantly in scale and fierceness for many weeks to come and I shall not attempt to speculate upon its course.

"The landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points at the present time," Mr. Churchill said.

"The fire of shore batteries has been largely quelled."

He said that "obstacles which were constructed in the sea have not proved so difficult as was apprehended."

The Prime Minister said the Allied forces are sustained by about 11,000 first-line aircraft, which can be drawn upon as needed.

Preceding is Plan

"So far," he said, "the commanders who are engaged report that the operation is proceeding according to plan."

"And what a plan!" he declared.

Mr. Churchill said the vast operation was "undoubtedly the most complicated and difficult which has ever occurred."

To cheers by members, Mr. Churchill took "formal cognizance" of the invasion of Rome, and added:—

"American and other forces of the 5th Army broke through the enemy's defences and entered Rome, where Allied troops have been received with joy by the population.

"The fall and liberation of Rome means that we shall have available the port of Civita Vecchia and attacks and deliver it from the fetters which the enemy has imposed on Pays High Tyrrene.

"Britain's war leader paid high tribute both to Gen. Sir Harold Alexander and AA-Gen. Mark W. Clark and said: "Complete unity prevails throughout the Allied armies."

He said the British and Allied forces "with the Americans in the van are driving steadily northwards in relentless pursuit of the enemy," Mr. Churchill said it was hoped that the 20,000 prisoners already taken would be followed by further captures in the days to come.

Of the new European operation, Mr. Churchill said: "The whole front will be pursued with the utmost vigor by the Allied commanders and the United States and British governments whom they serve."

In response to a question he said the House that certainly in the early part of the battle he would endeavor to keep the House fully informed.

"It may be," he added, "that I shall set their indulgence to press myself upon them before we rise tonight."

Canadian, British and U.S. Troops Land In N. France In World's Greatest Invasion

Landings Made From Le Havre to Cherbourg Say Germans

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP) — British, American and Canadian troops landed on the Normandy coast of France in tremendous strength by cloudy daylight today and stormed several miles inland with tanks and infantry in the grand assault which Gen. Eisenhower called a crusade in which "we will accept nothing less than full victory."

German broadcasts said the Allies penetrated several kilometres between Caen and Isigny, which are 35 miles apart and respectively nine and two miles from the sea.

German opposition apparently was less effective than expected, although fierce in many respects, and the Germans said they were bringing reinforcements continuously up to the coast, where "a battle for life or death is in progress."

The seaborne troops, led by General Montgomery, surged across the Channel from England by 4,000 regular ships and additional thousands of smaller craft.

They were preceded by massed flights of parachute and glider forces who landed inland during the dark.

11,000 PLANES SUPPORT ATTACK

Eleven thousand planes supported the attack.

The German radio asserted the landings were made from Cherbourg to Le Havre—a strip of coast roughly 100 miles long—and later said additional landings were being made "west of Cherbourg", indicating that the Allies intended to seize the Normandy Peninsula with its ports and airdromes as the first base of their campaign to destroy the power of Nazi Germany.

The initial landings were made from 6 to 8.25 a.m. British time (midnight to 2.25 a.m., E.D.T.) The Germans said subsequent landings were made on the English Channel Isles of Jersey and Guernsey and that invasion at new points on the continent were expected hourly.

CONFIRM GENERAL AREA

Aside from confirming that Normandy was the general area of the assault, Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force was silent concerning the location for tactical reasons.

From Moscow come word that the Russian army was massing in preparation for another great attack from the east as its part in defeating Germany.

All reports indicated the beachhead, meagre though they were, agreed that the Allies had made good the great gamble of amphibious landing against possibly the strongest fortified section of coast in the world.

Reconnaissance pilots said the Allied troops had secured the beaches and were slashing inland. The unofficial word at headquarters confirmed this, while the Vichy radio admitted the Allied drive inland was going right ahead.

640 NAVAL GUNS IN ACTION

More than 640 naval guns, ranging from 4 to 16-inch, hurled many tons of shells accurately into the coastal fortifications which the Germans had spent four years preparing against this day.

Prime Minister Churchill was able to tell parliament that the shore batteries had been "largely quelled and the underwater obstructions had proven less dangerous than feared, and the whole operation was "proceeding according to plan."

Allied planes preceded the landings with a steady 96-hour bombardment which reached its pinnacle in the hour before the troops hit the beaches.

The air attack was thrust home through cloud banks 5,000 feet high.

The absence of German aerial opposition was remarked by nearly all returning fliers and correspondents. The Germans are known to have about 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers available for the western front, but it was supposed that they had chosen not to risk them in an all-out first-day battle.

DEAL WITH ENEMY WARSHIPS

German naval opposition was confined to destroyers and motor torpedo boats which headquarters said were being "dealt with." The Germans, as expected, blared on their radios all sorts of claims of vast destruction done to Allied fleets and forces, but with no confirmation.

Canadian Fighter Pilots Back From Beach Say "All Is Going Well"

By LOUIS HUNTER
(CP War Correspondent)

At an R.C.A.F. Station, Somewhere in England, June 6 — (CP Cable)— The great Allied assault on the northern French coast appeared to be going well by noon today as Canadian fliers, returning from sorties over the beachhead, said Canadian and British troops seemed well ashore with lots of armor visible on the beaches.

As the day wore on fliers encountered bits of cloud over the beachhead area but the enemy, roughly three hours after the landings started, still was not offering fighter opposition in the air.

One pilot said: "There were lots of ships. Boats were churning about all over the place. The troops on shore seemed to be making progress and everything seemed all right on the beaches as far as you could tell from the air.

"There were bags of fighters around the continental air cover."

Three hours after the Allied invasion started, fighter pilots brought back reports that the situation on the beach seemed "well organized."

This was the second Canadian fighter patrol of the day. The Canadian Wing was led by Wing Comdr. George Keefer of Charlottetown.

"We spent about an hour over the Beach," he said. "There's lots of Allied aircraft there. Things on the Beach seem well organized. There is some shelling going on.

"There was a hell of a lot of armor stuff on the Beach that looked like tanks. I saw them from so many ships in all my life".

The fliers said they could see landing craft nosing into the Beaches as they flew a regular shuttle service to protect the ground force from air attack while during the first hour of invasion at least never materialized.

Great Barrages Thrown Up.

The Canadian fliers reported great barrages were thrown out by powerful German naval units but they said jubilantly they could see "our little men" reach the Beach unscathed.

The first Canadian fliers said they got only a glimpse of the Beaches between Le Havre and Cherbourg but reported no serious naval loss. There was no opposition from enemy warships, they said flak was encountered.

The Canadian fighters did not even fire their guns.

But with them were some 2,300 heavy bombers and medium bombers which plastered the invasion coast with an estimated 1,200 tons of bombs.

On the second Canadian fighter patrol—at noon the first—there was no fighter opposition encountered.

There was "lots of shooting going on" at the Beachhead in France when ships started disgorging invasion troops, said returning Canadian pilots.

PLASTERER SEVERELY INJURED IN FALL

Robert cook, local plasterer, was rushed to Belleville General Hospital yesterday afternoon suffering with broken ribs and a fractured leg, among other injuries, as a result of a fall. Scotty Wilson was assisting Mr. Cook in his work rebuilding the West End Motors, Front Street, took the injured man to hospital.

The accident occurred when a plank or a scaffold on which Cook was working broke, causing him to fall a distance of fifteen feet.

GARBAGE COLLECTION TO BE MADE EARLIER

With the advent of fine summer weather and longer days, employees of the public works department in charge of city garbage collection are beginning their duties earlier but are having their efforts hampered considerably through garbage not being placed at the curb in time. To assist the city employees in their collections City Engineer Charles Mott today asked that householders make an effort to have their garbage placed at the street line no later than previously. If this co-operation was shown by the citizens of the city, collections could be made when traffic was at a minimum and call-backs would be reduced to a minimum.

MATTER OF DAMAGES AMICABLY SETTLED

A two-car crash at the intersection of Station and Front Sts. late Monday night resulted in property damage to both automobiles. Joseph Rathbun, 22 Baldwin St., was proceeding from Station St. onto Front St. when his car struck the other automobile driven by Arthur Aitken of Deseronto-ville. Following the impact a front tire on Mr. Rathbun's vehicle and the left front fender were damaged. The rear fender of the other car was also damaged. The matter of damages was amicably settled by the parties concerned during police investigations.

CHILD AT PLAY TRICYCLE

A bicycle found abandoned in a clump of bushes on Great St. School, in Sidney Ward, was taken to police station by 14-year-old Ronald Wilson, 19 Great St., on Friday. The bike was discovered by the Courneyea lad while he was at play with other boys in the vicinity of the school. Police are holding the bicycle for identification.

Ten Student-Aid Scholarships Made Available By Dept.

A total of ten student-aid scholarships and bursaries for the academic term year of 1946-45 have been made available for deserving students of Hastings County according to an announcement issued to high school principals and other interested persons by the city Public Department of Education.

These scholarships and bursaries are intended for students of character whose health and physical fitness are satisfactory to the committee of award, and who meet the required academic standing, and who, without financial assistance, are not considered able to attend their studies. The value of scholarships for first or second year university standing will be $300 each; $200 for student doctors; $200 for teachers normal School non-resident students and $125 for resident; and $100 for Grade XIII.

Scholarships are of a fixed amount while bursaries are intended as a reward with an established maximum but with no fixed minimum. They are to be distributed throughout the province on the basis of population and enrolment in the high schools and collegiate institutes. In Hastings there are three university scholarships, one normal school scholarships and four Grade XIII scholarships.

The awards under the plan shall be paid after the enrolment of the successful candidate at school, in two instalments, the first to be paid within thirty days after the opening of the first term, and the second on recommendation of the head of the school within thirty days after the opening of the second term. Complete particulars are available from high school principals.

Eighteen District Canneries Need 1,650 Workers

An appeal for every bit of available help to assist in canning operations in the Bay of Quinte district during the next few weeks was made from the office of the National Selective Service for that week with the announcement that a total of approximately 1,650 workers would be the initial number required by canning factories with the beginning of the pea harvest.

This number, comprised of 1,200 women and 450 men, would be needed in the 18 district canning factories with the opening of the pea harvest, it was stated. Additional help would be needed as the season progressing the latter part of June and reaching its peak around the 1st of July.

"With the present splendid prospects for a good crop of canning factory produce and the demand for canned goods which will exist for the forthcoming months, it is imperative that we obtain every possible assistance and the help of all volunteers for the canning season," stated Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local selective service office. "If the requirements are met in our canning factories are to be met, all help available, including that as well as high school students, will be needed."

Beginning during the latter part of June with the pea and strawberry crops, the demand for workers in canning factories will be intensified, the middle of October when the tomato and pumpkin harvests are completed. The peak of activities is in September, it was stated, when all but Prince Edward County, only about one half dozen being in Hastings.

Nine New Members For Rotary Club In Past Year

Departing from the usual procedure of guest speaker appearances at luncheon meetings, members of the Belleville Rotary Club on Monday handed over the podium to Secretary Reg. Ellis and President Fred W. Deacon, chairman of the membership committee.

And through this medium, the chairman announced, the membership had been swelled during the past year by nine new additions with two former members rejoining the club for "active duty."

Tendered a hearty welcome and new members are Notarians Alex. Wilson, Ken MacDonald, Bill Bonner, Stan Hagerman, Will Myers, Gus Hall, Jack Marshall and Lieut. Charles Kinnear. Those returning to the fellowship of the club after enforced absence are Bev. Cribbole and Geo. H. Carver.

Feature of the meeting was the official induction and introduction of Notarians Will Myers and Jack Marshall. Notarians Gus Freeman, Ken MacDonald and Charles Kinnear were unavoidably absent.

In a brief but brilliant oratorical eloquence, and humor, Notarian J. O. Herrity, dean of the club's membership, paid tribute to the new members, stated that at the date July 1, 1943 the club membership had fallen to thirty-one. Notarians Hartwicks and James Boyle had resigned during the past year, leaving the club's membership. W. B. Deacon and Stewart Robertson were the only members with membership of the club is 'it.

"While it is not numbers perhaps, taken in as many new members as other service clubs of the city," declared Herrity, "it is the individual personality of each member, not only to the club, but to the community as well that they enroll as many members as possible.

"Nobody needs new blood, new men and new ideas and it is your responsibility to find the best assistants in obtaining them. It is also your responsibility to see that they associate with. There are a number of Rotary classifications which are not filled," and I feel that there are a number of citizens, who do not belong to the Rotary Club of the city, would join if properly approached. Think of the city from your own personal standpoint as well as the club's," he added.

"I feel that this club has had a good year," Chairman Deacon concluded, "and I hope for a better one next year. We have many vehicles provide a medium for its expression in the performance of citizenship not only to the municipality but to the district as well."

President John Deacon was in the chair with Sandy Burrows and Alec Thompson assisting. Rotarian Hall rendered the contribution along musical lines. Guests included Rotarians Harry Gilbert, Morris, N.Y., and Lemuel Tom Stephenson, K.C., of Halifax, N.S.

Two New Members Of Police Department Start Their Duties

Two new officers assumed their stations on the Belleville Police Department yesterday, Inspector J. C. Reid announced today. Appointed as Constable Roy Doherty, who came to Belleville, after two years on the Peterborough police force, and Constable Johnson joined the force bringing the total complement of officers to 18 that prior to the recent resignations of two constables.

Inspector Hayes Honored.

Inspector Hayes was given the honor of being invited by the members of the village council met and presented Inspector Hayes with a substantial gift in recognition of his splendid services as a law enforcing officer during the past 12 years. Tonight another signal testimony will be given Inspector Hayes by the citizens of Tweed in the form of a farewell testimonial civic banquet in his honor.

Archbishop O'Sullivan on First Official Visit to City Administers Sacrament of Confirmation to 236

Archbishop J. A. O'Sullivan paid of his first official visit to the parish of St. Michael's Cathedral on Sunday afternoon, and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to a class of 236 young men and women, children and 32 adults. The church was filled to capacity for the ceremony and was completely filled to the doors with the large body of the congregation that overflowed into the auditorium, the proceedings being televised with flags. On his arrival at 2.30 His Grace was driven to the church by the Rev. Father Dunn under the direction of Barbara Ann Fox, Belleville Girl Guide, and was met at the door by the young children attending from the church school. Shortly before 3 o'clock the procession made its way from the church, preceded by the cross bearer and acolytes. Above the main door was the large Papal coat of Arms of the Archbishop's office.

Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., pastor, presented the candidates for the prescribed Canonical manner and then offered the following address:

"This hour is indeed a signal one of abundant joy and gladness. Its memory will be a long treasure of happiness and gratitude. The Parish of St. Michael's Church has received Archbishop on the occasion of his first official visit. We have had their great privilege to receive him as the Harbinger of the Holy Spirit, in the full celestial gifts of which he is to be confirmed. The presence and glory of His Grace reflects the wealth of warm welcome that is in the hearts of priest and people. We are required to express our respect and affection, and this we do from the very fill and the Divine living you represent, but for yourself the very fact that you have had the rare graces of mind and heart, which you now manifest, is the best guarantee that succeeding years will bring you increasing opportunities of their exercise. The precious bond between Bishop and people, Father and child, is not merely a human fellowship, it is so holy that it is Divine. It is the very fact that certain knowledge that Authority in the Church has a credentials. The congregation of St. Michael's is that of an heroic people. Their loyalty to Christ as well as sensible in building and rebuilding their Glory of God, their unfailing generosity to the needy and their spirit of good will and friendship prevailing among the citizens of Belleville.

Expresses Loyalty to Chief Pastor

"On behalf of the congregation, Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C. read an address of welcome, expressing sentiments of grateful and affectionate appreciation and loyalty to their Chief Pastor. He outlined the progress of the parish from its inception in 1827. To the present day, referring to the various pastors who presided in succession, the activities of the present incumbent, Monsignor Nicholson and the assistant priest, Father Mitchell and Father Dunn, on the field of battle in the last Great War, when the Military Cross, for bravery, or in his parochial duties, he has received upon his return. Upon each alighting exertion nor exsparing neither exertion nor expense in carrying out the purposes and the temporal welfare of those allotted to their care. To the future we would be remiss in our duties if we did not pay tribute to the faithful assistance of Rev. C. E. Baker and Rev. A. L. O'Donnell, for their unfailing devotion during the period of their duties. "The flower of faith has ever blossomed and flourished in the venerable parish and its undying growth receives added impetus in the present visit of our Chief Shepherd. Your past record has proven that you are worthy indeed to assume responsibility of your holy position. We pray that from Your Grace, our devoted attachment, and your loyal support, means that God may bless your every work; and that you may bless your faithful people with the ardent fire of Kingdom."

Pleased at Large Attendance.

The Archbishop replying to the address of welcome, in English, Father expressed his warm appreciation of the reception and the attendance of them. He paid a tribute to the Pastor, Monsignor Nicholson, speaking of his excellent training from Seminary days. He expressed his pleasure at the large attendance at the confirmation of the congregation.

The children were interrogated on the Catechism and their ready answers elicited many words of praise. Children were also given a promise to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor until the 21st year. His Grace spoke on the virtue of Temperance and the obligations of parents to give good example in moulding the lives of their children. He paid another an urgent plea for the preservation of Christian home life in the face of the evil influences which in our day are seeking to overthrow it. "Religion," he said "must be taught at home. As the home is, so is the nation." He also referred to the trend in the world today to the fact that the home is not a prominent feature in the consideration of the child. The home is the foundation of the nation and upon this nation so is the world. Parents must not be content with merely feeding, clothing and shelter for the child but they must also be with the Bread of Life the child for God. In this connection he reminded the parents of their duty to bring pledges to the children the meaning and importance of the pledge which they had taken. He commended the parishioners for their glorious monuments of stone reared to the Glory of God, but "You must have reared a much greater monument preserving intact your Christian homes; the product of which, we have before us today."

He commented briefly on the fall of Rome, the Eternal City, as an indication of the early dissolution of the country powers. He encouraged the congregation to redouble their prayers to Almighty God for charity and a victorious peace for the United Nations.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given by Rev. P.P. Treacy, assisted by Rev. J. V. Meagher, P.P., Rev. Father Dunn and Rev. J. Coyle, P.P., Read.

Will Not Interfere With Work Hours

Toronto, June 6 — (CP)— Labor Minister Daley, in a statement issued two Toronto radio stations (CFRB and CKCL) last night described as "unfortunate" a statement by new Labor laws proving for a 48-hour week and saying that the provision cannot be put into effect July 1.

The Minister said the present work hours and the priority occupations would not be arbitrarily interfered with before July 1, he said.

"A week's vacation with pay is, however, provided for but such vacations need not begin July 1," he said.

The industry and Labor Board felt that 48 hours was a sufficient week but that while it was the purpose of the act to provide improved conditions, the provision cannot be put into effect at this time to interfere with an all-out war effort," Mr. Daley said.

For this reason, he added, the Board has authorized continuation of present work hours in all industries essential to the war.

Invasion Most Daring Undertaking In the Long History of Warfare

Action Is Result Of Four Years Careful Planning

Preparation Started After Dunkerque Retreat

By PAUL KERN LEE, AP STAFF WRITER

The Allied invasion of western Europe, largest and most daring such undertaking in the history of warfare by any standards, is the result of nearly four years of careful, methodical preparation.

Hardly had Britain's army in France been snatched from seemingly-certain destruction at Dunkerque than plans for the eventual return were being laid.

For the time being Britain had to contend herself with the all-out defence of her home islands against the German aerial military machine which had won control of that battle. Air attacks continued, but it was from that period that the Germans themselves realized their aerial losses were greater than the results warranted.

It was in that time, too, that some sort of German invasion of Britain was considered. Stories circulating out of Berne and even years afterward told how hundreds of German invasion barges had been caught and sunk by the R.A.F. Officially, both Britain and Germany kept mum, but it was obvious that a hastily-improvised invasion program had failed. It served as a warning to Britain that spur-of-the-moment invasion could not succeed.

Britain proceeded slowly. The Commandos were organized, and for years developed their technique in a series of hit-skip raids against the German-dominated coast. Meanwhile information, damaging enemy installations, began to flow in from agents in a constant state of alertness and alarm.

U.S. In War.

With the entry of the United States into the war after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, the pace quickened. In January 1942, American troops began arriving in Ireland. They were there for one purpose; to prepare for the ultimate blow against Europe. Soon they extended to Northern Ireland itself; their number constantly augmented.

The American learned their own commando-like striking force, the Rangers.

In August, 1942, combined forces, mostly Canadian, stormed ashore at Dieppe, France, but it was not the intention that they remain on the Continent.

This raid in force definitely showed the Allied Command that the German defences of western Europe were strong enough per-haps than had been imagined. After spending all day on the enemy coast, the Allies withdrew. Their casualties were heavy. The Allies continued their preparations and chose other fields for immediate action.

In French North Africa.

In November British and American invaded French North Africa. The end: The Axis armies in the United States. Their timing was nearly perfect; their plans were carefully laid and closely followed; they worked with the French underground. Operation Torch went brilliantly and in Africa the green American troops got their baptism under fire.

Finally, in May, 1942, the last Germans were eliminated from Africa. The Axis was driven from the Continent. French leadership had learned to work together.

With each battle, with every new campaign, the Allies learned something new. Every step was taken in the great invasion of western Europe. Every step was all their energies and cleverness and skill.

The capture of the islands of Pantelleria and Lampedusa showed them how air power could be concentrated to obliterate any given stretch of enemy territory.

The invasion of Sicily in July, 1943, in which the Canadians played a leading part, taught them still more. It was a successful surprise assault. Sicily fell in 38 days.

Some of the more than 3,200 vessels used in that invasion had been stored out of sight months in advance. It was a tip-off to the long-range, careful nature of allied advance planning.

Allied forces had worked more closely together in Sicily than anywhere previously. Here, they still were separate armies, separate navies, separate air forces.

Co-operation At Peak.

There followed the invasions of Italy, and at Salerno on Sept. 9 British-American co-operation of all arms reached a new peak. A mixed British-American army, commanded by an American general, went onto the Salerno beaches. It was a close fight. It was won eventually only by the smooth combination of air, sea and land forces.

The air cover, British and American, never faltered, while strategic bombing further inland was maintained steadily. British and American navies put the troops ashore, kept them supplied with a constant stream of men, barges, and maintained them in precarious position by the shrewd use of naval rifles.

Due to the great sea and air distances from the nearest base, it was in some ways a tougher operation than western Europe might have been, but it showed the power of perfected teamwork.

All the while, independently, yet co-ordinated, the strategic bombing continued for the invasion of western Europe.

Allied leaders manfully resisted the temptation to call the thought-less for immediate invasion, and for tremendous losts, for other theatres. meanwhile permitting a constant flow of "invasion" speculation and conjecture. They are all fully trained and equipped.

Their traveling personnel has had the baptism of fire in Sicily and on the Italian front.

For four years their task has mainly been to look after the big build-up of alliances which come with the training of a great army, the weeding out of the thoughtless and those in the Mediterranean theatre, who have seen enough frontline casualties know what lies ahead.

Plans of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps in which the Canadian nursing sisters serve call for an early move into newly-established areas in preparation for actual invasion duty are expert in the treatment of battle casualties, treatments and are the most extraordinary. Before the long turn will be replaced in Britain by new establishments from Canada.

Have Eye to Safety

Lt.-Col. Agnes Neill of Peterborough, Ontario, chief matron of Canadian nursing services, has been non-committal about the role the nursing sisters will be called upon to play.

"If the general hospitals and casualty clearing stations go, the nursing sisters attached to them will go with them," she said. "Canadian sisters will not be sent to Canadian Red Indian and Wolf Squadrons at one time ran one-two in the top of R.A.F.'s scoring list.

T.A.F. is much bigger than the entire R.A.F. in 1939 in men, planes and its equipment of fast, high-flying fighters, specialized ground attack squadrons and long-range bombers such as the American made aircraft which the Germans feared most. Its commander, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, is R.A.F.'s No. 1 with spectacular success.

A Big Air Force

T.A.F. includes much of the fighter and fighter-bomber strength of Fighter Command, all the light and medium bombers based in Britain and the whole of the tactical air force originally established within the framework of Fighter Command.

A.D.G.B., which also has its quota of Canadian aces, is commanded by Air Marshal Sir Roderic Hill. The day and night defence of the United Kingdom, its main task now is to frustrate enemy attempts to disorganize invasion plans by night raids. It is expected to assume an offensive as well as a defensive role.

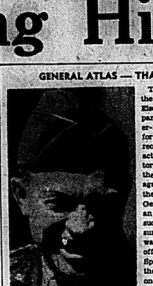
While the limelight turns now on T.A.F., Coastal Command's bomber crews and their British, Australian and American aircraft have been extremely active in an invasion role.

Besides their long-range bombing of Germany, its heavy bombers, the improved Lancasters and Halifaxes of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and American Liberators and Fortresses, pounded vital production and communication centres. Their strength was put to use to targets in France.

The number of Canadian squadrons, their aces and the proportion of fighters and bombers, cannot be disclosed in Britain. However, announced in Ottawa in March that, "Canadian air force strength overseas would eventually total 46, including 21 fighter squadrons" air and coastal command units.

MY PRAYERS WITH THEM

Montreal, June 6.—(Tuesday)—Lt. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian commander of the First Army overseas and the man who will lead Canadian troops in their part in today's invasion of the continent, left early today. "All I'd like to say is that my prayers are with them".



Canadian Soldiers Largest Group of Untested Troops

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian soldiers assigned to the invasion of Western Europe make up the largest force of untested troops ever to go into action for Canada. Only a short time ago Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, their commander, declared "there are more than a quarter million Canadians trained and ready for the last battle."

In an interview with the London Daily Express, the Canadian commander said: "I do not see why troops going into battle for the first time should not go into action the first as well as veterans. I think as far as my army is concerned, Canadians who landed in Sicily and later stormed Ortono in Italy proved this point."

The Canadian commander added that this was important, as far as possible, that troops should be introduced into battle in such a way that they do not receive the full force of a new battle in which the average soldier, well trained but never in battle, must be successfully through the first action he will face the future with confidence.

GENERAL ATLAS — THAT'S EISENHOWER

The global burden being borne on the shoulders of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower makes it easy to compare him to Atlas. The commander-in-chief of all the Allied forces for the invasion of Europe is directing the largest-scale military action ever undertaken in the history of mankind. On him depends the success of the second front against Germany. And praise from the enemy is proof indeed! The Germans declare he never launches an assault unless the chances of success are at least 90 per cent sure. The more work thrown his way, the more he likes it, say staff officers around him under General Ike. Speaking of himself, he says he's the "best damned lieutenant colonel in the army" — his permanent peacetime rating. Now his permanent rating is major-general.

Canada's Fighting Airmen Have Been Well Tested For Great Part in Invasion

By LOUIS Y. HUNTER

Canada's fighting airmen, trained at home and tested in Europe's skies form part of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, assigned the task of the invasion of Europe from the air.

This largest of all air striking forces ever to be co-ordinated under one command, is led by Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory of Battle-of-Britain fame.

There are Royal Canadian Air Force fighter wings in the British Second Tactical Air Force and Canadian squadron in Air Defence of Great Britain and two forces which, with Mai.-Gen. Lewis Brereton's American 9th. Air Force, constitute the A.E.A.F.

R.C.A.F. units and personnel know what it is to fly in support of Canadian troops.

Fought Over Dieppe

Over Dieppe on August 19, 1942, Canadian fighter squadrons flying from English bases met the first serious page in Canada's air history. Deterborough's Nursing Sister Is Chief Matron

With the start of the Allied invasion of Europe the dress rehearsal for the big show is over and veterans who for four years and more have been coming and going.

Germans Labor Long and Hard On Atlantic Wall

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

For more than four years, the Germans labored over their defences in Western Europe — preparing for the invasion-reply promised from the 1940 day the British were driven out into the Channel from the beaches of Dunkirk.

The Germans never missed the opportunity to boast of an impregnable "Atlantic Wall," a concrete-and-steel rim around the western edge of the continent. In recent months they talked so much about the strength of the defences that military observers in London wondered what they were trying to hide.

Pre-invasion information published in London indicated the Germans had established a coastal defence zone, fortified by concrete pillboxes and gunposts with large minefields covering the land area around these static emplacements.

For miles inland from the coast the Axis commandeered private homes, many coastal ports and villages now are in ruins, destroyed in the same manner as the Germans used at Cassino and Anzio. Every available home of houses were turned into strongpoints and gun emplacements.

This fortified coastal strip, regarded as the key to victory, is only to take the first shock of the Allied attack, the strongest available obstacle.

Behind the inland the Nazis undoubtedly have erected strong defences hinged on the rivers which will be bolstered by more mine fields. German reserve armies have been massed behind on this line, prepared to strike at formations from British beachheads.

Hundreds of heavy and medium guns are known to have been moved into areas in western Europe in the past few months, a steady flow to Atlantic and to Axis the German-occupied countries.

The Germans must choose the most appropriate time to commit their reserve divisions. Coastal forces can be considered "sacrificial" troops in taking the first blow from the Allied assault, but once main landings have been established, the counter-attack of the Allies, disposition of the Nazi reserve, in which the Germans have placed their hope, will decide how the battle will be fought from the point of view of the Nazis.

For defence the Germans can be counted upon to use extensively the use of artillery and heavy mortars, which reckon mortars, which have been employed in Italy and Russia. They also have a powerful weapon, the radio-controlled "bettle" tank and the devillish booby traps and mines.

Eisenhower Talks To People Of Europe

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 5.—(AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, went on the air this morning to bring the peoples of Europe the grand word that the "hour of liberation" and "all patriots, young and old, will have a part to play in the liberation".

He pleaded against premature uprisings, saying: "Be patient, prepare. Wait until I give the word."

He was followed by King Haakon of Norway, who issued similar special orders to both organized and unorganized resistance groups. "In the way but warned his people not to take "unlawful or premature measures."

It was announced that Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who had just arrived in London, would broadcast to the people of France later in the day.

Nearly Four Years Of Agony Pass Since France Fell

On June 17, 1940, Petain Announced It Was Necessary To Stop Fighting

DAY OF DELIVERY NEAR

By CARL C. CRANMER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The long trail of blood and heartbreak winding through nearly five years of war from Warsaw and Rotterdam to Paris again today with the long-planned Allied invasion of Axis Europe.

The avenging forces, the greatest amphibious expedition in this or any other war, opened a fateful chapter in one of the most fabulous stories of nations—the story of France, great in history, brief in defeat, awakening today to the bells of shouts of soldier friends and Allies.

Tossed into the scale were the lives of many thousands of Occupied young men—Britons, Americans, Canadians and Frenchmen of open exiles, whose countries have been held firmly under the heel in the long drama of her history.

At last, the "Day of Deliverance" for which Premier Paul Reynaud vainly called four years ago this fall appeared to be spelled by the equivalent of many divisions of Allied fighting in a wave through the Nazi's vaunted Atlantic Wall on the shortest route to Berlin.

Fate of Hitler is Balance

The fate of Adolf Hitler, evil genius of the 20th century, probably was settled on the soil of Northern France or Belgium, scene of the Nazi leader's greatest victory a century before him, and the fate of Napoleon a century before that.

It was at dawn, May 10, 1940, that Hitler hurled more than a 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 men, his air forces and his armored divisions consisting of 4,000 tanks against France and the Low Countries and his fate, his empire's and his outcome would determine the fate of Germany for 1,000 years.

On that day France was believed by her allies to have the most efficient army in the world. Still unbeaten was the terrible force with which the Germany army had battered its way through Poland and Scandinavia to the Low Countries and the Channel. The Poles had relied on old-fashioned horse cavalry and the Norwegians, now, it was thought, would be witnessed a battle between modern armies.

But on June 17, just a month and seven days later, an stunned world heard Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, hero of the battle of Verdun, blakenly announce: "It is with heart heavy that I tell you today it is necessary to stop the fighting."

He had asked the adversary, he said, as one soldier to another, to seek with honor the means to end hostilities.

The pleaded against premature uprisings, saying: "Be patient, prepare. Wait until I give the word."

He was followed by King Haakon of Norway, who issued similar special orders to both organized and unorganized resistance groups. "In the way but warned his people not to take "unlawful or premature measures."

It was announced that Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who had just arrived in London, would broadcast to the people of France later in the day.

The bitter cup of a second Compiegne was presented.

Hitler stomped his feet and clapped his hands when the details of the news. He dramatized his astounding victory with sardonic irony when he called together the French emissaries in the old railway car of Marshal Foch in which the 1918 armistice was signed.

Then came the first battle of France.

Petain, and probably most of the French people, believed that the Allies were done. Decisively it was believed that they had even come in the First Great War.

In Berlin and Paris German soldiers sang "We're Sailing Against England" and "Wacht Am Rhein" celebrated.

The battle of Britain was about to begin.

"By neck is in a noose," Petain brokenly explained.

Churchill Defiant

But across the Channel, Prime Minister Churchill defiantly bid his people fight.

"We have become the sole champions now in arms to defend the world cause and we shall do our part to be worthy of this high honor," he declared. "We shall defend our island home and with the British Empire around us we shall fight on unconquerably until the last of Hitler is lifted from the brows of mankind."

Much bitter feeling was to be vented and much blood spilled from the day of these utterances of resignation on one hand and defiance on the other before the Allies' tavern on the Rhine was back, the hard way, to the second battle of France.

France was doomed not only to suffer under the heel of the conqueror but to fight and quarrel with her friends.

The French would afterward they had but 2,500 tanks, some of 1918 vintage, and 800 combat aircraft with which to fight the first battle of Europe. They had suffered 2,000,000 casualties, mostly prisoners.

But Petain explained the defeat with the plea that although France had too few friends, too few allies. Britain semi-ready, was desirous to help, he asserted, compared with 85 in 1918, Britain, completing the evacuation at Dunkirk on June 4, had left the French to fight alone, Vichy claimed.

British Attack at Oran

Six days after he had declared his grief for the "gallant people" of France, Mr. Churchill rose in the House of Commons to upbraid "the treacherous attack" which the French had callously broken a promise not to let the French fleet fall into German hands.

Then, on July 4, he told with bitterness of the tragic but inevitable occurrences of the war.

"Some of the finest ships have fallen upon the French fleet at Oran and Mers-el-Kebir off the Algerian North African shore, and therefore its backbone.

Winston House of Commons heard of the "drastic and grievous" action against old comrades in arms. Mr. Churchill said it was necessary to deal with a threatened material injury.

There followed the Allied charges of Vichy treachery, even St. Pierre-Miquelon in the Western Hemisphere, kept the sore spots open.

On July 9, 1940, the Third French Republic was dead, buried under the enemy's bayonets at it's back, and Petain, hero of France, a dictatorial decree and write a new constitution for France.

Petain's bias in favor of a more than friendly attitude was seemed evident in his "explanation that France's defeat was brought on by the soft and easy-going under her democratic regime.

Petain was regarded as the cunning political manipulator at Pe-tain-sur-Oise.

On October 24, 1940, was born the Franco-German collaboration. Hitler at the conference between Petain and the Fuehrer.

Folley of Collaboration

Petain's policy of collaboration with Hitler at the conference between Hitler and Petain was clear-cut.

But the ghosts of hostages shot by Hitler's agents in reprisals for martyred heroes of a close-knit underground, the secret movement of stories of dogged French resistance to the Nazis, began to walk the streets that Petain and Vichy did not represent France.

Allied bombs aimed at Germans hit Frenchmen, but the French continued the struggle, striking back with signals, and hid them when the Nazis searched.

When British Commandos attacked the Channel Islands, 1942, the French rose and attacked the German garrisons and others continued to fight after the raid was over, to the accompaniment of shots.

Finally, proof that the patriotic spirit of France would not come when Hitler made his abortive effort to seize the remaining of the French fleet at Toulon November 27, 1942, and the French scuttled vigorously set off the blasts that sent their ships to the bottom.

The Pandora's box that was opened with the Allied invasion of Normandy, the symbol and spark of resistance thereby. He now heads the French national committee in North Africa which is insistent upon taking over the reins in a liberated France.

De Gaulle has called Petain an "arch-traitor of Decadence," and De Gaullists propose to purge French national life of the influence which they regard as traitors to France.

Long-Awaited Invasion Is Fifth Landing For Canada's Britain-Based Land Forces

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

The long-awaited invasion of Europe from the west, one of the greatest combined operation ever, is the fifth landing of the war for Canada's British-based land forces.

They went to Spitsbergen, Dieppe, Sicily and Italy, they return to European beaches as part of the greatest armada assembled by Sir Bernard Montgomery.

Westward voyage was the operation for which they trained for so long, ever since they came to England, first of all in June 10, 1939.

During the last eight months intensive training in combined operations prepared them for opposed landings on an enemy beach. A dozen practice assaults were made on a stretch of England's shoreline.

These Canadians probably have had more opportunity than any of the Allied invasion formations in training for the assault. They have been at it so long they know the drill backwards. They are well led and in the last phase of their training were razor-keen for the job ahead.

The day has been long in coming for the Canadians, has meant months of hard work and of tedious waiting and constant training. But this western operation is, for the Canadian Army, the great climax of the war, overshadowing their gallantry at Dieppe, Ortona and Cassino.

Remember Training

As they go into this campaign Canadians remember the years since mobilization, the first days contingent arrived in Britain. They remember the long training period at Aldershot,as they prepared to go into the line in France with the British Expeditionary Force.

They never got there. The German panzers smashed through Flanders and although the Canadians were to go to defend Calais the plan was cancelled. They finally went to Brest and for a few frantic days moved on to Paris but then were ordered out as the B.E.F. straggled back to Dover.

The Canadians were given a defence-of-Britain role and there followed a period of excitement and of constant moving but the German invasion did not materialize. A winter of training followed and in the spring of 1941 the Canadian force successfully raided Spitsbergen and carried out other operations without opposition. There was nothing more for the Canadians to do in Britain. By 1942, when a major part of the 2nd. Division went to Dieppe, and for eight bloody hours on the beaches of Dieppe the Canadians were ites but providing the combined operations background for the great landings to come.

Action in Tunisia

Two months later the British and Americans went into North Africa, and during the winter groups of Canadians were attached to the British Army in Tunisia for battle experience. They got plenty of it.

For the rest of the Canadians in Squadrons at one time ran one-two in the top of R.A.F.'s scoring list.

T.A.F. is much bigger than the entire R.A.F. in 1939 in men, planes and its equipment of fast, high-flying fighters, specialized ground attack squadrons and long-range bombers such as the American made aircraft which the Germans feared most. Its commander, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, is R.A.F.'s No. 1 with spectacular success.

A Big Air Force

T.A.F. includes much of the fighter and fighter-bomber strength of Fighter Command, all the light and medium bombers based in Britain and the whole of the tactical air force originally established within the framework of Fighter Command.

A.D.G.B., which also has its quota of Canadian aces, is commanded by Air Marshal Sir Roderic Hill. The day and night defence of the United Kingdom, its main task now is to frustrate enemy attempts to disorganize invasion plans by night raids. It is expected to assume an offensive as well as a defensive role.

While the limelight turns now on T.A.F., Coastal Command's bomber crews and their British, Australian and American aircraft have been extremely active in an invasion role.

Besides their long-range bombing of Germany, its heavy bombers, the improved Lancasters and Halifaxes of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and American Liberators and Fortresses, pounded vital production and communication centres. Their strength was put to use to targets in France.

The number of Canadian squadrons, their aces and the proportion of fighters and bombers, cannot be disclosed in Britain. However, announced in Ottawa in March that, "Canadian air force strength overseas would eventually total 46, including 21 fighter squadrons" air and coastal command units.

MY PRAYERS WITH THEM

Montreal, June 6.—(Tuesday)—Lt. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian commander of the First Army overseas and the man who will lead Canadian troops in their part in today's invasion of the continent, left early today. "All I'd like to say is that my prayers are with them".

Momentous D-Day Arrives

Allied Powers of the West have struck the invasion of Western Europe has begun. From the great armed camp of Britain, the citadel of the West, where preparation of armaments and plans for invasion have long been in progress, Allied paratroop landings were made inland in France early today and troop landings on the French coast to form a beachhead. D-Day has come. No military event has been so long prepared for and with such care as the hurling of the power of the Western Nations against the tyranny of Nazi Germany.

June 6th will go down in history as the date of the greatest combined landings in history for the greatest of stakes, the assurance of the freedom of the world and of democracy through the elimination of German aggression forever from the face of the earth and for the restoration to the dismembered peoples of Europe of the liberty they once possessed but of which they were robbed by Hitlerite Germany in its plan for world conquest.

Early reports tell of the successes of the landings, and the messages of the Allied leaders breathe the very spirit of confidence while the men of the United Nations go forward to their great objectives.

General Eisenhower, supreme commander of the invasion forces, in the assault upon Hitler's "Atlantic Wall" and dominated Europe, sent a message to the peoples of Western Europe of the landings in France and on the coast "as part of the concerted United Nations' plan for the liberation of Europe, made in conjunction with your great Russian Allies."

"The hour of your liberation" is approaching. These were the words of the Allied commander, which suggest the great hymn of France, the Marseillaise, "the day of glory has arrived." Under such auspices began the great undertaking.

Under the British General Sir Bernard Montgomery are the invasion troops of the British, Canadians and Americans. The Canadian forces which have a prominent part are under command of General Crerar whose message to his command signifies the confidence of the Allied peoples and their military leaders in the success of the Allied objective.

The Great Allied Powers of the West are in the last great struggle against military Germany, they are now striking the blows that will loose the shackles from the peoples of Central Europe, where a vast underground movement awaits the ejemy in conjunction with the Allies at the word of their underground leaders.

In the words of General Eisenhower to the people of Western Europe, "this hour is the opening phase of the campaign in Western Europe. Great battles lie ahead. I can all upon who love freedom to stand with us. Keep your faith staunch, our arms are resolute—together we shall achieve victory."

"A great crusade" he called the invasion in his order of the day to the troops. "The eyes of the world are upon you and the hopes and prayers of all liberty-loving peoples go with you." He said the task was not easy but "the tide has turned and free men are marching together to victory."

In all history there never was such a night as Monday night as the armed forces of the Western Powers stationed in Britain were waiting the order to go over the Channel. The greatest armada of ships ever gathered numbering over 4,000 large ships and thousands of small type were ready, the forces were ready. There was perfect co-ordination of all the services, land sea, and air, of the transport at home and on the Channel—it was a clock-like operation—the readiness was all, set for the doom of Hitler and his German tyranny.

It was a night of waiting and readiness, there were services for troops, there was the talk of brave men speeding as if nothing unusual was at hand. In the fulness of time it had come to these men to strike. With dawn they struck that blow that will reverberate through Germany and Europe and shatter Hitlerism and Nazism to its foundations. The assault will reverberate down the ages because its goal is the security of the world and the overthrow of tyranny and savagery.

The order for the invasion of the Continent of Europe is the answer of brave-hearted men of the United Nations' world to the challenge of the Hun. It is the fulfilment of the Western Allies' pledge to redeem the liberty of the world. It is the pledge that was given with the successful Allied withdrawal of Dunkerque in 1940. Four years ago in the very time of the successful evacuation of Dunkerque comes this answer to Germany—the landings of the Western Allies. France can see in this the dawning of her redemption that will end in restoration of herself and of the rest of overrun Europe.

The time of battles in the West has come. The troops are steady and brave. To the people at home the time is freighted with the deepest significance. Over all there breathes the confidence of Allied victory and the justice of the Allied cause. Right and justice have their defenders in the brave men of the West who with their Russian allies are doing what will bring peace again to the western world.

While the men of the service battle, every particle of strength in the United Nations stands at the service of the fighting forces so that every line of duty will remain undone at home to make the triumph that is coming complete and as speedy as possible.

In confidence and with prayer in their hearts and on their lips the people of the United Nations pray for the success of Allied arms, and for divine leadership of those who guide the destinies of the armies, navies, air fleets of freedom.

With the joint fronts, active and home, welded into one solid phalanx or striking force, the triumph must come that will make the world of the nightmare of Hitlerite crime.

Canadian, British and American hearts beat bravely as the great showdown of Europe opens—the fight for the cause of freedom and among them, many a man of a race enslaved by the Germans, are on the march, the airmen fly, and their brethren in the waters ride and sail the waters bringing liberation. D-Day's full meaning will be reaped in the time ahead in a free and liberated world. D-Day has shot the arrow at Germany's heart.

As the events flow out of the initial operations of D-Day develop the peoples of the United Nations will possess their hearts in confidence, hope and faith in the triumph of right and in the spirit of prayer for victory.

Pouring Allied Steel in Italy

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

Molten steel, the first to flow in southern Italy for the Allied war effort, was poured the other day in an Italian east coast plant almost four months from the day British engineers went to work to get it in shape after a long period of inactivity. About 1,000 Italian workmen, most of them skilled steel workers, steelthed themselving the plant, which alone is expected to supply 50 per cent of the military requirements for some types of steel products, and save an enormous amount of shipping space.

A Boy and His Dog

(Leamington Post and News)

There is nothing and nobody to take the place of a boy and his dog. It is about 10 to 15 years of age when he needs his pet this way. He talks to him as he cannot talk to a human being. He expresses deep, swelling feelings he cannot put in words by stroking the dog, holding its paw, walking with him, holding him close. Do let him and his dog enjoy each other for the few brief years they are together. A dog's life is short at best.

JUST FOLKS

A BOY NAMED WILLIAMS

A boy named Williams, in a store,
Believed that life holds something more
Than toil and profits out of trade,
And measures which degrade;
And so to serve the spirit's need,
He fashioned a courageous creed,
Gave boys high alms for which to try,
And thus began the worldwide "Y".

A century ago he stood
Alone, a friend, for brotherhood;
Saw lads almost in slavery held,
To work from dawn to dark compelled;
Deprayed, debased, ill-clothed, ill-fed,
Upon a path unlighted led;
And dared to hint that better things
God meant for humble folk and kings.

A boy named Williams, asked a friend
An hour or two with him to spend
In searching for a better way
Than was the custom of their day.
In time, the circle wider grew
And building, better than they knew;
They found about the world had flown
The dream they'd fancied their alone.

Williams is dead! Today appears
The labor of a hundred years.
A boy's belief in human souls,
A boy's belief that life has goals—
Richer and nobler than the mere
Pursuit of pleasure, year by year,
Has built, though men are born to die,
A world-wide, ever-living "Y."

Australian Letter

Sydney, Australia, June 8 — (CP Cable) — Australian farmers got the "break" they were waiting for last week when drought which had lasted as much as a year in some places was ended by heavy rains.

As a result they are working desperately to complete grain sowing while the soil is still moist.

Canadian Scene
A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

In the days of Canada's first bridge-building efforts, men played hard as well as worked. They hugely enjoyed football, lacrosse, curling, cricket and handball. Handyball and cricket have not continued their widespread popularity. The former game has many of the characteristics of tennis and hockey.

Bridge construction gangs, usually the militia in the neighbourhood, found bridge-making a chilling job when logs had to be hauled out of the freezing water in the winter. Worse still in hoisting the logs into place on the bridge, the men sometimes had to stand for hours in ice-cold water up to the middle. Travellers, too, hated the word "bridge." They had discovered that the cordroyed bridges were to be feared and avoided whenever possible. These constructions were formed of trunks of trees, unhewn and of different sizes, placed across pieces of timber set lengthways. Rotten log often gave way and horses and carts, like the primitive wagons were in danger of having legs broken.

Yards of rope were kept in the construction huts and were carefully used frugally. Logs had to be dragged from forests to banks and there hauled across. When one bridge was out of the question the building job fell to them. If a wagon became stuck on a hill, ropes were manoeuvred around big trees at the top of the rise. A few heaves and the heavily-laden vehicle was brought upwards. Moreover, ropes were often the means of saving horses' lives. Sometimes the ropes were fastened around the animals' bodies and lowered over dizzying ice. When the horse fell into the water the men hauled it over the ice, keeping the animals' breath; whereupon they floated and could be pulled out.

An Important Road in South America

(From the New York Sun)

The opening of a road 223 miles long between Lima, Peru, and Pucallpa, a little Indian village at the head of navigation on the Ucayali River, is hailed as one of the major wartime accomplishments in South America. The road is not long, as highways go, but it is has large economic value, since it reduces greatly the time and the physical hardships formerly involved in going from the Peruvian capital to Iquitos, a busy port on the upper Amazon, to a few days of motor travel. Also it represents a distinct engineering triumph since it had to cross the Andes at an altitude 1,000 feet hitgher than Mont Blanc and almost 1,500 feet higher than Mount Whitney, highest peak in the United States. So difficult has been the trip from Iquitos to Lima that most of the rich Amazon rubber planters rather than undergo the thirty-day ordeal, have preferred to go down the Amazon and around through the Panama Canal, although that required months. The new highway makes the journey possible in five days—two by car and three by boat—at a cost of $17.

It is not likely that for some time to come this road, for all its scenic beauty, will attract tourists. These scenic marvels can be appreciated from thy fact that in eighty-seven miles the highway climbs almost 16,000 feet, at one point ascending in a huge spiral, crossing and recrossing itself on bridges in a perfect figure eight; described as the only such construction in the Western Hemisphere. What is important is that it taps hitherto inaccessible sections rich in natural resources and will encourage the realization of the dream of transcontinental lines of trade.

The War Today—
Calm Confidence in Invasion As Allies Land in Normandy

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

A voice over the telephone early today, speaking in measured tones, told me:—

"This is the day. The Allies have launched on the Cherbourg Peninsula and eastward. They are well inland already."

All of us might, I think, take our cue from the calm confidence of that voice, as this greatest amphibious invasion in history gets under way. We shall see bitter days, but on one score we can be certain—and each of us, I believe, feels it—the landing job fell to the men. If a wagon became stuck on a hill, ropes were manoeuvred around big trees at the top of the rise. A few heaves and the heavily-laden vehicle was brought upwards. Moreover, ropes were often the means of saving horses' lives. Sometimes the ropes were fastened around the animals' bodies and lowered over dizzying ice. When the horse fell into the water the men hauled it over the ice, keeping the animals' breath; whereupon they floated and could be pulled out.

A fierce battle is in progress, and of one thing we should be warned: The Germans have been holding their reserves well inland, back of their coastal defences in the hope to be able to fling them in any direction quickly in a hunch, aren't yet unorganized the full strength of Nazi might.

That will come later, and it's likely to be terrific.

The Allied high command has chosen to hit western France at the rough spot, right in the weak belt of Hitler's strongest defences. It was the logical thing to do, for one must be close to their main base and that base is in England. So we are starting at it the hard way in the beginning, but it will be the easiest in the long run.

Importance of Cherbourg

If we can segregate the Cherbourg peninsula, it will provide a most magnificent base for operations. Once it has the French capital and then on through the old invasion route to Germany.

Minesweeping Force Of 10,000 Britons Guides The Invasion

London, June 6 — (CP) — In the face of enemy shore batteries and aircraft a gallant minesweeping force of 10,000 Britons and American sailors guided D-day's seaborne assault with the greatest mine-sweeping operation in history.

The great armada of little ships—converted fishing trawlers, burners which served in the last war, ships still on the secret list and specially constructed in Britain and American yards — performed their task on a huge scale.

The sweep was used to tear loose moored mines stretched 70 miles in all.

With the sweeper steaming other ships which dropped markers to guide the invasion fleet through the cleared seas.

The job had to be completed on a timetable despite gunfire, attacking aircraft and tricky tides. Dogging the little craft kept perfect formation to make sure the sweep lanes were parallel to the assigned landing points.

ROOSEVELT VIEWS ROME'S FALL AS STEP TO VICTORY

Berlin and Tokyo Still Ahead President Tells The Nation In Radio Address

ROAD IS TOUGH

Washington, June 8 (AP) — Allied conquest of Rome showed up in President Roosevelt's words today as a welcome triumph, but only a stride in the long and costly march to final victory.

"One up and two to go," was his way of checking off the first capture of an Axis capital, with Berlin and Tokyo still ahead.

"Our victory comes at an excellent time," Mr.-Roosevelt declared in a broadcast address last night, "while our Allied forces are poised for another strike at Western Europe—and while armies of other Nazi soldiers nervously await our assault. And our gallant Russian Allies continue to make their power felt more and more."

To this, however, he hastened to add that while the Germans have "suffered heavy losses" there have not been "great enough to cause collapse."

"Germany has not yet been driven to surrender," he said. "Germany has not yet been driven to the point where she will be unable to recommence world conquest a generation hence.

"Therefore the victory still lies some distance ahead. That distance will be covered in due time—have no fear of that. But it will be tough and it will be costly."

To many here his words had the ring of reaffirmation of the Allied intention to press the war to complete victory over Germany.

The President's broadcast was prompted by the fall of Rome. He addressed himself almost exclusively to that subject in a manner to suggest that while he considered it a considerable psychological lift in Allied victory he hoped that it would not be over-rated as a great military contribution to the ultimate victory in Europe.

Want Help of Italy

To the people of Italy he held forth the suggestion that their country should seek a peaceful place in the family of nations as a "great mother nation" sending its sons by peace many richer lands, rather than seek expansion by aggression.

"We want and expect the help of the future Italy toward lasting peace," he said—"all the United nations opposed to Fascism and Nazism long give Italy a long start."

The fall of Rome, the President declared, was a prospect of such great importance to the Germans that Hitler and his generals put up "a desperate, fanatical last cost of men and materials and with great assertion by their commanding eastern line and to their western front."

"So thanks are due to them if Rome was spared the devastation which the Germans wreaked on Naples and other Italian cities," he continued. "The Allied armies have maneuvered so skillfully that the Nazis could only have stayed long enough to damage Rome at the risk of losing their armies."

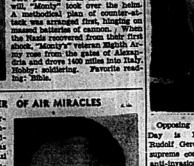
"It will be scenes of deep satisfaction," he also said, "that the freedom of the Pope and of Vatican City is assured by the armies of the United Nations."

The President said that in Italy the Allied troops had found starvation, malnutrition, disease, a deteriorating education and lowered public health—all by-products of Fascist misrule" but "we have already begun to save the lives of the men, women and children of Rome."

Praises Canadians

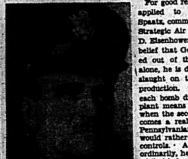
Mr. Roosevelt took occasion to pay tribute to the "gallant Canadians and other troops of the Empire and Allied countries who fought with the main British and Canadian armies in the Italian campaign. Of these he said:

"The American and British armies—who bore the burdens of battle—fought at their sides our own North American neighbors, the gallant Canadians.



"The fighting New Zealanders from the far South Pacific, the courageous French and the men from Oceana, the South Africans, the Poles and the Nazi Indians—all have fought with all the bloody approaches to Rome."

"MONTY" WRECKER OF NAZI REPUTATIONS



If any man carries on his person a universally recognized personal trademark, it's General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British ground forces in the invasion of Western Europe. Ordinarily a careless dresser, his familiar bedecked black beret is the sign of a showman—and his men love him for it. During the early days of the war in Africa, when Field Marshal Rommel's panzer divisions were pushing back the British at will, "Monty" took over the helm. A masterful man of command, he took was arranged first, hinging on Rommel's defeat at El Alamein. When the Nazis recovered from their first shock, "Monty's" veteran Eighth Army rose from the gates of Alamein to Tripoli and Cross 1400 miles into Italy. Monty: soldering. Favorite reading: Bible.

TEDDER PRODUCER OF AIR MIRACLES

The war has hit close to Sir Arthur Tedder, deputy commander-in-chief under Eisenhower. His eldest son, an R.A.F. fighter pilot, was killed when he rose to meet Nazi planes bombing London. An inspiring worker, the air marshal's men proudly refer to him as "the Chief"—and deservedly, for the airwise Scot can aptly be called the man who made the R.A.F. what it is today. After the twin disasters of Greece and Crete —two blows that almost proved fatal—he took over and remodelled the British East Air Command, developed it into one of the world's greatest striking powers. His avocation: painting, with water colors. Characteristics of Air Marshal Tedder: quietness, piercing eyes and a sharp humor.

ALLIES SUCCESSFUL "SPAATZWAFFE"

For good reason is the title above applied to Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaats, commander of all American Strategic Air Forces under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. An advocate of the belief that Germany can be knocked out of the war by air power alone, he is directing the aerial onslaught on the Reich's sources of production. It is his belief that each bomb dropped on a Nazi war plant means many less boys killed when the second front invasion" comes a month. The 55-year-old Pennsylvanian hates desk work; would rather be handling a plane's controls. A heavy coffee drinker, ordinarily, he consumes quarts of it while his boys are on a mission over enemy territory. He is a great worker. He is shy and blunt of speech and, say friends, not too hard to beat at poker.

SYNTHETIC RUBBER HERE TO STAY

Toronto, June 8, (CP)—Dr. Gustav Egloff of Chicago, president of the American Institute of Chemists and director of research for the United States Oil Company (United), told Produtex, that a slight synthetic rubber "is here to stay and the average car will find the synthetic being employed in thousands of uses".

Hamilton, June 6. (CP) —Fred Smith, chairman of the Aviation Committee and head of a party of three Australian newspapermen including Cinder Sandes editor of the Wartime Information Board, arrived in Ottawa by air from Australia with us a picture of the remarkable war effort which Canada has achieved".

EXPERIENCE SNOWFALL

Dalhurst, N.B., June 8. (CP)—Gloucester County experienced a weekend snowfall ranging up to six inches on the higher stretches of the Nepiguit River, it was reported today. With forest fires extinguished, the storm further reduced the fire hazard in the county.

ANTI-INVASION CHIEF

Opposing Gen. Eisenhower on D-Day is Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, 68, supreme commander of Germany's anti-invasion forces in the West. Rundstedt is a veteran of the Polish, French and Russian fronts. He was a general staff officer during World War I

Prime Minister Gives Statement On The Invasion

Ottawa, June 8 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King rose at dawn today to prepare a brief statement on the invasion which he said might be the decisive phase of the war against Germany.

He said there was no indication as to how long this phase might be "but we have every reason for confidence in the ultimate outcome."

He warned that the fighting would be "bitter and costly" and said "We must be prepared for reverse as well as successes."

There was a noticeable stir in the big, drab Laurentian building which houses the Service Public Relations offices and some of the higher officials — not usually on duty late at night — were on the scene. They may have had an advance tip on the German radio as announcing that they may have been called in after the initial bulletin came in quoting the invasion.

Anyhow they refrained from any official comment. A call to Laurier House, home of the Prime Minister, brought the report that he had retired and could not be disturbed. However, when the official communique came through from Allied headquarters Mr. King was called and he prepared a statement for release to the press.

His statement follows:

"We have received official word that the invasion of Europe has begun and that Canadian troops are among the Allied forces landing this morning in France. Canada will be proud to learn that her troops are being supported by units from the Royal Canadian Navy and of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"Great liberating operations from the west may prove to be the decisive phase of the war against Nazi Germany.

"The fighting is certain to be bitter and costly. We must not expect early results. We should be prepared for local reverses as well as successes. So far as we may know this phase of the war may last, but we have every reason for confidence in the ultimate outcome.

"The hearts of all in Canada will be filled with silent prayer for the success of our own and Allied forces and for the speedy liberation of Europe."

King Of Italy Steps Out Of Public Life

Naples, June 8—(AP)—Italy's 76-year-old King Victor Emmanuel has made good his long-standing pledge on the liberation of Rome and stepped out of public life, turning over his royal prerogatives" to the 39-year-old son, Crown Prince Humbert.

The King took this action yesterday in a decree countersigned by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio which named Humbert "Lieutenant General" of the realm.

The Prince "will exercise all royal perogatives without exception," said the decree, which was signed by the King at Ravello, just outside Naples, and delivered to the council of ministers.

Through his action the monarch remains a King without power and constitutional head of the House of Savoy. In effect, Humbert becomes the Italian regent.

Italian political parties had been insistent since the Allied capture of Naples that the King step down and last April 12 the King declared his "irrevocable" decision to retire from public life "on the day on which Allied troops enter Rome."

Germans Propose Allies Make Rome An Open City

London, June 8—(CP)— Violent fighting raged northeast of Rome this morning German High Command said in a broadcast communique, after Adolf Hitler in two headquarters announcements had acknowledged the fall of the capital despite a last-minute effort to declare it an open city.

United States tank formations pushed into the centre of Rome yesterday despite the Nazis' make it an open city, the bulletin said, and "bitter street fighting developed which was still continuing in the hours of the evening."

The communique added that the German command will "make every effort to reduce the fighting in and around Rome to the smallest possible scope necessary for the protection of the bulk of German troops to the northern bank of the river."

Allied diplomatic envoys to the Holy see now have returned to their old apartments in Rome in the wake of the Allied occupation, another German broadcast said.

Berlin declared all public amusement places in Italian Province of Rome, Italy, still under German control, will be closed for three days "as a mark of mourning" all in these hours and days harden their hearts and sharpen their arms for their liberation."

The commanders of a division of Italians in Germany for training were said to have sent Mussolini a message deploring the "tragic consequences of treason," and declaring the enemies of retaliation and victory is not far."

German propagandists, noting that the Allies hailed the capture of Rome as a great victory, sought to minimize the event by declaring the city had no economic, strategic or political value except as a "tourist centre."

Says Mr. Gold Seal

"I'm in there punching for Morale and Victory!"

"My physique may not be particularly impressive but in my own sphere of action I'm rated tops with both dealer and public who know me as the Congoleum Trade Mark. I've always stood for floor covering quality and value. Factors far more important today than ever, now that replacements are hard to come by. The care that has always gone into the making of the goods I identify, is likewise exercised as we do our modest bit for morale and victory by providing that touch of colorful brightness — fine, easy-to-clean, budget-saving Congoleum Floors that make any home a happier place to live in. And on top of that, we at Congoleum are happy that our complete machine-shop facilities have been devoted to specialized war production ever since the outbreak of hostilities."

HOW TO HELP
MR. GOLD SEAL MAKE GOOD

You can get added wear out of your Congoleum floors with very little effort. Brush and help remove particles of dirt and grit before they scratch the surface of your floor. Wash them as often as necessary. Keep the floor underneath in smooth condition free from cracks. If it's a rug, move it every few months to "spread" the traffic. Yes, a little care will pay big dividends.

PROTECT THEIR CANADA

Our boys overseas have a pretty clear picture of the kind of country they want to come back to; and it certainly isn't a country ravaged by inflation! MARRIAGE NOTICE

WILSON-WHALEN—The marriage took place in Toronto on Saturday, June 3, of Lac. Bob Wilson, son of Mrs. Wilson and the late Mr. Wilson, Scott, Belleville, to Dorothy Whalen, daughter of Mrs. Fraser Aylesworth of Maida, formerly of Bloomfield, Ont. Lac. Wilson has just two weeks to spend with his wife and family before he will be posted overseas.

Mrs. Bert Sprague, of Chatham, Ont., is visiting her sister, Mrs. T. Chesley.

Misses Dorothy Mills and Evelyn Dennis visited in Ottawa, over the week-end, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Mills.

Marion Page and Pte. Lt. A. A. Vanderwater, both stationed in Sicily with the armed forces, were married on May 11th., according to word submitted by Mrs. J. W. Chaffee, R.R. 1, Belleville.

Mrs. Eugene Kerr, Alexander St., received roses and snapdragons from her son-in-law, Lt. S. Martin, now serving with the armed forces in Italy.

Arthur Fudge, R.C.N.V.R., has returned to the East Coast after three weeks' leave, spent with his mother at his wife, Mrs. Fudge is now progressing favorably.

A pantry shower was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Baker, recently in honor of Mrs. Arnold Wessels (nee Gladys Pomeroy), bride of the month. Cards and games were enjoyed after which the bride was the recipient of many pretty gifts. The hostess served a delightful lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Wilbur, (nee Rose Whalen), of Tweed, returned to this city, from their honeymoon spent at Sommerville.

Mrs. Horace Casey was hostess at a delightfully arranged shower recently in honor of Miss Ehead Walker, bride-to-be. During the afternoon, a bride's book was completed, after which a well laden basket of red and white kitchenware was presented by Miss Joy Cleland and Miss Marjorie McPherson. The bride-elect very graciously thanked her friends for the many lovely gifts. A delightful lunch was served. Presiding at a most attractive tea table were Mrs. Harry Walker and Mrs. R. Frank Easton, aunts of the bride.

The first in a series of summer picnic trips was held at Massasaga Point on Saturday afternoon by the Green Group of the Red Triangle Hostess Club under the leadership of Miss Jean Henry and Helen Symons. Approximately forty-four young people including girls of the group and airmen from district stations, all rode out to the picnic grounds in a large truck. Some time was spent swimming, races took in some rousing games of ball, while the remainder just contented themselves sitting around and enjoying the loveliness of a June day. After lunch had been served by a number of girls, sides were chosen and a nine inning game of softball "topped off" a perfect day.

Honoring her small daughter, Sheila Nathan, who was celebrating her sixth birthday on Monday, Mrs. Alec. Nathan, 24 Church St., had arranged for her a jolly party beginning at five o'clock. Twelve small girl friends of Sheila's brought with them their many good wishes to her. A lunch with a birthday cake and all the fine trimmings was served by the hostess. A number of games were played and all voted a great deal of fun for everyone. The proud young celebrant was the recipient of many lovely presents from her many chums.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Armitage, of Belleville, are spending a few days at the home of Mrs. George Burgess, in Whitby. Mr. Armitage was a florist in Whitby for many years leaving there about four years ago. He has been in charge of educational equipment at No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville.

Mr. Joseph Hann, who has been head janitor at the Belleville Collegiate Institute for the past few years, left on Sunday for Islington, Ont., where he will be janitor of a school. Prior to his leaving on Wednesday afternoon the staff of the Belleville Collegiate presented him with a handsome wallet containing stand and a letter of appreciation for his faithful services during his employ here.

WEDDINGS

ARMSTRONG—CRANE

A quiet, but charming June wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at Bridge Street United Church at 2.15 o'clock, when Miss Frances Margaret Crane became bride in marriage to Mr. Clarence Edward Armstrong, son of Mrs. Walter Armstrong, and the late Mr. Armstrong, all of this city. In the absence of the Rev. Dr. James Speight, the Rev. L. W. Scott, the officiating clergyman.

Attendants for the bridal couple were Miss Jean Van Allen of Toronto, and Mr. Arnold Armstrong, brother of the bridegroom.

For the occasion, the bride selected a picturesque wedding trip in Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

ORSER—STEWART

Bawden.—A very pretty Summer wedding was solemnized at the Bridge United Church parsonage on Friday afternoon, June second, at four o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. T. F. Townsend in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and friends, when Miss Clare Irene Stewart, Toronto, daughter of Mrs. Stewart, Bawdent and the late Mrs. Stewart, Skrin, Doncaster, S. Yorkshire, became the bride of John Wesley Orser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Orser, Toronto.

The bride looked charming in a powder blue suit with accessories worn by her friend, Miss Irene Filmer, of Toronto, wearing a gown of turquoise blue. Mr. Eric Bawden assisted by his brother, Mr. Angus Orser.

Following the ceremony, a large reception was held at the home of the bride's father. The happy couple left on a wedding trip to Muskoka, the visit relatives.

STEWART—KLEINSTEUBER

The Rev. L. W. Scott solemnized the wedding ceremony in Bridge Street United Church parsonage, on Monday afternoon, June 5, at three o'clock, when Miss Elizabeth Kleinsteuber, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. Herman Kleinsteuber, of Picton, became the bride of Lac. Robert Howard Stewart, R.C.A.F., Moncton View, son of Mrs. Stewart and the late James Rupert Stewart, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length gown in a two-piece creation of Romance of blue, a threaded silver lace. The small calot type dusted with white flowers and accented with a shoulder length veil, white accessories and corsage of Briarcliff roses and forget-me-nots.

The sister of the bride, Mrs. Marjorie Lemon, as her attendant, was attired in a two-piece gold ensemble complimented with white accessories and corsage of Talisman roses and maize orchids.

LAC. Culver Sadler, R.C.A.F., Mountain View, acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Marjorie Lemon, when a buffet luncheon was served.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and other western points, the bride donned a canary yellow woolen suit and white accessories.

After the honeymoon, the bridal couple will take up residence in Belleville.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket, while bridesmaid, a bracelet, and to the groomsman a gold tie pin and clip.

TUMMON—WALKER

The home of the bride's parents was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, June third, at three o'clock, when the Rev. J. R. Trumpour officiated at the marriage ceremony of Miss Mary Walker, 3rd. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker, 3rd of Thurlow, to Douglas Leslie Tummon, son of Mr. Harry Tummon and the late Mrs. Tummon, of Glen's Hill.

Presiding at the console of the organ was Mrs. Horace Casey, who played softly throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register. Mrs. Milton Grills, sister of the bride, sang, "I Love You Truly."

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, the bride was a radiant picture in her long wedding gown of white sheer and lace. Her fingertip veil of tulle flowing from a pearl studded crown, her bridal bouquet consisted of white roses and sweetheart roses. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Miss Jean Walker, sister of the bride's bridesmaid, was wearing a floor length gown of flamy pink sheer and lace, with matching pink accessories. Little Miss Sheila Hamilton, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and looked quite charming in a floor length gown of rose patrica.

Mr. Gerald Tummon, brother of the groom, attended his brother.

For the occasion, the bride's mother received the guests in a blue flowered silk dress, gown with white accessories and the aunt of the groom assisted her also wearing flowered silk, navy blue with white yellow rose. The servitors for the occasion were Mrs. Harold Hamilton, Mrs. Russell Hill and Misses Annie Clark, Gertrude Hamilton and Clara Clark.

Following a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara and Buffalo, the bride and groom will take up residence at the groom's home, Glen's Hill.

For travelling, the bride selected an ashes-of-rose tailored suit and accented with yellow blouse and brown accessories.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN Health.

Acute Appendicitis

It is not wise to allow appendicitis to run its course without operation. There is practically no danger if the operation is done early and if it is done when the inflammation has subsided.

Acute appendicitis may occur in people of all ages. It frequently affects the very young and the very old. In the former case a diagnosis of the condition may be difficult.

The symptoms of appendicitis are not distinctive enough to make the diagnosis always easy. However, because of the frequency with which this condition occurs, the possibility of appendicitis should be remembered whenever a person has pain in the abdomen. Pain is usually the first symptom of this disease. It begins as a colicky, cramp-like pain in the vicinity of the stomach and the navel, and soon shifts to the right lower part of the abdomen, where it becomes an aching sensation. Together with the pain at the beginning of the attack, there is a feeling of fullness or pressure in the large intestine so that the patient has the feeling that moving the bowels would relieve the pain. This will perhaps account for the frequency with which those with appendicitis take a laxative. Of course, the taking of a laxative is dangerous, since the excessive movements of the bowel which it produces may lead to a rupture of the appendix.

In about one-fourth of the patients, this typical kind of pain is not present. If the appendix is not stretched, the pain in the upper part of the abdomen does not occur. Later on in the disease the pain, in some cases, may be in the middle of the abdomen or on either side of the lower part of the abdomen.

Sometimes the appendix is located behind the cecum, which is the first part of the large intestine, and in such cases the pain may be on the outer part of the flank or, at times, in the right upper part of the abdomen. In children the pain may occasionally be on the left side of the abdomen.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax,

My fiance has just broken our engagement. Should I return the engagement ring?

Yes, dear girl, return the engagement ring to the young man, and promptly. For I assure you you will be much happier if you remove from your life at once any quarrel and most unpleasant task of engagement ring, that unhappily reminds you of the engagement that no longer exists. And this is particularly true in the circumstance when the man breaks the engagement.

Dear Mr. Beeckman,

I have just been elected president of a club for the coming year. I feel somewhat elated at it. Will you please tell me what is expected of me? How should I take the chair, how should I thank the retiring president, how should I conduct a meeting, and how should I make out various reports? I am so eager to do everything correctly, and I shall be so grateful if you will advise me. (There are no meetings in July and August.)

S. P.

Since you have of course been a member of the club, you will have a knowledge of the parliamentary procedure adopted by the club. Small clubs observe more the simplest of rules, but you must be familiar with these, and here the retiring president will be of great help.

In these months before your September meeting, you should give careful study to the needs of your group and build a workable plan for the coming season. Then I suggest that two or three weeks before the opening of the club year you invite in person or by letter to your house the club officers and the committee chairmen, to confer informally the program and plans for the coming winter. When you assemble the group, remember to include yourself as an ex officio member, so you can work with them with greater understanding, and also include as an ex officio member the retiring president . . . this is a usual courtesy to her, and naturally her experience will be of great value.)

As a general guide for your first meeting, here's the usual simple order of business: Call to order by president; Minutes of the previous meeting read by the secretary and approved by the meeting; Roll call; Reports of officers and committees (the proper order is president, secretary, treasurer, chairmen of standing committees, chairmen of special committees); Unfinished business; New business; Adjournment; Program or social hour.

At your first meeting, you make the annual address of the incoming president, expressing your appreciation of the club's confidence in you and your intention to serve to the best of your ability. Then you should "open the floor" to the retiring president, comment enthusiastically on the fine work she has done and on the ideal life has established for you to try to follow. From this gracious beginning proceed to outline your plans and hopes for the coming months.

Return the Ring

Dear Miss Beeckman,

My fiance has just broken our engagement. Should I return the engagement ring?

Yes, dear girl, return the engagement ring to the young man, and promptly. For I assure you you will be much happier if you remove from your life at once any quarrel and most unpleasant task of engagement ring, that unhappily reminds you of the engagement that no longer exists. And this is particularly true in the circumstance when the man breaks the engagement.

BAD SMOKING HABITS

'Monty' Confident, Thinks Huns Can't Go On Much Longer

At Headquarters of Gen. Montgomery, June 6 — (CP—Reuters)— Gen. Montgomery, commander of all land forces in the Allied invasion, in an invasion eve talk to more than 100 British, American and Dominions' correspondents attached to his command, said:—

"I personally have absolute and complete confidence in the outcome.

"We are a great Allied team—a terrific Allied team," Montgomery declared, "and the brigades of the British Empire and America go-ing to do battle together. I don't think any other two nations could have done it."

"I don't know when the war is going to end, but I don't believe the Germans can go on much longer with this business.

"The German soldier is terribly good, but I don't think the German general is as good as he used to be. He has been on the defensive a very long time and I believe it must affect his mentality."

MADOC

Mission Band Holds Meeting

Madoc — St. Peter's Mission Band and W.M.S. held its closing meeting of the season in the school room on the evening of June 1st. The address of welcome was given by Betty Yearwood. Two solos were rendered by a favorite little drill song entitled, "There Were Twelve Disciples," brought out the vocal ability of the band. Carol Symon delighted all her hearers with a recitation entitled "The Call of South America." The highlight of the program was the candle drill which consisted of four Bible verses, each verse ending en-titled "The Light of the World is Jesus," and "Make Jesus Known." The candles used in this drill were previously by the leaders. A missionary story, "A Visit Through Guiana" was read by Jean Yearwood who proved by this audience that great effort had preceded the presentation.

Preceding the offering, the minister led in prayer and soft music was rendered by Mrs. Ellis Symon. The offering was received by Mrs. Carol Symon and James Larsen were the ushers. The exhibit of the year's work was in the form of needlework and treatments were served and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

Presentations Are Made.

At the opening exercises of Madoc High School on Monday morning, Miss Hamilton, the principal made mention of the fact that the only two of the staff, Miss Ross and Miss M. Smith were leaving Madoc High School. She expressed regret at the removal of the teachers and on behalf of the pupils presented Miss Ross and students wished for them a most successful future in their work. Miss Garfield was presented with a pen and pencil set and Miss M. Smith with china cups and saucers. Mr. Hamilton replied to Miss Yeomans Collegiate and Miss Smith to Strathroy Collegiate.

Euchre and Dance.

The War Services Committee of Madoc Women's Institute held a very successful card party and dance in the Memorial Hall on Monday evening. Bridge and euchre were played until eleven o'clock. Refreshments were served and the Melody Makers Orchestra provided music for dancing during the remainder of the evening. The proceeds were very gratifying and will be used for the Madoc boys and girls overseas.

11,000 AIRCRAFT OF ALL TYPES USED IN INVASION

Fly Through Rolling Ocean of Clouds 5,000 Feet Thick

LITTLE RESISTANCE

By W. W. HERCHER
(Associated Press Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP)—Through a rolling ocean of clouds 5,000 feet thick Allied air forces threw 11,000 aircraft of every type into the grand invasion of Europe today, bombing and strafing miles of Normandy beaches and flying inland to break the enemy's communications.

Two thirds stood on the air operations launched in support of the landings in northern France. The first was the mass of airplanes the Allies were able to put into the air in weather described as "just fair."

The other was the absence of German resistance.

Three raids started after the R.A.F. bomber command sent more than 1,000 of the biggest British and Canadian planes roaring across the channel last night and early today in the heaviest aerial attack ever aimed at German batteries along the French coast.

Two Attacks Executed.

Two attacks were executed between 11:30 p.m. and sunrise, each with 100 or more of the heavy bombers.

Other British aircraft "attacked the coastal defenses, railroads and city of Caen shortly without loss.

The enormous Allied bombardment fell on the Normandy landing beaches as the first flights of the so-ordinated assault began.

There was a solid cloud cover over some of the R.A.F. coastal targets during the night, but the R.A.F. answered with the help of the British well-trained pathfinder force.

The R.A.F. began to attack the enemy's defenses at dusk, and by 9, in undertaking one of its most difficult operations, they were said were small and well protected. They had to be hit at night.

D-Day Chronology

(By The Associated Press.)

12:37 A.M. (B.D.T.) German Agency Trabacchi Radio—Nazi Ally Allied invasion has begun.

1:00 A.M. Stockholm D.N.B. Agency broadcasts Le Havre being bombarded when they placed the first bulletins on the board. The crowd grew as Allied landings drew forth little comment as they read the casualty passersby. Interest quickened as the morning grew on and a big first import of the news were off from Supreme Allied headquarters after a casual glance at the news.

"The answer to what appeared to be a backslapping attitude on the part of the man on the street is the fact that the people know the invasion news came with early morning radio broadcasts. It was stated by some that the news was aired shortly after midnight, a.m. and the "grapevine" lost little time going to "press." This applied also to the later bulletins issued on their daily and listened to the news broadcasts and newspaper extras as they skirmed the biggest newsbreak of the year.

Telephone calls to the editorial rooms of the dailies were conspicuous by their numerical absence. True a few people, who perhaps thought they had missed the initial ringing of the bells, were rung out the news of the coming of D-Day.

Bells Bring News.

The bells, incidentally, brought the first news of invasion to late sleepers. Startled out of bed, they continued for fifteen minutes, then stopped to resume again for the half hour.

Particularly during the day they sounded the news, reminding people of the D-Day and bringing the municipal and ministerial requests for citizens to attend church.

However, the solemn atmosphere, devoid as it was of partly hysterical demonstrations, was not devoid of some unconscious humor. One group of men hastened outside a war plant, calmly inquired if it was a public holiday for the invasion, then as calmly proceeded to work when they were informed that such was not the case.

Another group of men apparently did not read the papers or listen to the radio broadcasts during the hotel employee, "What's all the excitement about?" The reply was this is that there was no visible excitement.

Officials in Action.

Mayor Rollins and other civic officials were quickly into action upon receipt of the news. His Worship issued a call to the members of the Belleville Ministerial Association, pastors of the city and the churches and at the first meeting in the evening at the Conotoph on Station Street. Form of service distribution was timed for 10:30 o'clock. Meanwhile he telephoned yesterday afternoon to the manager of the Capitol Theatre to be held in Bridge Street Church. Other services were held in various churches of the city with religious exercises being conducted by members of the Ministerial Association and in some instances laymen officiating in the services. In fact Mayor Rollins personally telephoned the pastor held in connection with the Canadian National Railways employees.

Stores Closed.

At the day wore on, and the spot announcements appeared, the action adopted itself insofar as the city was concerned, in accordance with the now famous "Anything Goes."

At that, some of the more ingenious of the people who could not wait for the completion of a news flash, were the authors of a few rumors. One gentleman was heard to inform his friend that Hitler had been captured, which read, Paris by night. All, about what they were there already.

Stores Are Closed.

Business wheels of the city paused today for two hours to allow the employees to attend the memorable Invasion Day by quiet meditation in the churches of the various religious services. The Kiwanis Club luncheon was accordingly dispensed with the usual speaker and all attended the Armouries in a body.

At the Mayor's request that all other phases of city life pause for the two hours, including entertainment, Allied landings, this was observed by the closing of theatres due to lack of time, the request was not generally circulated in order that a general observance could be had.

Special Intercession Services Held at Armouries, Conotaph And Industrial Plants in the City

There was a definite sincerity of purpose in the hushed words and voices of representative crowds of citizens who attended the special intercession services held at the Armouries and the Memorial Cenotaph at 12.45 today.

The service as laid down as a special form provided by the municipality of the City of Belleville was followed closely by the hundreds of mothers, wives, sweethearts and families of members of the armed services as well as many others.

At the Armouries, hundreds of people from all walks of life gathered on the lawns in the open. The services were conducted by the Rev. C. O. Wright, R. O. Reaman, Bill Dills and Mayor Harry Rollins. Music was provided by the band composed of members of the Canadian Army and Belleville Municipal Bands.

School children raised their voices with the words and baritones of men singers and the sopranos and contralto of women in the hymn hymn "O God Our Help in Ages Past." Reading Psalms and prayer-fessional men were there.

The Kiwanis Club and its entire membership, industry, the offices, factories and shops were represented in the service that took on a deeply expressive as well as simply offered. Lining the streets of Bridge and Pinnacle Street were numbers of automobiles, whose occupants left the service from the seated comfort of the automobiles.

The Rev. H. O. Eastman read the scripture followed by prayer by the Rev. Gr. O. Wright. The Rev. R. Dills pronounced the benediction and the entire assemblage joined in the Lord's prayer and the National Anthem.

The Conotaph.

There was a crowd of approximately 300 mothers, wives and sweethearts of soldiers who may be taking part in the Allied invasion of the French coast, together with people of the First Street School and workers in the vicinity. Rev. G. C. Kerr-Wilson with Major William Marsh of the Salvation Army, conducted the service at the Conotoph on Station Street. There was no deviation from the form of service as printed on circulars distributed through the mails.

A mixed band of Salvation Army and Belleville Municipal Band musicians played the musical accompaniment for the spirited singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "O God Our Help" for the National Anthem, with the scripture being read by Major Marsh and prayers by Rev. Hornsby.

A skillful of the service in the presence of the 1st and 4th Belleville Boy Scouts troops under Scoutmaster Lloyd Chatwell. The Cubs and Scouts formed up at the corner of Front and Victoria United Church and marched to the Conotoph. The Cubs left the service and returned by way of Station and Front Street.

At one o'clock members of the Ministerial Association visited a number of industrial plants of the city where special services were held. Among the plants visited were included Belleville Bargent, Corbin Arms and Stove Company, Canadian Corporation, Stephens - Adamson Mfg. Co., The Reliance Industries (Universal Moulded Products, Consolidated Electric Limited, Johnson Co., the Deacon Brass, the Bell Shirt Co., and the J. J. Turner. Each was announced at the conclusion of the services that would be held in the various churches of the city at eight o'clock tonight.

News Break of History Taken By City Residents in Their Stride

Perhaps the "war of nerves" directed against the German radio and newspaper reports of the invasion during the past few months, has something to do with it. Perhaps it was the tenseness built up by weeks of anticipation, of hazarding a guess as to when the D-Day would come, or perhaps it was just the adaptability of war nerves keyed to almost anything. Whatever it was very evident this morning, at least, that the man in the street took the outstanding newsbreak of history in his stride.

Bulletin board writers of the Ontario Intelligencer and Daily Bulletin from every-anxious readers when they placed the first bulletins on the board. The crowd grew as Allied landings drew forth little comment as they read the casualty passersby. 2 RCN Flotillas Of Landing-Craft Carry Canadians

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Forces in France, June 5—(CP-Cables)—Two landing-craft flotillas of the Royal Canadian Navy carried a portion of the Canadian assault troops to France and put them down on the beaches in the first wave of attack.

A reserve formation which went in on the heels of the assault waves was taken to France entirely by Canadian craft, and crews, and other follow-up troops were also carried by R. C. N. craft.

The biggest task ever undertaken by the R. C. N. landing-craft flotillas, the craft they used were what is officially designated as Landing Craft Infantry.

They are large, about 200 feet long, and look like a miniature destroyer. They have a speed of 15 knots. They nose upon the beach and land large numbers of soldiers with each load.

Around the sharp bow the landing gear is fitted with a ramp.

In addition to the LCI large, a Royal Canadian Navy Landing Ship Infantry, the largest craft of about 10,000 tons, also shared in this huge operation.

The men from several miles of the coast of France and then the actual landing was accomplished. Each craft were lowered from her and carried the infantry in the rest of the way.

Three Applications For Naturalization Are Recommended

German Opposition In all Quarters Less Than Expected by Allies

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP)—German opposition in all quarters was less than expected, it was learned at headquarters tonight, and an optimistic tone was evident.

It was disclosed that Allied naval losses had been very small."

Warships moved close in to the French shore and with the help of the air forces virtually silenced the coastal guns at the landing beaches.

German coastal gunfire was desultory.

In general, Allied losses have been small, it was reported.

Between midnight last night and 9 a.m. today Allied aircraft flew 7,500 sorties and dropped 10,000 tons of bombs on attacked areas in Normandy.

Losses of aircraft carrying airborne troops were extremely small although the air-borne attack was on a very large scale, it was said.

In the face of the powerful Allied attack, the German air force flew only 50 sorties up to about noon. Allied airmen warned that a powerful reaction by the German air force was expected soon.

A report of the day by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering was cited in which the air force chief was quoted as having declared "Germany must be beaten off even if few Luftwaffe perishes."

Magnitude of Invasion Fleet Unbelievable Says Ross Munro

(Editor's note: The following story was written at the Allied fleet prepared to sail for France, bearing Allied invasion armies to launch the assault on Western Europe.

By ROSS MUNRO
CP War Correspondent

With Allied Forces about to sail for France, June 5 — (Delayed)—(CP)—The largest armada of seagoing force in history is massed in ports all over the United Kingdom in the second-front attack that will end to establish an Allied bridgehead in France.

I have been with the force for days and the magnitude of this fleet is unbelievable. The ships stretch for miles in a spectacle colossal that at the Allied leaders.

There are scores of ships of all sizes including scores of infantry landing craft, hundreds of tenders and flotillas of smaller landing craft loaded with assault infantry, guns and tanks and the equipment for a big invasion.

Our fleet is a huge floating city of men, guns and power.

The spearhead force is lying at sea and all is in readiness for the assault. Nothing has been forgotten — from guns to propaganda — in this most carefully-prepared expedition ever to sail from an Allied port.

Nearly a year of training has gone into the preparation of the land, air and navy formations. The planning has been under way for more than two years.

An Allied officer gave a preliminary briefing to three war correspondents. He took a ruler and put it on the coast of France, showed us the target, and told us the day of the attack and the time of H-Hour.

We listened to his words and listened to details about the operation. We were surprised to learn the actual target.

The first reaction was a surge of relief. The tension of months of waiting passed. We knew the great secret now and it looked like a certain good landing plan.

Until then were some unexpected obstacles and the Germans had some terrific surprises. It seemed to me in that preliminary briefing that we stood a good chance of getting into the continent with the coast defences and win the first bridgehead.

Our air strength is a mighty weapon in support of the landing forces.

But still there is going to be heavy fighting—and casualties. The Allied force is going to be hard along the beaches for months before we and the battle will flame and roar beyond Paris and Rouen.

as we prepare to sail.

Allied airborne forces are going to land by glider and parachute as infantry, artillery, engineers and other troops storm the beaches.

On the way to join my ship I went through one of the marshalling areas dubbed "sausage machine," where troops and vehicles were concentrated preparing to embark. For miles around were tented camps of fighting men with modern fighting weapons.

Only a year ago the Allied command could not have massed a fraction of the force now assembled in Britain.

Now the whole gigantic expedition is at the starting line.

The men are well-fed, well-fed and in magnificent shape as they moved off in endless convoys to the embarkation.

"Aboard our ship staff officers who had been briefing us were busy reading or playing cards. The long period of waiting and tension was over for them too. Everything stood or fell on the plan which now is finished.

You felt a great expectancy. Nobody showed fear. People began to eye on the sky and on the bare-mast and praise the weather would hold.

You thought of the news from Italy and Russia and envisioned a three-way pincers closing in on second-front Europe.

VICIOUS BATTLE RAGING

London, June 6 (C.P.-Reuters)—The Nazi-controlled Paris radio quoting "a last minute flash from the battlefield" announced tonight "a vicious battle is raging" north of Rouen between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces. These paratroops had landed behind the Atlantic wall defences.

POSTPONED 24 HOURS

Supreme Headquarters, June 6 (AP) — The Allied landings in France were postponed 24 hours due to bad weather it was learned today. They were originally scheduled for yesterday morning.

Canadian, British and U.S. Troops Land In N. France

In one defiant gesture, some of the German coast-defence guns opened a sporadic fire over the invading armada. Unconfirmed reports said Adolf Hitler was rushing to France to try his intuition against the Allied operation. Presumably Field Marshals Karl Gerd Von Rundstedt and Erwin Rommel were directing the defences from their headquarters in France.

German accounts through Sweden admitted that steady streams of Allied troops were continuing to land, particularly in the vicinity of Arromanches, about midway between Le Havre and Barfleur, and that tanks were ashore at several places. They said there was especially bitter fighting at the mouths of the Orne and Vire Rivers.

CAEN AND BARFLEUR SCENES OF ACTION

The airborne troops' principal scenes of operations were placed by the Germans at Caen and Barfleur. The Germans said the Americans 82nd. and 101st. Parachute Divisions had landed on the Normandy Peninsula, along with the American 29th. and 90th. Infantry Divisions. They said the British 1st. and 6th. Airborne Divisions were operating in the Seine Bay area. The Germans complained that at some points Allied parachutists were dropped, making contact.

The tenor of their accounts lent support to Prime Minister Churchill's assertion that "there already are hopes that actual tactical surprise has been attained" and that "we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting."

Ottawa, June 6 (CP) — Text of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's broadcast follows:

At half past three o'clock this morning the government received official word that the invasion of Western Europe had begun. Word was also received that Canadian troops were among the Allied forces who landed this morning on the northern coast of France.

If the Germans were correct about the locations, the Allied plan apparently was to seize the Cherboug Peninsula and make Normandy the initial beachhead for a drive up the Seine Valley to Paris.

The German radio began broadcasting a constant stream of invasion flashes almost as soon as the first troops landed, and continued with extensive reports of gigantic naval and air bombardments that covered the coast.

FLASH AT 3.32 A.M.

Allied headquarters, however, kept silent until 9.32 a.m. B.S.T. (3.32 a.m. E.D.T.) when the following communique was issued:

"Under the command of General Eisenhower, Allied naval forces supported by strong air forces began landing Allied armies this morning on the northern coast of France.

A high officer explained that General Eisenhower had kept resolutely silent until he was absolutely certain the landings had "taken hold."

It was disclosed that a number of unannounced feints had taken place in the pre-invasion period, so the Germans would not know when the real blow was coming.

CLIMAXES HEAVY BOMBARDMENT

It came this morning as the climax of 96 hours of constant heavy air bombardment which reached a crescendo at H-Hour.

British and United States warships including battleships, hurled shells into the coastal defences which the Germans have been building for four years. The Germans acknowledges that this fire was tremendous and that it had set the whole Bay of the Seine area afire.

The parachutists and glidermen went in after a personal farewell from Eisenhower. The Germans said they landed at Caen and made deep penetrations. Many points, with at least four British parachute divisions employed besides Americans and Canadians.

Great fleilitas of minesweepers led the way to the beaches for the Allied ground troops, and the sweeping operation alone was described by Shaef as "the largest in history."

GERMANS REACT SLOWLY

The German air force reacted very slowly, although a high Allied officer said it had probably 1,750 fighters and 500 bombers it had been training for the operation.

The German navy was represented only by a few destroyers and E-boats.

The Channel was rough and there was a shower of rain at dawn. At Supreme Headquarters it was stated the condition of the sea had caused some great anxiety, but that the troops had gone ashore, even though many were seasick.

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that the parachute and glider men had made successful massed airborne landings. He said 4,000 ships and thousands of smaller landing craft made the land forces in.

11,000 AIRCRAFT USED

The Allies have about 11,000 first-line aircraft which they can draw upon as needed, he said.

"The landings on the beaches are proceeding at various points at the present time," Mr. Churchill said. "The fire of shore batteries has been largely silenced . . . obstacles which were constructed in the sea have not proved so difficult as was apprehended."

Mr. Churchill called the operation "undoubtedly the most complicated and difficult which has ever occurred."

Swedish correspondents reported from Germany that the Allies had landed at twelve points between the Orne and Vire Rivers with the central assault directed at Caen, 10 miles inland and at the base of the Cherboug Peninsula. The Germans themselves called Caen the "centre of gravity" of the attack.

The German radio called it "a grand-style operation" both in area and numbers of troops and admitted Normandy had been penetrated by the drive inland to a great depth.

There was no confirmation from Allied sources of a rumor that the Caen airfields already had been captured.

FURIOUS SEA BATTLE CLAIMED

While the Allies described German naval activity as negligible, the Germans claimed a furious sea battle had developed off the Seine between Nazi motor torpedo boats and the invasion fleet.

Low-hanging clouds and artificial fog with which the Allies blanketed the invasion coast made it difficult to obtain a clear picture of the great assault.

The Channel weather was somewhat unsettled, but the sun broke through occasionally, and the wind had moderated.

A high officer at Allied headquarters described the landings as actually the third phase of the battle to crush Hitler, the first having been the gigantic air assault and the second the offensive in Italy.

The air assault hit a new high today, with constant streams of bombers of every description dumping repeated loads on the chosen coastal area from which French patriots had been warned by Allied radios to withdraw at least to a depth of 35 kilometres (22 miles.)

HAVE HIGH HOPES

While the French thus were warned away from the immediate attack area, an Allied official at the headquarters declared, "we have high hopes of the underground in France which we have aided so long."

General Eisenhower's broadcast during the morning on announcement to the peoples of Western Europe, telling them of the landings and declaring, "all patriots, young and old, will have a part to play in the liberation."

He urged patriotic premature uprisings, however, saying, "be patient. Prepare. Wait until I give you the signal."

Eisenhower also issued an order of the day to his forces, telling them:

"You are about to embark on a great crusade. The eyes of the world are upon you and the hopes and prayers of all liberty-loving peoples go with you . . . Your task will not be easy, one. Your enemy is well-trained, well-equipped and battle-hardened. He will fight savagely . . .

"I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle. We will accept nothing less than full Victory."

Roughly three hours after the invasion started, Canadian fighter pilots reporting back to their station said "things seemed well organized on the beach," though there was "lots of shooting going on" at the beachhead."

One pilot said: "I've never seen so many ships in all my life."

AIR FILLED WITH FLASHES

The German radio filled the air with invasion flashes for three hours before the formal Allied announcement came at 7.32 a.m. G.M.T. (3.32 a.m. E.D.T.)

Front-line observations of the Cherboug peninsula by Allied parachute and glider troops in great strength.

The assault was supported by gigantic bombardments from Allied warships and planes, which the Germans admitted set the coastal areas ablaze. The fleet included several British and United States battleships.

A senior officer at supreme headquarters said rough water caused "awful anxiety" for the seaborne troops but that the landings were made successfully, although some soldiers were undoubtedly seasick.

Front reports said through heavy clouds periodically this morning after a daybreak shower. The wind had blown fairly hard during the night but moderated somewhat with the dawn. The weather outlook remained somewhat unsettled.

Supreme headquarters' first communique was this single sentence:

"Under the command of General Eisenhower, Allied naval forces supported by strong air forces began landing Allied armies this morning on the northern coast of France."

It was announced moments later that Britain's Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, hero of the 8th. Army victories in North Africa, Sicily and Italy, was in charge of the assault and the announcement added: "This army group includes British, Canadian and United States troops."

GEN. CRERAR LEADS CANADIANS

No other Allied commanders were announced immediately for the thousands of battle-trained troops but it was apparent that Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, who took over command of the Canadian army in Britain in succession to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton early this year, was leading his forces in the attack.

A dispatch from Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent with the Canadians, gave the text of Gen. Crerar's personal message to his troops "on the eve of embarkation" in which the general said: "As the hour approaches when we go forward to battle, I have complete confidence in our ability to meet the tests which lie ahead."

A senior officer at headquarters said the times of the landings varied to take advantage of the various tide stages for different beaches. Except for the airborne troops, the first landing times varied from 6 a.m. to 8.25 a.m. British double summer time (midnight to 2.25 a.m. E.D.T.)

Although it had been immediately announced that the grand assault had started, Eisenhower delayed his announcement in order to make absolutely certain the landings had taken hold before saying anything.

The Allied forces had been ready for days, but were awaiting the best moment from the weather standpoint.

"We have been months and years waiting for this," said a senior officer giving correspondents the story at headquarters.

ALLIES DEFINITELY CONTROL AIR

"Geography made it evident to the Germans as well as us that the shortest way to Europe was across the Channel.

"I don't know how much tactical surprise was achieved. It is too early to tell."

First reports from across the Channel, however, indicated the Allies definitely controlled the air over the scene of operations.

The Allied officer commented that landing against the fixed defences of Western Europe was a task quite different from that in the Mediterranean and sketched briefly the German defensive plan of underwater barriers and shore guns.

He said the Germans had possibly 1,750 fighter planes and 500 bombers to oppose the Allies.

If the landings were in the places listed by the Germans, the Allied aim apparently was to pinch off the Cherboug peninsula and the good ports at Cherboug and Le Havre, make Normandy their first main beachhead and drive up the Seine Valley to Paris.

TROOPS WISHED GODSPEED

Eisenhower himself wished Godspeed to the parachutists who were the first to land on the enemy-held soil of France.

For three hours previous to the Allied announcement the German radio had been pouring forth a series of flashes reporting that the Allies were landing between Le Havre and Cherboug along the south side of the Bay of the Seine and along the mouth of Normandy.

This would be across the Channel and almost due south of such British ports as Hastings, Brighton, Portsmouth and Bournemouth.

The Germans also said parachutists had descended into Normandy in great depth.

Allied soldiers leaped on to the shores which the Germans have spent nearly four years in fortifying, while Allied planes and ships hurled into those defences barrages which the Nazis admitted were terrific.

REINFORCEMENTS LANDED

The Germans announced also that American reinforcements had been landed by air and by sea, aided by thick fog, and that in some places dummy parachutists were dropped to confuse the defence.

French patriots previously had been warned by Allied radio broadcasts to get out of areas within 35 kilometres (22 miles) of the coast to escape the shock of battle and the gigantic aerial bombardment.

The Germans said the bombers ranged as far north as Dunkirk, the unhappy port from which the beaten British army escaped almost exactly four years ago.

All England resounded with the thunder of their coming and going.

An Associated Press correspondent flying over the French coast in a medium bomber reported seeing the fields inland strewn with hundreds of parachutes and silked with gliders, while great naval forces fired into the coastal fortifications.

EMBARKING ON GREAT CRUSADE

Eisenhower told his men they were "embarking on a great crusade toward which we have striven these many months" and warned them that they were facing a tough, well-prepared enemy.

He said that the "centre of gravity" of the fierce fighting was at Caen, 30 miles southwest of Le Havre and 65 miles southeast of Cherboug.

Caen is 10 miles inland from the sea, at the base of the 75-mile-wide Normandy peninsula.

Heavy fighting also was reported between Caen and Trouville.

The thousands of battle-trained British, American and Canadian troops hurled themselves at Hitler's western defences after months of preparation.

Huge troopship armadas slipped out of English ports in the darkness and sped toward Europe where four years ago almost to the day Britain brought back the last battle-worn defenders of Dunkirk.

The German radio gave the first reports of the invasion while correspondents were hurriedly summoned from bed to supreme press headquarters and locked in a press conference room until the communique was released several hours after the landings were made.

The great Allied armadas dwarfed anything yet seen on the seas.

Huge transport planes filled with paratroopers and pulling airborne troops in gliders roared over the German westwall to drop their cargoes in the rear.

PARATROOPERS WISHED GODSPEED

Just before taking off in the darkness the paratroopers were wished Godspeed by Eisenhower.

He was accompanied by several others of his command-ers and by Churchill, a man fair confident as he strode down the long lines of fighting men.

The forces thrown into operation were by far the greatest ever used in any amphibious operation. They had to be. An estimated 1,000,000 German troops waited in their fortifications for the great onslaught under crack Nazi Field Marshals Runstedt and Rommel.

Eisenhower asserted earlier this week that Hitler himself had a special train ready to rush to France to take over personal command as he did on the east front.

Despite these reports Allied military men expected Rommel to be the main tactician on German defence but on the Allied side were the team of Eisenhower and Montgomery—the men who chased Rommel from Africa.

During the 48 hours previous to landings RAF and American bomber fleets dropped a stupendous tonnage of bombs on the west wall's defences.

TURNED INTO MASS OF FLAMES

A canopy of Allied bombers and fighters turned the Todt fortification area on which Hitler had pinned his hopes into a jumping, jagged mass of flames.

The Allies did not hope to knock out everything from the air, but to cripple and hamper German troop movements.

This morning a shattering barrage such as reduced the defenders of the Mediterranean island of Pantelleria last summer was laid down by the combined air forces.

Added to this barrage was the thunder of naval warships off the coast behind the advancing naval craft.

Then the landing craft were ready to nose the beaches on which they were to land like the back of their hands. For months in British camps they had drilled down to the finest details for their task. They had been formed into combat teams, some of a dozen men, some of several thousand.

PERIOD OF PRAYER OBSERVED BY COURTS

Belleville courts observed a moment of silence and a prayer in observation of invasion or D-Day when silent prayers were requested for the success and safety of Allied troops, who invaded Europe today in the long awaited time when the beginning of the end of Hitler's suppressed countries brought light and hope to their people.

In the County Court His Honor Judge Bigelow called the court to order for a moment of silence and prayer while in the city police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, His Worship asked the court officials and spectators to rise and observe a moment of silent prayer. "It has been the expressed wish of the government that wherever possible prayers be offered for the safety and success of our fighting forces," explained Magistrate Lloyd in requesting his prayerful observance.

'The Hour of Your Liberation Approaches' Gen. Eisenhower Tells The Peoples of Western Europe

New York, June 6 —(AP)— The United States Office of War Information reported today that Supreme Commander Gen. Eisenhower was broadcast by Allied radios in London:—Text:

Peoples of Western Europe! A landing was made this morning on the coast of France by troops of the Allied expeditionary force. This landing is part of a concerted United Nations plan for the liberation of France, made in complete action with your great Russian allies.

Although the initial assault may not have been made in your own country, the hour of your liberation is approaching.

All patriots, men and women, young and old, have a part to play in the achievement of final victory. To maximize the resistance movements, whether led by national or outside leaders, I am issuing the instructions you have received." To patriotic men in the numerous unorganized resistance groups I say, "continue your passive resistance but do not jeopardize unduly your lives until I give you the signal to rise and strike the enemy." The day will come when I shall need your individual efforts. Until that day, I call on you for the hard task of discipline and restraint.

French Men and Women, Part.

Citizens of France! I am proud to have again under my command the gallant forces of France. Fighting beside their Allies, they will play a worthy part in the liberation of their homeland. Because the initial landings will be made on the soil of your country, I repeat to you with even greater emphasis my message to the peoples of other occupied countries in Western Europe. Follow the instructions you receive.

Remember that you are fighting for your liberty and for the honor of your children and your children's children. Do your duty with cold nerves, with stout hearts and with absolute confidence in the ultimate victory of our cause. Every act of destruction you perform will help to hasten the day of liberation. Every military secret you discover will be of inestimable value to the United Nations striking through the Continent.

Be calm, be resolute and disciplined. Keep your secrets and your patience. Do not act prematurely. Wait for the day when I shall call upon you for the general uprising which will be the signal for our last assault.

Until that day, every one of you will be acting under the orders of your own representatives, and the government under which you live.

Invasion Opening Phase.

In the long run of the final defeat of the enemy you may remember this day with confidence. Tragic though they be, they are part of the pattern of victory. Remember, we do all in my power to mitigate unnecessary loss. I know that I can on your steadfastness now, more than in the past. The heroic French people who have made their struggle against the Nazis an inspiration to all, and throughout the French Empire will be inspired by this inspiration to all of us.

This landing is but the opening phase of the battle in the Europe. Great battles lie ahead. We shall need unity and stand with us. Keep your staunch—our task will be hard—but together we shall achieve victory.

Gen. Crerar Confident Of Canadians' Ability To Meet All Tests

With the Canadian Invasion Forces, June 5—(CP Cable)—Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, C. B., the Canadian Army commander, sent this personal message to Canadian assault troops on the eve of embarkation for the invasion of continental Europe:—

"It is impossible for me to speak to each one of you, but by means of this message I want every officer, rank of the Canadian Army to know that I am confident as the hour approaches when we go forward into battle.

"I have complete confidence in our ability to meet the tests which lie ahead. We are splendidly trained and equipped. The quality of both the officers and the leadership is of the highest. As Canadians, we inherit military characteristics which make us difficult enemy in the last Great War. They will be still more feared before war terminates."

"Canadian formations in the assault landing will have a vital role to play. Plans, preparations, methods and technique which we employed are based on knowledge and experience, both in the last war and in the Canadian Dieppe. The contribution of Canadians must be measured and estimated. It will prove to be a most essential factor in forthcoming and final assault.

"We enter into this battle with full faith in the righteousness of our cause, with calm confidence in our ability and with determination to finish quickly and thoroughly this job we overseas to do.

"As in 1918, in Italy and Northwest Europe, we will be enemy again and again, until finally, at the time, and place Allied armies link together we will be met by the victorious comrades of the first Canadian corps."

GOVERNMENT HAS TWO OBJECTIVES FOR CONFERENCE

Finance Minister Ilsley Outlines Aims of Parley to House

DISCUSS PENSIONS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, June 6.—(CP)— Two of the objectives to be sought by the Federal government at the proposed Dominion-Provincial conference for which no date has yet been set now have been set forth.

In the House of Commons yesterday Finance Minister Ilsley gave them as:

1.—Agreement for complete transfer of jurisdiction over Old Age Pensions from the provinces to the Dominion to the end that a constitutory Pension scheme with more generous pensions at a lower age may be brought into being;

2.—A revision of the financial set-up of Canada involving possible shifts of sources of revenue as between the provinces and the Dominion.

"We have a fairly satisfactory agreement with regards taxation fields for the war period," said Mr. Ilsley, "but it expires at the end of the war and we shall have to get our school down eventually to the question as to what taxes may be imposed by what authority".

Mr. Ilsley spoke as the House ended a long and interrupted debate on Old Age Pensions under the item in the War Appropriation Bill which provides for the increase in the statutory pension authorized last year. Member after member pleaded for action to both increase the amount of pension and lower the eligible age which now stands at 70. They also voiced many protests against regulations under which the present pension system is administered.

That and other finance department items in the bill were approved as well as items under the Mines and Resources Department for completion and maintenance of the military road in British Columbia eastward from Prince Rupert, and for payment of Japanese employed on departmental works projects.

Statement Expected

Today the House resumes consideration of the same bill and may reach External Affairs Department items in connection with which a few hundred yards away, shells fired by tanks being supported artillery can be seen bursting on the hillside.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

Federal Govt. Refuses Removal Of Restrictions

Wartime Release for Wine and Liquors to be Kept at Present Levels

DREW ANSWERED

OTTAWA, June 6—(CP)—The Federal Government declined to remove its wartime restrictions on the release by wine and liquor for sale when requested to do so by Premier George Drew of Ontario, it was disclosed yesterday in the Commons.

Resources Minister Crerar tabled an exchange of correspondence between the Ontario Premier and Prime Minister Mackenzie King which took place just before the Ontario Government cut the monthly liquor ration from 26 to 13 ounces.

The correspondence was made public after revenue Minister Gibson told the House there was no discrimination in the treatment of Ontario and Quebec in the matter of liquor supplies.

He also said the restrictions were not imposed because of a shortage in supply but to assure a total war effort. The reasons advanced when the restrictions were imposed were still valid and as the hour of our greatest trial approaches they possess added significance."

Col. Gibson said Ontario received 1,149,818 proof gallons of spirits in the year ended Oct. 31, 1943, and Quebec 1,163,647. Ontario in the same period received 36,962,411 gals. of beer and Quebec 37,947,-371.

An obvious reason for the discrepancy in ration between the two provinces was the number of permits, he said. In January, 1943, when Ontario's monthly ration was 26 ounces there were 155,295 permits issued in the province, in March, 1944, there were 1,261,938 permits. One man was recently prosecuted for having 83 permits.

Face Necessity of Reduction

In a letter dated May 22 Mr. Drew informed Mr. King that Ontario faced the necessity of reducing the amount available to permit holders. He said experience since restrictions on the sale of beer were removed convinced him restrictions should be served to create an artificial demand. Because of large reserves of potable spirits in warehouses there was no need for continuing the restrictions.

Mr. Gardiner urge that the restriction on spirits available to the provincial authorities be removed before the first of June," he said, will be forced to make on that date will add very greatly to the difficulties now encountered in maintaining effective control."

Mr. King replied by telegram on May 26 that the cabinet had not yet been able to consider Mr. Drew's representations, but he doubted if the government would alter its policy.

Gives Definite Answer

On May 29 Mr. King gave a definite answer by letter saying the cabinet had considered the request. He concluded:—

"The government has decided that it would not be justified at this time in making any change in its war-time policy."

Wartime restrictions on the release of spirits and wine for sale came into effect Dec. 16, 1942. The federal government limited the quantity of spirits and wine to be released for sale in the period from Nov. 1, 1943, to Oct. 31, 1943, and 70 and 90 per cent. respectively, of the quantity released in the previous 12 months. The period of this limitation was subsequently extended for the duration of the war.

Moon Chief Influence On Ocean Tides

Ry tide is ordinarily meant the rhythmic rise and fall and flow of ocean waters. In a less restricted sense tides are all prevailing phenomena whose existence is bounded only by the limits of the universe itself. Without such limits there be, says a report by the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada to The Ottawa Citizen.

It was recognized before the time of Newton that the tides were related in some way to the moon, but the reality of previous attempts to explain them, however, is a reminder of the tremendous importance of the discovery of the law of gravitation, which not only explained the tides but also the motion of the heavenly bodies as well. Newton showed how the attraction of the moon and the sun was the cause of the tides but left the subject largely, though not entirely, for others to work out the details.

It is not difficult for the astronomer to compute the tide producing forces, but the reaction of the ocean surface to them is so complicated that prediction of the tides is based to a very considerable extent on the results of previous observation at the particular place considered.

Sun Fails as Predicter of Tides.

The tide producing force, being a differential effect, is small compared with the gravitational attraction of the tide producing body itself. Due to the fact that the tide producing force varies inversely as the cube of the distance while the gravitational force varies as its inverse square the attraction of the sun on the earth is about 200 times that of the moon, but its tide producing force is only about half that of the moon.

The gravitational attraction of the sun and moon is not the same at all points on the earth. The nearer points are attracted more strongly than the centre, the more remote ones less strongly. The attraction at the centre represents the average attraction for the whole earth.

The tide producing force at any point in or on the earth is the difference between this average and the actual attraction at the point in question. Consequently, there will be an excess of attraction on the side facing or nearer the tide producing body and an almost equal deficiency of attraction on the other side of the earth. There is thus a tendency to stretch the earth along the line joining the centres of the earth and the tide producing body, causing high tides on both sides of the earth at the same time, and accounting for the fact that there are normally two high and two low tides at any one place during an interval of approximately 24 hours.

Apart from the sun and moon, the tide generating forces (on the earth) of the other members of the solar system are small in the first account. Naturally the tides depend upon the ever changing positions of the sun and moon with respect to the earth, on their declinations or angular elevations with respect to the equator, on the phase of the moon, whether the moon is near perigee of apogee, and of course upon the daily rotation of the earth.

At new and full moon the tide generating forces of the sun and moon reinforce each other and spring tides occur, and at first quarter and last quarter, when they tend to counterbalance each other, neap tides are observed. When the tide producing body is on the equator the tendency is to produce equality in the tides observed, during the day, and when off the equator inequality. The tides are also affected by the configuration of the coast line, the depth of the sea, by effects of wind and weather, and by other factors. So there is great variation, over the surface of the earth, in the types of tides observed.

The highest tide in the world is in the Bay of Fundy, where there is a maximum range of about 70 feet. According to an eminent authority, this is due to a rather excellent hook on the tides, this extraordinary high tide is due primarily to the fact that the natural period of oscillation of the bay approximates the period of the ocean tide. This brings about a stationary wave movement within the bay which has approximately the same period, and the tide is therefore a sort of resonance effect.

In the upper reaches of the bay, the range of the tide is further increased because of the considerable diminution in the section brought about by the contraction in width and shoaling of the bottom. The slightly higher range along the Nova Scotia coast is that at corresponding points in New Brunswick is attributed to the location of the earth, which causes currents of air or water flowing northward to be deflected eastward in the northern hemisphere.

It is estimated that a maximum of 200 million horsepower is theoretically available by impounding the waters of the Bay of Fundy across its mouth, a distance of 90 miles. Probably only a small fraction of this could be available by any practical scheme. Tidal authorities do not seem enthusiastic regarding the financial success of large scale tidal development, at least as long as abundant supplies of coal and oil and other water powers remain available.

Another remarkable phenomenon is presented by the Fundy tides and that is the bore in the Petitcodiac river. Twice daily the tide comes rushing up over the river current in the form of a low wall of broken and foaming water. Its approach is heralded by flocks of sea gulls and possibly other birds who hover over the head of the bore and follow it all the way up the river in their quest for food. They not only signal the approach of the bore from a long way down the river, but they also add much to the interest and charm of the spectacle.

Great tidal streams reversing in direction during the day may be seen on both coasts of Canada. The current in Seymour Narrows, British Columbia, attains a velocity of about 10 miles an hour. And in New Brunswick, takes pride in its reversing falls.

THIS SIMPLE PLAN WILL HELP YOU

BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

Send for the Budget Calendar without obligation—Then join the Budgeteers! —

HERE'S a new kind of budget book to help you do your part on the home front! It shows a simple way to plan your spending in wartime—a way to make your dollars do more for you and for your country.

Your job on the home front

Out of your pay cheques must now come larger contributions, war savings, higher taxes—money you gladly give or lend to help bring victory sooner. On what's left you have the job of keeping your family going—of paying all your regular expenses—of staying out of avoidable debt. That's a big job. But the better you do it the more you help to keep the home front strong.

You can make that job easier if you plan your spending. Know what you are going to do with each pay cheque before you spend it. To help you plan your spending we want to send you the Budget Calendar. This is a budget method first published by Household Finance as a service to customers. Now, when war makes budgeting so important for everyone, we are sending the Budget Calendar to all who request a copy.

A simple way to budget

You will find in the Calendar a new way to go about budgeting—a way that makes your planning easy and simple. The book doesn't attempt to tell you how much you should allow for this or for that. It doesn't ask you to try to fit your life into a fixed spending pattern. You merely start with the expenses you now have and then plan to pay those expenses with what you have to spend. It's this new approach to budgeting—this looking squarely at what you yourself face—that makes this plan really work. At the same time it does away with endless bookkeeping!

Budgeteers get special help

Those who use the Budget Calendar seriously are invited to join the Budgeteers. Budgeteers receive a new booklet or letter from time to time to encourage them in their efforts. They are always welcome to ask for individual help with their problems. Special recognition is given to all Budgeteers who complete a full year of budgeting.

We here at Household Finance, Canada's oldest and largest Small Loans Company, have been dealing with money problems for many years. We have seen what the right kind of budgeting can do for families who must stretch their incomes as far as possible. The Budget Calendar comes out of our long experience. Don't you want a copy without obligation? We will not annoy you with loan advertising of any kind.

Home Run Output of the Majors Shows Increase and Hurlers Are Taking to Storm Cellars for Help

Right Field Wall Moved Back 20 Feet and 22 Homers Hit

ALL PARKS EASY

By The Associated Press

Major league pitchers took to the storm cellars today after counting up 90 home runs during the last 7 days and noting the new menace to their trade in renovated Braves field in Boston.

Since President Bob Quinn moved the right field fence back 20 feet two weeks ago to help the left-handed hitters, 22 round-trippers have sprouted where only four grew before.

Fifty-one homers have been lifted into the New York Polo Grounds stands in the first seven weeks, almost half as many as were belted all last season when 115 were recorded. Of the 51, exactly 28 were clouted in the Giants' two-week home stand against the western clubs.

Although the Yankees no longer have their Murderer's Row of yore, 28 homers have been belted at the Stadium, 14 each by the Yanks and the visitors. The fourth highest park in home run production is Briggs Stadium in Detroit where 21 have been authored.

Strangely enough while the American League clubs have hammered 30 round trippers at Philadelphia's Shibe Park, the National Leaguers have been able to collect but seven, low for the circuit. Washington's spacious acres have yielded only three.

The hitters have found Sportsman's Park in St. Louis easy picking with a total of 33 homers but that represents every-day duty with both the Cards and Browns using the field.

As the clubs prepared to resume action after a one-day layoff with two National League night games the senior circuit led in circuit clouts 150 to 137. The American League picks up tomorrow but the week's schedule is spotty with only 23 games in both leagues before the week-end.

IDEAL WEATHER GREETS GOLFERS AT COUNTRY CLUB

Five Finish in Tie Over Weekend in Men's Sweepstakes

BILL LITTLE LOW

Ideal weather welcomed the golfers at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Sunday when their initial tournament of the season was held.

In the men's sweepstakes held in the morning five contestants finished in a tie for first place with a low gross score of 38. The five players turning in the best low gross card were: Joe Legault, Clarence Jewell, G. H. Stobie, Tommy Carruthers and Harry Walker. This quintette will play off in a sudden death round on Wednesday afternoon.

However, the low net score of the day was made by Bill Little, golf professional, who played the course in 39 with no handicap to better his low gross count. Tommy Carruthers won the low net score with a score of 40 while the handicap of two strokes left him in a tie for the day's low gross score. Little's effort of touring the course in 39 was four over par.

In the afternoon a mixed two-ball foursome tournament saw J. E. Bateman and Sheila Burrows tied with Bill Little and Mrs. Bateman with a score of 39. The results of the mixed two-ball foursome were:

J. E. Bateman and Sheila Burrows—39.

Wm. Little and Mrs. Bateman—39.

H. E. Walker and Mrs. Walker—48.

Bill Bell and Betty Gilbert—44.

Bill Steer and Peggy Blakslee—50.

O. Mangold and Helen Lee—51.

G. Goodman and Thelma Bell—55.

The individual scores of the men's morning sweepstakes were:

J. Legault	45	7	38
C. Jewell	46	8	38
Dr. Stobie	45	7	38
T. Carruthers	40	2	38
H. E. L. Walker	45	7	38

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Bound to Win

With a wink at the other passengers the smart young man said to a yokel in the corner seat: "Let's have a game of riddles to pass the time. If I ask one that you can't guess you give me half a crown, and I do the same to you."

"All right," said the yokel, "but as you're better educated do you mind if I only pay a shilling?"

The young man agreed, and the yokel, invited to begin, asked: "What animal has three legs walking and two flying?"

"I don't know," replied the young man. "Here's half a crown. What's the answer?"

"I don't know either," said the yokel. "Here's your shilling."

(Some classy scores.)

Bill Steer started the Bay of Quinte Club golfers off in grand style on Sunday with a men's sweeps in the morning and a mixed two-ball foursome in the p.m.

Bill Litte, former pro at the Country Club, swung a potent club on opening day when he teamed with Mrs. J. E. Bateman to tie J. E. Bateman and Sheila Burrows in the two-ball mixed foursome, but it was in the morning session that Bill drove through for a low net score of 39. The nearest was Tommy Carruthers with a 40. However, Tommy's two-stroke handicap moved him into the top-ranking five, all of whom carded a 38 forcing a play-off tomorrow for the men's sweepstakes. The top-ranking five tied included, Joe Legault, Clarence Jewell, Dr. Stobie, Tom Carruthers and Harry Walker.

The scores of the opening day at the Belleville Golf Club have not been received at the sports desk as yet.

(One big inning.)

The fifth frame, when 12 runs were scored in their favor, was enough for the Corbin-Optical "Combines" to down Universals 14 to 3 last night. Now Jim Semarks Combines are auspiciously up in the ladies softball race. Aside from the one big frame the game did give the fans something in the line of closeness, with Marg Reynolds pitching steady ball for the winners. Actually Ollie Carswell should have been replaced in the Universal hilltop long before the Combines enmassed a dozen runs in the fifth. Strangely enough with 17 runs scored only one circuit blow was poled out, that by B. Cooney, the Combines' initial sacker. Jean Corneal did a good chore of relief hurling as she blanked the winners going home. Tomorrow night it's SWACO and the "Bomberettes" in an important league struggle.

(Took some time.)

Seems some of the boys around town have been engaged in a system of Gin Rummy games for the past six months until last week the race narrowed down to Benny Yanover and Eddie Shapiro. Today Eddie is the 'supreme shuffler" of the gin rummy cards. How they score the game we'll never know, but delving through the final round figures it would seem champion Eddie had little opposition this season. "Another time I'll show that guy no mercy", assured Benny, who claims he was given the business.

(Slow up, son.)

When Connie Mack's A's were wining pennants in 1929, 1930 and 1931, one of his star players, Max Bishop, was losing his speed, which was his greatest asset. Mack hesitated to say anything to Max. Then a playing incident came to his rescue.

In a series with the Yankees, Bishop hit one to the right field wall at the Stadium, which, he knew from experience, was good for three bases for a man of his fleetness. He sped around the paths, only to see the third sacker grab the ball when he was still running 15 feet from the bag.

Max returned to the dugout silent, Mack didn't say a word.

The next morning, Bishop was alone at the breakfast table. Mack passed and said: "Maxie, the next time you hit a triple, for goodness sake, please stop at second."

Maybe two-base triples should be the order for all over-age sluggers.

(Remember when.)

Jockey Steve Donoghue rode his third successive mount to Derby victory at Epsom Downs 21 years ago today. Driving Papyrus home, Donoghue established a record unsurpassed in the English Derby history. Then to prove his saddle prowess Donoghue added three more Derby victories to his list before retiring in 1937 to become an owner of a string of runners.

(That man's in.)

According to the Montreal sport sheets last week a masked wrestler appeared at the Forum and according to the press description we wonder if Jerry Monahan is on the loose again. The Montreal press boys suggested it might have been King Kong Cox, but Monahan unmasked Cox some years ago.

However, there's one thing certain local wrestling fans won't be bothered with any hooded horror when Vern Baxter, the Oregon lumber jack, tries to disect John Katan at the local palace de sport tomorrow night.

HE CAN SMILE

The aged question as to whether or not Al (don't hit me back) Dunlop can smile or not was proven in the affirmative when the press photographer caught the "Burly Bunny" in a jovial mood just before he signed to meet Abe Zvonkin at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. To make things all the more interesting, Promoter Tunney matched up John Katan and Vern Baxter, the Oregon lumberjack in the main scrap.

'COMBINES' START SOFTBALL YEAR WITH 14-3 WIN

Defeat Universals, Scoring Twelve Runs In One Inning

TAKE EARLY LEAD

Jim Semark's "Combines" started off their 1944 campaign in the Belleville Ladies' Sotball League in a most impressive manner downing Bill Davis' Universals 14 to 3. However, the score doesn't exactly indicate the play as the Combines scored an even dozen runs in the fifth frame, so eliminating this free-scoring inning the game was productive of some good ball.

The Combines took an early game lead when M. Reid was safe on an error, Richardson singled and M. Laskie doubled to score two. Allison and Benn hit safely for Universal in the bottom half of the second, but some smart fielding saw the Combines choke off the potential runs by getting the next two batters in order. Came the fatal fifth when the Combines sent 16 batters to the plate to score 12 runs as they circled the bases in grand fashion. B. Cooney, the Combines' first sacker, helped the situation by polling out a home run, the only extra base clout registered during the Combine rally. Hits by Carswell and Tuttle gave Universal their first encounter in the sixth and they added two more in the last inning on bingles by Robinson and Jean Corneal.

The next game scheduled brings together the strong Mountain View "Bomberettes" versus the SWACO. lassies at the Armouries Wednesday evening. Last night Marg Reynolds went the route on the Combine hilltop, while Ollie Carswell started for Universal, but gave over the pitching chores to Jean Corneal, who blanked the Combines for the remainder of the piece.

The line-ups—Universal—Corneal 1b and p, Carswell p and 1b, Parker 3b, Tuttle 2b, Allison ss, Benn lf, Robinson cf, Reeves rf and Zebedee, c. Combines—Semark 2, Hill ss, Reynolds, p. Cooney 1b, Reid 3b, Archer cf, Richardson lf, M. Laskie rf, and Delmore 2b.

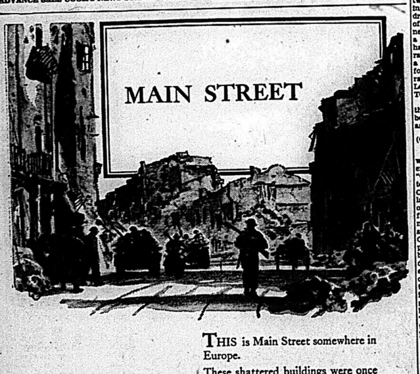
Umpires—Ethier, plate; Young, bases.

FATALLY SHOT

Quebec, June 6. (CP)— Joseph Guenette, father of 24-year-old Georges Guenette, who was fatally shot last month while fleeing from Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers, yesterday testified at a preliminary hearing of two R.C.M.P. officers on a manslaughter charge that he had told officers they never would take his son alive.

LOU NOVA AWARDED DECISION IN BOUT WITH BUDDY SCOTT

By the Canadian Press



Lou Nova of California was awarded the decision at the end of his 10-round bout with Buddy Scott at Oklahoma City last Friday but the Oklahoma City Athletic Commission, after a review of the score cards, ruled the bout had ended in a draw. In a statement, the Board announced it was correcting the announcer and not the judges, pointing out one judge and the referee had called the match a draw and the other judge had given Nova the edge on points. Collectively, the score cards showed the most rounds for Nova and the announcer took it that way. However, the dispute all leads up to another scrap between the pair scheduled for June 20 at Galveston.

Elon (Chief) Hogsett, veteran pitcher, was unconditionally released by Detroit Tigers yesterday and he was quickly on his way to rejoin the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association, with whom he had previously played.

Vice-President Jim Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs yesterday announced third-baseman Stan Hack, 34-year-old veteran of the club, would forsake his Oregon ranch and rejoin the team next week. He had retired from baseball after 12 seasons with the Cubs.

In order to have a double-header for Sunday, Aug. 6, the Newark Baseball Club last night announced the postponement of today's scheduled game in the International League with Montreal at Newark. The Bears and Toronto open a six-game series at Newark Thursday with double-bills Thursday and Sunday.

Willie Shanks of Montreal withdrew from the 10-round feature at Springfield, Mass., last night and his substitute, Louis (Tiger) Jones, 163, of Augusta, Ga., took a walloping from Marvin Bryant, 162½, Dallas. Tom Murray of Montreal was kayoed in the first round of a scheduled eight-round semi-final by Steve Kronis, 130, of Boston.

THIS is Main Street somewhere in Europe.

These shattered buildings were once busy shops and offices.

The rubble-strewn sidewalks were once thronged with people. It will be a busy street again . . . someday.

The ravaged cities of Europe and Asia must be rebuilt. When V-Day comes the world will look to Canadian factories and farms for materials of reconstruction and repair, for food and clothing and household goods . . .

In the face of such a need, is it conceivable that we should have idle hands or minds in Canada after the war? Canada will be a busy place when Victory is won.

What is PRIVATE ENTERPRISE? It is the natural desire to make your own way, as far as your ability will take you; an instinct that has brought to this continent the highest standard of life enjoyed by any people on earth. It is the spirit of democracy on the march . . .

Toronto, June 6—(CP)—Canada's oldest Tennis Club, and one that possibly has produced more top-ranking stars than any other, this year celebrates its 50th anniversary. The Toronto Lawn Tennis Club has completed half a century of existence, and looks to enjoy its best season in 10 years or more, with membership on the rise.

The Toronto Club, organized in 1894, has produced such Davis Cup team members as Gilbert Nunns, Ross Wilson, Bob Murray, Walter Martin, Bill Pedlar, Lee Rennie and Bob Baird. In fact, the Toronto Club boasts that it has more active and inactive Davis cuppers on its lists than any other club in Canada.

Besides the younger players, there are numerous old-time tennis leaders in the club, like Col. J. F. Foulkes, who was Canadian Singles Champion in 1907, 1909 and 1910. He was the only Canadian representative on the 1908 Olympic team in London.

Female members of the club also have held their share of titles. Mrs. Olive Wade Worsley was Canadian Women's Singles Champion in 1929, and with her sister, Mrs. Elsie Wade Grey, won the doubles title that year.

Going back further there were other outstanding players, like Mrs. H. Bickle who won the Dominion Singles championship in 1914, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1924, and was runner-up on other occasions. She also teamed with Miss Frances Best to take the Ladies' Doubles champion in 1919, 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

The club isn't planning any elaborate celebration this war year to mark its jubilee, but will be satisfied with a few rounds of club play and a banquet. Tentative plans had been made to have some of the old-time players give exhibitions, but these couldn't be followed through.

TORONTO LEAFS SNAP STREAK OF JERSEY GIANTS

Al Jarlett Needed Help to Win From Giants by 4-2 Score

STILL ON TOP

Six teams are playing .500 ball or better in the International League today but the Syracuse Chiefs and Newark Bears continued to burrow into the lower regions.

Syracuse saw its losing streak extended to 13 as Buffalo grabbed a 3-2 edge last night to take over second place, a half length back of the pace-setting Jersey City Giants. Walt Wilson held Jewel Ens' slumping Chiefs to eight blows but needed Eddie Kobesky's seventh homer of the year in the fifth for a one-run edge.

Newark and Montreal both got 4-hit pitching but 21 walks were issued in a wild and wooly affair taken by the Royals, 6-4.

Al Jarlett snapped Jersey City's 4-game winning streak but had to have relief help from Bud Browson to preserve Toronto's 4-2 edge in the last of the ninth.

Rochester fell to third place although Eldred Byerly yielded only 4 hits to Baltimore. Eight walks were decisive in the Orioles' 4-2 victory.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 397

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Nutsby drong and dopesby drong and little dubsby daffy. Pardselby daffy, too. Wouldn't you? Yes. Nuts bid wrong and dopes bid wrong and little dubs bid daffy. Pards will bid daffy, too.

But there is no reason why you should bid wrong or daffy at any time. All you have to do is follow the simple, sound, sane rules of Horse Sense. Even unto slams.

Slide into this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A J 8 7 6 4
♥A
♦A
♣A 5 4 3 2

NORTH
♠K Q 5 3 2
♥K Q 6
♦10 5
♣J 8 6

South starts out with an opening bid of one spade. The response by north is an immediate one-jump assist to three spades. That shows spade support, five tricks, two sure tricks.

A sure trick is K Q in any one suit or an ace. With all four aces in south, what sure tricks could north hold? He must have at least two K Q combinations.

South has eight tricks; the four aces, two short cards in hearts, two short cards in diamonds. With what north has already shown, south sees enough to expect a slam of some kind.

Even if north has no more than the two kings and two queens already promised, a small slam seems worth trying. And if north has two more kings, a grand slam would be tried.

Four no-trump is the convention signal for asking partner how many aces and kings he has. When knowing partner has no aces, five no-trump is the signal for asking how many kings he has.

So, south bids five no-trump. To that, north replies with a bid of six hearts; the signal for showing two kings. And so, south is content to stop at six spades.

Who decides what the final contract shall be? The player who asks his partner how many aces or kings or both he has.

The four or five no-trumper is sitting in the driver's seat.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cover Girl"

Another movie-born term has just been adopted and assimilated into the American language, and Hollywood chalks up one more mark for helping to keep our language dynamic.

The press and public have not gotten into the habit of referring to photographer's models as "Cover Girl" even in instances where the girls don't appear on the covers of magazines.

Credit Columbia studios and its Technicolor production, "Cover Girl" starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly at the McCarthy Theatre for this addition to Americanese. And credit particularly the 15 beautiful conover cover girls who were brought from New York to appear in the picture with Rita Hayworth.

As a word source, Hollywood has a long history, you don't have to be very old to remember when every young man with an omniverously amorous look in his eye was known as a "sheik" so named after Rudolph Valentino in the picture of the same name.

"It" though originally coined by Elinor Glyn, became public property as a Synonym for amorous appeal only after Clara Bow had appeared in a picture bearing the two-letter title. Clara Bow herself became known thereafter as the "It Girl".

The late Jean Harlow gave us "Platinum Blonde" and in more recent times, the word "Oomph" replaced "It". This was also of Hollywood origin, applied to Ann Sheridan.

It wasn't long before the American girl discovered that she, too could have Oomph' if she became a "Sweater Girl," after M-G-M had launched Lana Turner as the original.

Going from the sublime to the ridiculous, everyone knows what a "pratt fall" is. But few people who use this phrase to describe an undignified sudden landing on the posterior know that it came out of Hollywood in the Keystone Kemedy days because a great artist at this type of comedy fall was named Gil Pratt.

A more recent case wherein the name of a movie personality has entered into the dictionary is the RAF's adoption of the term "mae west" as the official name of the inflatable lifebelts worn by blyers.

The current war has also adopted the fictitious place name of Shangri La which first received wide public attention through the columbia picture "Lost Horizon".

No compilation of a movie-inspired vocabulary would be complete without "yes man".

Anyone who doesn't know that one is just "pixilated," an adjective which came into common usage through the Columbia picture "Mr. Deeds Goes To Town".

Yes when it comes to suiting the word to the action, Hollywood can certainly claim first place for infectious imagination.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Design For Scandal"

When Judge Rosalind Russell discovers love, dignity goes out the window, and laughs come romping in. On the judge's bench she was icy, but on a park bench, you'd be surprised! Rosalind Russell and Walter Pidgeon star in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture "Design for Scandal" the riotous comedy now showing at the Capitol Theatre with Edward Arnold, Lee Bowman, Mary Beth Hughes, Barbara Jo Allen and Guy Kibbee.

"Prison Mutiny"

Scenes actually made in California's San Quentin penitentiary, the largest penal institution in the United States, form the background for the story of "Prison Mutiny," Monogram's thrilling drama which is the added feature at the Capitol Theatre with Edward Norris, Joan Woodbury and Jack La Rue in featured roles. Other parts are played by Paul McVey, Milburn Stone, Charles Jordan, Mauritz Hugo, Kenneth Harlan, Robert Homans and Sam Bernard.

The Canadian Universal News completes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"A Guy Named Joe"

In the new picture at the Belle Theatre, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has fashioned a tender and moving romance on the dramatic theme that pilots never die. The film stars Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne, together for the first time, give the finest characterizations of their long and distinguished careers.

Both Tracy and Miss Dunne are pilots, she is a member of the Ferry Command in England. They are deeply in love but constantly quarreling because both are reckless in the air and worry each other by their escapades. Finally Tracy is persuaded to return to the States as an instructor but before he can go he dies a hero—bombing an enemy carrier at the cost of his life.

Then the film takes a turn into fantasy. Tracy finds himself in pilots' "heaven," meeting the "General," played by Lionel Barrymore, who tells him he still has a vital job to do. He must help the young pilots just learning to fly and aid them by his unseen presence.

Young Van Johnson, a youthful millionaire, is assigned to his care. As he carefully guides the youngster to success as an airman, against his will he begins to like him. When Johnson goes off into combat duty he follows him to New Guinea. There he meets Miss Dunne again, still grieving for him. She falls in love with Johnson, because Tracy has made his personality so similar to his own, and in a thrilling climax realizes she can still live a normal happy life. As Tracy watches them go off together, his work is finished and he is finally happy.

Miss Dunne has never been lovelier than as she appears in "A Guy Named Joe." She wears the uniform of the Ferry Command throughout the film except for one memorable scene in which she is a "glamour girl" for the night. Her lovely voice is heard on the screen for the first time in many years singing the old favorite "I'll Get By." Tracy, who plays his role as a wraith for half the film, is delightful as the daredevil pilot. He is given an opportunity to display his talents as a comedian and as a lover, and does justice to his reputation.

Van Johnson is pleasing as the brash young millionaire, and Fred Bond, playing a sympathetic role, is excellent as the lifelong friend of Tracy and Miss Dunne. Outstanding characterizations are also contributed by Lionel Barrymore, James Gleason, Barry Nelson and Don De Fore.

Victor Fleming directed and Everett Riskin produced. The title, incidentally, is a quote from General Channault. In the Air Force any guy is a guy named Joe.

The Canadian News of the Day and an M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Betty Baseball" precede the feature attraction.

AT THE BELLE — Irene Dunne and Spencer Tracy, starred in M.G.M.'s "A Guy Named Joe," take time out to catch up with their love-making. Both show their mettle in this story, featuring Van Johnson.

AT THE CAPITOL—Rosalind Russell who appears with Walter Pidgeon in the riotous comedy "Design for Scandal' now showing at the Capitol theatre. On the same program "Prison Mutiny."

AT THE McCARTHY — Gene Kelly wins cover girl winner, Rita Hayworth in Columbia's winning musical of the year, "Cover Girl," which set to Jerome Kern melodies, is delighting the customers at the McCarthy Theatre now.

SALE! Dollars at Half Price!

Sounds like a sure-thing bargain. But how many of us realize that in Canada we're getting dollars at less than half the price of other years ... at a fraction the price in many other countries to day. Here's what we mean. A dollar is worth as much as it will buy. And to day your dollar buys at least twice as much as it did in the last war. For instance, your 5¢ buys a bar of laundry soap that cost 15¢ in those days. To day, you can buy the same quality felt fedora for $3.80 that set you back $8.30 then. Truly your dollar is half price since it buys twice as much. Price ceilings and other anti-inflationary measures have kept its value HIGH! And you protect your dollars worth every time you buy a bond ... pay off a debt ... refuse to hoard goods on frequent black markets. That's how to make dollars count MORE!

Make This Pledge Today!

I promise to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need. I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I will pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. And I will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Keep Your Dollar Value High!

Garden Brigades Being Conducted In The County

Realising the importance of well-cared for gardens on the farm an extensive program for the inauguration of garden brigades is being conducted in Hastings county by Mr. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative. This year four such brigades have been formed in the county under the supervision of Miss Jean Scott, home economics coach for this district, and Mr. Fair. Clubs have been organized in the Maynooth, Cooper, West Huntingdon and Springbrook districts.

Other rural junior organization clubs active this year are the Marmora Boys' Grain Club, and the Maynooth Potato Club which has been re-organized for its second year.

Club leaders of the Maynooth Garden Brigade are Mrs. W. J. Davis of Maple Leaf and Mrs. J. McAlpine of Maynooth. Members are Muriel Lebow and Eileen Watson of Maynooth Station; Lucille Robinson, Sadie Davis, Margaret Davis, Frances Davis, Leola Douglas, Helen Douglas, Ella Brofoskie and Edola Fitzgerald of Greenview, and Merle Burlanyette, Bessie Davis, Eunice Davis, and Helen MacLean of Maple Leaf.

Members of Brigade

The Cooper Garden Brigade is headed by Miss Jean Irwin and Mrs. Rex. Rollins of Cooper with its members being composed of Jean Irwin, Cooper, Fay Roolisn, Margaret Harris, Joyce Ferguson, Phyllis Rollins, Velma Rollins, Barbara Shapman, Edelene McCoy, Gwen Whiteman, Shirley Fox and Donna Rollins of Madoc R.R. 3 and Vivian Wyatt of Cooper.

Miss Georgia Pitman heads the West Huntingdon club with Margaret Haggerty, West Huntingdon, Dora Rogers, Joan McCurdy, Stirling, Marion Mitts, Honora McAvoy and Ganes McAvoy of Ivanhoe and Ethel Hagerman of Harold as members.

At Springbrook Mrs. George Williams is the club leader with Marion Gordanier, Audrey Gordanier, Helen Eastwood and Jean Anderson of Bonarlaw and Muriel Cassidy of Springbrook as members.

An organization of many years standing, the Marmora Boys' Grain club is again active this year with H. W. Sabine as the club leader. J. McAvoy, Graham Bell, Mickey Maloney, John McGregor, Cecil Bell and Gerald Fox and Clayton Thompkins, Leslie Bell, William Doyle and William Hulsam, all of Marmora township as members.

The Maynooth Potato Club in its second year of activity is especially active with seventeen members, both boys and girls. Prominent farmer of the district, Mr. Joe Davis of Greenview is the club leader with efforts being confined to the growing of Katahdin potatoes.

Members of this club are Lorne Lebow, Gordon Lebow and Edmund Hinze of Maynooth Station, John Freymond, Hybla; Walter Watson, Gordon and George McAlpine of Maynooth; Sadie Davis and Trevor Davis of Maple Leaf, Sheldon Reeves Monteagle Valley, Edgar Prentice, Emma Prentice, James Fitzgerald, Joseph Fitzgerald, Leonard Cassidy and Leola Douglas of Greenview.

A Simple Test Of Spelling

From the Edmonton Journal.

Young Canadians are developing into sloppy spellers. The truth is obvious to all who employ high school graduates in any capacity where writing the language is part of the work to be done. Teachers who mark test papers see it every day. Even adults are not so good at spelling, as those of us who have to read letters to the editor can testify.

One of Edmonton's high school principals tested the ability of 237 pupils in Grades X, XI and XII to spell words in comon use, words such as are to be seen day after day in newspaper despatches and news reports generally. To make the test a fair one, he selected every fifth word from old lists used in our high schools when spelling was one of the taught subjects. Nine classes took part, five from Grade X, three from Grade XI, and one from Grade XII.

The following list shows how these 237 pupils got along, the figure in brackets after each word being the number who failed to spell it correctly:

Plebiscite (203); rhythm (187); rescind (179); aggravate (177); curriculum (175); negligible (174); personnel (174); accessible (171); convener (166;) strategist (151); adviser (145); extravagant (140); accommodate (137); amateur (132); skein (132); preceding (129);

Privilege (128); plausible (118); eliminate (118); assessor (115); vehicle (114); optimism (109); pursuit (106); superintendent (106); alleged (103);

Parallel (96); mania (93); parasol (85); athlete (83); propaganda (81); bouquet (81); fascinated (81); tariff (79); purge (69); neutral (67); menace (60); similar (60); survivors (50);

Recommend (53); collision (49); prairie (48); fumigate (42); technical (26); forty (26); practical (18); librarian (18); committee (14); fiscal (12); democracy (10); casual (9).

Only one student spelled all 50 words correctly, one spelled 40 wrongly, and the average for the whole 237 was 18.4 errors.

By the way, what has become of the old spelling bee?

FLEW 20 MILES OVER FRONT

New York, June 6 — (AP) — An NBC reporter who flew over 20 miles of the invasion coast this morning said "Not a single German coastal gun was firing in the entire invasion zone," and NBC said this indicated "We have completely knocked out the initial line of defences of the much-vaunted Atlantic Wall."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma took me downtown shopping with her, and afterwards she bought a box of candy and we went to a movie, ma saying even if it wasn't a good picture for children it probably wouldn't do me any harm because I wouldn't be able to understand it anyways.

The name of it being Scars of Passion, and the lady in front of ma started to stand up every once in a while to try to attract somebody's attention by waving her hand in the air, and ma said, Oh dear, I wish she'd stop that, any woman with a neck as long as hers would be painful enough to sit behind without the added injury of leeping up like a jack in the box every time the picture gets interesting.

Well G. ma, why dont you call to her to sit down, like people do? I said, and ma said, Such a suggestion, do you want me to descend even lower than her level and have people think I'm even ruder than she is? Do you think 2 wrongs make a right? she said.

No mam, I said, and ma said, Of course I suppose I could lean fallward and whisper quietly to her and ask her if she would please mind remaining seated, but really a person like that doesn't deserve such curtissy. Oh dear, she's up and at it again, ma said.

Which she was, and just then the lady right in back of me called out, Set down there, set down and stay down, set down.

Which she did, going down so sudden I could hear her bump, and I turned around and looked at the lady in back of ma an she was a lady with big eyebrows and 2 chins, and ma turned around and smiled at her, saying, Thanks so much, won't you have a piece of candy?

Oh, thanks, the lady said. And she took 2 pieces.

Proving there are times you can enjoy a little good rudeness as long as you are acting like a lady yourself.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 9

"He walked out through it, with the rest of you, didn't he? Might seen it was on the latch, the Inspector suggested.

"He might Forrestall conceded "But even so! Who'd havethought he was a thief! retired professor of chemistry, coming from one of our largest midwestern universities! Living here for two years, and received everywhere, since Grace Libby had taken him up!"

"Will be quite a blow for Mrs. Libby hearing a friend of hers was looking for another man's hidden safe." Inspector Pettengill looked midly amused at the idea "But just now that ain't the point so much as that he was murdered, and who murdered him. Too bad Roberts seems to have a real alibi, and you—"He stopped abruptly and squinted speculatively at the distressed Forrestall. "You haven't been back to the Burton house by any chance, this afternoon?"

Forrestall's eyes popped and he slowly turned green. "I don't know what you are driving at. Why is it too bad Roberts has an alibi? And why do you want to know if I was back?"

The Inspector grinned jovially. "Because— if Roberts didn't have no alibi and been in the house and — well — killed a burglar he'd been in his right. And if you done it—in protection of what been left in your care—you'd be right too. But if it was an outsider, someone maybe that's come with the Professor, it's a horse of another color. Then it's murder."

Oh! I understand what you mean." Forrestall's smile was distinctly on the thin side. "But unfortunately I cannot help you, Inspector. I have not been in the Burton house after I left it with Stoddard and these ladies here, shortly before three.If you wish, I can give you an account of all my movements from then on until the time of your call Also, may I say I am very glad Roberts isn't under suspicion?"

"I didn't say he wasn't. Only that he seems to have an alibi, And you can give your account to Miss Kay here, right now if you don't mind the Inspector said unruffled.

Conley Forrestall's alibi seemed foolproof.

He had driven from our house straight to his office, where he had arrived at five minutes past three—the time could be verified by several people and telephone calls—and hadn't been alone all during the afternoon and early evening. He had been delayed at his office until half past six, an hour past his usual time,through pressing work connected with the shipyard transfer to the government. Much to his daughter's annoyance, who had come for him between half past five and six, expecting to be taken home immediately. Amy had been marooned in town through some eccentricity of her car, while on a trip to her hairdresser's, it seemed. At half past six Forrestall and Amy had lived on a glorified farm a few miles out of town in the summer —and spent the rest of the time with his family and a number of guests, whose names he readily gave.

"Sounds fine. Sorry I bust up your bridge game for you after such a hard day." 'Hope we'll find Roberts', alibi as good as yours when we check up on him tomorrow. Good night , Mr. Forrestall and thanks for the co-operation."

The dismissal was so sudden Forrestall looked positively stunned as he bade Aunt Millie and me good night and stalked from the room, and I must confess the sensation descended on me when the Inspector said plaintively to the closed door, a moment later: "Now why doesn't he come clean?"

"But—but—it sounded like the truth—all he said," I stammered, almost dropping my notes.

"Sure it did. It was the truth". The inspector smiled paternally at me. "Only, there was an awful lot he wasn't saying".

"How do you know?" Aunt Millie inquired, with a rapid glance at me.

The Inspector chuckled. "I don't know how I know, but I do. I can always spot a lie—told in words or by keeping still. Always, Miss Wentworth!"

Then he changed the subject. "Got it all down, Miss Kay? Good girl! Think you can have it typed for me by morning?"

Aunt Millie and I stared at each other open mouthed when the Inspector had left.

Now what do you think of him!" Aunt Millie said at last with something like awe. "Looks so meek and mild you think it's no trick at all to bamboozle the wooly lamb—and then tells you in so many words he know's you're holding out on him!"

But he doesn't know what we are holding out," I consoled her and myself "And he won't, through me. Did you lose your lovely compact?"

"I did. In the garden. Near the spot where we cross the great divide ," she nodded. Think Forrestall is keeping back the same thing we are?"

I'm sure of it," I told her.

"Maybe Forrestall knows that he —you know who—has done it," Aunt Millie reflected on our walk through the hall towards the stairs.

"Oh, Lord! Then maybe he'll advise him to come forward and confess, after what the Inspector said!" I worried.

"Heh, now! Chin up! Don't paint things with such a big black brush!" Aunt Millie scolded. Go see if you can get a few minutes with your Allan to cheer you up. Me, I'm all in. I'm going to bed".

I took up her suggestion eagerly but without success.

When I peeked into the study, Dad was expounding something to Allan at the blueprint - littered drafting table, and we could only communicate in pantomime—Allan expressing his regret and asking was I alright? And I telling him I was, and better luck tomorrow.

It was two o'clock before I finished my typing and dropped into bed, too tired to worry any more But I couldn't have slept very soundly, for the soft purr of a car roused me.

A dim streak around the blinds announced it was dawn, and the luminous hands of my desk clock pointed to twenty of five. Was that Allan leaving? Had he and Dad worked until now, practically the night through?

Still half aseep, I tumbled out of bed, went to the side window overlooking the garage, and lifted the edge of the blind. The sky was a dull sheet of lead gray, but the fog had cleared. A strong wind had sprung up and blown it away. The branches of the intervening trees stood out sharply as a black-lace screen, behind which I could see a car moving—into the garage. Not out of it.

Gala Burton was returning from one of her night rides.

I dropped the blind and crawled back into bed. Strange her habit of turning night into day. Such a damp disagreeable night too, When she hadn't felt well yesterday, had been in bed at half past eight—

"Oh well it's none of my business," I thought drowsily before falling asleep again.And: "Wonder if someone's told her about the murder?"

In spite of turning in at such a late hour, I was downstairs at my usual time.

Nettie informed me that the Inspector had already been asking for me, and so I hastily bolted my breakfast, grabbed my typing, and ran over to the Burton housee, my heels sinking deeply into the sopping wet gravel.

The Inspector and Sergeant Flyn were standing on the back porch, right before the window I had used, and that was open again I didn't like it.

"Good morning Inspector. Here are your depositions," I called to him.

"Good morning, Miss Kay. Nice of you to be so prompt. Come here I got something to show you,"he called back.

I obeyed —with a sinking feeling in my middle. "Yes, Inspector?" I asked, with a great show of eager if impersonal, curiosity.

He pointed to the porch floor. "Footprints. High heels Small size. Could be yours. Sure you didn't run up here by mistake, first, last night?"

I swallowed hard. Twice. What a fool I had been to feel safe, because someone had closed the window, when here, for all to read, the story of my entrance was written in wet garden earth!

"Why — er — no. No, I went straight to the door", I lied with all the bravado I could muster.

"Hmm. Must been another woman around then", the Inspector mused, his eyes glued to my feet. "Funny part is, they only go to the window and don't come back. They wasn't a trace of mud in the passage either last night, until we tracked it up", he digressed, glancing at me questioningly.

I willed myself to glance back at him unflinchingly, the same way—and won the endurance contest.

"Shows you're a might neat girl. Scraped your feet before going in", he said, ducking his head and stepping across the sill. "Well, do it again and come in".

I was meekly trotting behind him, toward the hall, when all of a sudden he stopped and turned.

"You got me stumped", he announced with his most affable grin. "One minute I think you're okay, and the next I get leery of you "Leery of me—why?" I gasped. again".

"Well, they's your story of that compact, and them footprints on the porch. But the compact part is true. We found it."

"You did!" I had no need to disguise my emotions this time. My joy at knowing Aunt Millie's lovely compact was safe was genuine. "I'm so glad! Where was it?" I asked happily.

And then my face fell and the hand I had stretched out eagerly dropped to my side. I had never seen the small box the Inspector held out to me: a flat, round gilt case of Chinese workmanship, with an embossed dragon curling around its rim.

"That isn't my compact", I stammered disappointedly.

"It ain't?" The Inspector looked incredulous.

"No. Mine is square. Black enamel with a jeweled tree. Real jewels. Small emeralds and rubies and diamonds. I'd admired it for years, and my aunt gave it to me when she came".

"That's the deuce of a note!" The Inspector scratched his head. "We found it in one of the small rooms off the rear passage, slipped back of a chair seat. Now how'd it get there?"

"I wouldn't know. I've never been in any of those rooms", I assured him.

"Hmm. Have to keep looking for yours then", he decided. "But first, come upstairs to the library, will you?"

In the library Sergeant Hatch and a uniformed policeman were laboring to restore order, under the guidance of Roberts, who was leaning in the door, arms folded and gloves prominently displayed. But they all melted away at a sign from the Inspector.

"Take your time and look around good", he instructed me. "See if you can find more things missing, like that stone yesterday. You got sharp eyes and a good memory, and maybe you would tell me if you saw anything out of the way. That Roberts now—all he does is give me the itch to kick him".

The room was much as it had been the previous afternoon. The floor was almost cleared. But not quite. Some of the delicate blue Kingfisher feathers had become loosened from their mountings and dotted the carpet here and there with their heavenly color.

Instinctively I bent to gather them up, one by one. And then, as I was reaching for one of the illusive bits of azure, I saw something else. Something that glittered beside it—

A hairpin. A tiny gilt bobbypin, such as only a golden-haired woman would use— as I had seen in Gala's burnished curls.

I was still holding it in my hand and blinking at it dumfoundedly, when the Inspector asked from the hall:

"What you find?"

"The Kingfish feathers", I told him. "They're all over, sticking to the carpet. It's a shame. They are exquisite and quite rare. Mr. Forrestall ought to send the ornaments to a first-class jeweler to have them repaired".

"Oh, Kingfish feathers! Is that what them blue things are?" he twinkled at me. "Okay. See you get 'em all, and put 'em in an envelope. I'll give 'em to Mr. Forrestall".

When I went downstairs a short while later, the blue feather bits secure in an envelope and Gala's bobbypin tucked in my purse, the Inspector had a new surprise for me.

"I'm going to ask you a favor", he announced. "May I go on using that big room we was setting in last night for a spell? That is, less your father objects".

I couldn't help smiling. Dad wasn't likely to object to what he wouldn't notice.

"Of course you may. Make it your headquarters if you like", I invited.

"Thats what I had in mind", he beamed at me. "Tell you why. You seen the morning paper?"

I hadn't and said so.

"Well, they was nothing much in it about the murder. I been doing my best to keep it quiet. This is an old-fashioned town. We don't like to have our elite—he pronounced it e-light—dragged around in' the mud. But I can't keep entirely mum about it, and people will be curious and play Nosy Tom around the Burton house' Your house now is a grand blind. You'll have the town running in on you anyways, seeing as you found the corpse. And who's to say, are they calling on you— or me".

"I get the idea", I told him.

"Good! Besides you might turn some of your callers into my callers —if you thought they knew something".

"Perhaps", I said dubiously. "Anything else?"

"Ayah. I'd like for you to keep on being my stenographer".

"Why? Do you trust me more than your official scribe?" I asked ironically.

"No. But I can't find him. He's gone fishing, way up in Aroostook County", the Inspector confessed. "And I'd rather have you than hire someone in town. You know less people—so they'll be less talk."

Aunt Millie had just finished her breakfast when we arrived at the house.

She seemed amused and intrigued by the idea of using the formal elegance of the drawing room as an "inquisition chamber" as she called it, and was full of suggestions of how to adapt it to its new purpose, and even more replete with questions about what was new in the murder house. Clucking her tongue over the "odd" footprints on the back porch, and raising her eyebrows over the still "odder" find of the dragon compact.

The next hour was spent in strenuous work interspersed with telephone calls — such as informing the Chief of Police of the shift into private quarters of Inspector Pettengill's office, and ordering a phone extension put in for him immediately.

A welcome interruption came in the person of Sergeant Flynn, who had found my compact. The right one, this time.

The Inspector took it from his subordinate's hand and examined it carefully. 'So you lost it outside, and not in the Burton house at all!" he commented dryly. "Could have saved yourself a peck of trouble had you started looking in the right place, young lady! I can see though how you would be fussed 'bout losing it. Pretty thing. Must be worth real money if all them stones is genuine. Well, here it is. Don't go losing it again."

With that he turned and suddenly bellowed at Flynn: "Okay, that's all. Go get Roberts. Miss Kay here is going to take down his deposition."

I had barely time to establish myself behind the desk we had improvised, from a sofa table and a chest of drawers, before Roberts was in the room, sulky looking as always, and wearing a new pair of gloves in honor of the occasion.

He recited his alibi as if he had learned it by heart — which was probably exactly what he had done.

He had left the Burton house right after us, to go to his room over the garage for "forty winks" and to change from his butler's outfit into ordinary clothes. At around five he had proceeded to his sister's house, for supper at six. Leaving immediately afterwards—at quarter of seven, he "guessed"—he had intended to go home, but had met an acquaintance who had dragged him into a tavern for a glass of beer. He had stayed there, in the company of at least five witnesses, whom he named, until seven — no guessing the hour this time—and then he had gone home.

"I just turned on the light in my room when Miss Burton's Aggy called to me from her kitchen," he explained. "Said she had half a pie would go stale if it warn't et, so I went acrost to get it, and set a while."

Later he had transferred his "setting" to our kitchen, where again something was sure to spoil unless he took pity on it. He didn't know the exact time of his change from the upper kitchen to the lower. Only that he had been on the point of returning to his own quarters when Aunt Millie and I had come in with the news of the murder.

"Hmmm. Sure you went straight from Aggy's kitchen to the one here? Didn't go over to the Burton house in between for a look around—at quarter to nine, say?" the Inspector inquired.

"Sure I did not," Roberts said stoically.

"Well, I'd like to be sure too," the Inspector told him. "Give a yell for no snake. I'd snotch him", denly seen a snake."

Roberts gaped at him. "I wouldn't yell for no snage. I'd scotch him," he said.

"Okay. Then—as if you seen a ghost, with a bloody face," the Inspector suggested as a happy alternative.

It did the trick. Roberts threw back his head and let out a howl of pure terror.

"That sound anything like what you heard?" the Inspector asked me.

I shook my head. "Nothing like it. It was much higher—shriller."

"Hmmm. I see." The Inspector nodded and turned back to Roberts. "Okay. You can stop your noise. After you heard of the murder, what you do then?"

"We-ell, then I thought I better akedaddle over to the house and turn on the 'lectricity, so you could see when you come."

"Took you quite a while, turning on one switch," the Inspector commented. "What else did you do, from the time Miss Kay told you of the murder—till I came?"

"Nothing," Roberts said sullenly. "Jes' took my time. I got no stummick for blood and vi'lence. So first I gone to the garage and picked up a wrench, case the murderer was still around, and then I sorta eased myself over."

"Through the unlocked rear door?"

"Nossir. Through the basement with me key. They's no door on the latch but the one," Roberts vouchsafed.

It did leave quite a gap, I thought when I read over my notes.

I had been upstairs with Aunt Millie a good fifteen minutes before the Inspector's arrival. My talk with him had consumed another ten—and the lights in the Burton house had only flared up when we were about to enter the house.

I had a pretty good idea of one thing Roberts had done in those minutes: He'd closed the window I had left open. But—why?

Felt So Tired; Irritable Until She Took Syntona

"Am Now So Much Better That Even My Work Seems Easier," Says Grateful Woman. Also Relieved Dizzy Spells and Backache, She Declares.

"I would like to tell every person suffering as I did about the good results I got by taking Syntona," said Mrs. Eleanor Boyd, 710 York Street, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.

"A few weeks ago I was feeling so tired and irritable all the time that I didn't know what to do. I had a nagging pain across my back and used to get so terribly dizzy at times. My tongue was coated and I had a bad taste in my mouth.

"I decided to try Syntona after a good friend of ours recommended it so highly and it has given me such good results that I am glad to tell others about it. Since I've been taking this medicine the dizziness and backache do not trouble me, my tongue has cleared up and I haven't that bad taste in my mouth. My appetite has improved. I enjoy more sound, restful sleep and whereas I used to be tired and irritable, I now feel so much better than even my work seems easier."

Let this great formula of Nature's Herbs and Roots help you as it has so many others. Syntona acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. It aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

INFECTION IN 'HORSING AROUND'

St. Thomas, June 5 — (CP) — "Horsing Around" proved so unhealthy for Director Trafford while taking part in a Y.M.C.A. skit presented at the R.C.A.F. technical training school that he was committed to hospital. He had been playing the part of one end of a horse and contact with the "horse covering" caused infection in one of his legs.

Add $10,300,000 To Inner Reserves

Hon. J. L. Ilsley Gives Information to Commons Banking Committee

Ottawa, June 6 —(AP)— In its report, issued in 1942, Canada's banks added a total of $10,300,000 to their general contingency and inner reserve accounts, Hon. J. L. Ilsley told the House of Commons Banking Committee today. This figure, said was one half of one per cent of the increase in their deposits.

In a long prepared statement the Minister of Finance outlined the actual amount of the inner reserves of each bank, by the amount by which they exceeded the paid-up capital.

He said after a careful review he had found the inner reserves of at least seven banks were clearly excessive, but that "in the case of two or three banks the allocations made at the end of the 1942 may have represented an undue degree of conservatism, and may possibly be drawn upon in the future." The seven banks he considered to have excessive reserves were: The Bank of Montreal 2-1 2 Canada 2-1 2 Commerce 2-1 2 Dominion 2-1 2 Imperial 2-1 2 Montreal 2-1 2 Nova Scotia 2-1 2 Toronto 1-1 2 Union 2-1 2

He said that the reserves of these banks to a level somewhat higher than was in fact called for by today's conditions and considering only their own requirements, but necessity as a reasonable safeguard against the probable contingencies of the future."

To provide Two Amendments to the Act.

Replying to earlier contentions by members of the committee, to the effect that the inner reserves

AUSTRALIA'S GENERAL BLAMEY IN OTTAWA

While in Ottawa, General Sir Thomas Blamey, G.B.E., C.M.G., D.S.O., Commander in Chief of the Australian Forces, conferred with the Chiefs of Staff of Canada's Navy, Army and Air Force. The meeting was held in the office of Air Marshal Robert Leckie, C.B., D.S.O., D.F.C., Chief of the Air Staff of the Royal Canadian Air Force. General Sir Blamey, veteran leader of Australian unity that fought in Crete, Greece, North Africa, and New Guinea, accompanied Australia's Prime Minister, John Curtin, on the return trip from the London conference of Empire Prime Ministers. Left to right: Vice Admiral G. C. Jones, Chief of the Naval Staff; Naval; Canadian Navy; Lieut.-General J. C. A Man From Berlin Answers Questions

By WALTER PAHL

In the London Daily Mail

I have just met a man from Berlin, a man who has just come out of Germany after living there for four years, who has seen every big Berlin raid, made a detailed study of many aspects of Germany at war, seen most of the devastated towns, lived among the "top" Nuns and the "top" Nuns, and had the confidence of some of the most influential of the Nazi leaders.

He is Swedish and bears one of the most famous names in Sweden. In my opinion, his integrity and judgment are first-class.

I told him that now we are on the eve of invading Europe, people of British and especially our invasion troops were to know the blunt facts about Germany and, above all, no wishful stuff, no vague theorizing.

I went to work very thoroughly on the man from Berlin. I grilled him for three hours, asked everything I thought you would like to know. He gave me straight-from-the-shoulder answers.

To make sure I missed no important point and got all his views clearly, two of my newspaper colleagues kept a record of the questions and answers, and often fired questions themselves.

Here is our Q. and A. on Germany as it is today—the Germany our troops will meet when invasion gets under way. . .

Most people seem convinced that the defeat of Germany is well within sight but how exactly do you think the crack-up of the Hitler regime will come?

The salient fact in the German political situation this week is that Hitler's popularity and prestige have seriously waned, especially recently. There is no doubt about this.

One of the things counting against him most is the fact that this man, who pretends to be leading his armies in the field, is, in fact, skulking far away from the war in his heavily guarded mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden, with its giant air-raid shelter in the form of a tunnel carved deep down in solid rock.

He has spent the past four to six months almost continuously at Berchtesgaden, suffering none of the air-raid periods being faced by the German people, sharing none of the dangers, hardly ever going near the east front or Berlin.

This, of course, was known to all the top Germans, but now it has become well known to millions of German masses.

* * *

Do you think this waning popularity and mounting military defeats will lead to eventual revolt and an attempt to overthrow Hitler? I don't think there will be revolution in the old-fashioned sense of the word. I expect a "second-hand" revolution following a breakdown in Nazi leadership caused by sharp differences among the Nazi chiefs. The gaps between them are widening, and eventually bring violent clashes.

It is important that, just as the German masses know that Hitler, after committing the Russian blunders, now hides away in Berchtesgaden, so they know now that Marshal Goring was the one man who was opposed to most of Hitler's decisions.

The German masses (firmly believe that Goring is wanted by Germany to go to war with Russia or to embark on the Balkan campaign. They are convinced he was in favor of keeping the Wehrmacht intact and using it as an instrument of policy, as a threat to help attain Germany's objectives without fighting.

All I have heard of Goering in the past four years convinces me of this. Goering is therefore, still popular with the German masses, although young men have relieved him of much of his power in the Luftwaffe.

I expect the clash among the German leaders to come to a head and break out into short, sharp revolt when Allied armies in western Europe have been followed by deep thrusts towards Germany proper and still unlike a key.

Thus, despite Russia's tremendous contribution, the actual weakness of delivering the coup de grace falls to the troops now waiting in Britain.

What are the chances of a German Army revolt?

German Army leaders, though many hate the Hitler regime, don't do anything drastic until it is plain that the Allies have swept across occupied countries and are about to enter Germany proper.

They need to be defeated much more completely than they are at the present.

What about Field Marshal Rundstedt, commanding the forces in France? What are the chances of his breaking with Hitler and handing over to the Allies?

Rundstedt is a first class general of the old Prussian school, and would undoubtedly like to fling Hitler out, but he is a poor politician and, regarding the whole question of Germany's future, is rather inclined to adopt a shilly-shallying attitude, which I notice among so many German aristocrats.

A man worth watching, if you are considering an eventual revolt or the Wehrmacht, is General Kurt Zeitzler, Chief of Staff of the Wehrmacht.

Zeitzler at one time had the reputation of being Hitler's stooge. In fact, he is not. He is a very efficient general who made his way up thru the General Staff by hard work and brains.

He is physically short and rounded and his nickname is "The Thunderbolt."

Zeitzler is the German General Staff's "retreat expert". It was he who successfully planned the first German Winter line in Russia.

He is directing the new retreat in store for the German Army — and will do it well. He will know when the hour for the Allies' final break-through is near.

He is a Wehrmacht man and might well be the type to lead a Wehrmacht revolt. But remember, when you talk of a Wehrmacht revolt, that there are strong grounds for saying the German Army can hold out certainly until next Winter, and possibly until the following Winter.

The Allies have worn them down, but there is still great power there.

How do Germans feel about the Invasion?

The morale of the German troops is high. On the home front the average German civilian is convinced that Germany cannot win the war. But Goebbels' propaganda has succeeded in convincing him that the German Army can fight off Allied invasion.

He certainly does not yet feel any sense of catastrophobia. If the German Army can force us into a war of position in Western Europe the average German civilian is ready to fight on indefinitely.

Vaguely he thinks that by doing so something might turn up that will save his skin — some sort of compromise peace.

He knows the prospect of Allied invasion calmly and is sure the German army can parry it.

Is there any hope of knocking Germany out by aerial bombing?

No! The damage inflicted is terrific. So is the dislocation caused by the destruction of important installations. The raids have brought about a gigantic slow-down, but they have not permanently smashed morale, or anything like it.

The four years and during all this latest massive raids I have seen no real panic among Germans.

You should continue with raids and step them up, but do not expect they can smash up the whole country. There are too many factories scattered in too many places.

As an instance of the dislocation caused by raids, if you post a letter in Berlin in one part of Berlin now addressed to another part of the capital, it takes seven days to get there.

One of the best examples of effective Allied bombing is the job the bombers did on the big electrical manufacturing centre of Siemenstadt, in Berlin.

Although much of this has now been built underground, I know, from first-hand data, its production has now reduced by between 50 and 70 percent; I know also that, due to bomb damage, there was no output of electrical motors from Siemenstadt from March, 1945, until last November.

Berlin and about 100 other German towns have been laid waste. But, in assessing what the picture of Germany's really like, it must be realized that there are 2,500 towns of considerable size in Germany.

One of the most important aspects of bombing on the Individual German is that it is gradually tiring him out physically.

In Berlin long stretches of the railways are almost permanently out of commission, due to bombing, and that means that tens of thousands of people must walk to and from work for weeks.

Bombing plays wild havoc with the telephone system. Whole sections of the telephone network have been knocked out and did not get put right for months. That means walking miles instead of phoning to get things done. Many 'phones are permanently cut off.

Is there any real opposition to Hitler forming?

No organized opposition. The most powerful opposition in the Reich is still the Church.

The bishops continue to be outspoken against the regime and to get away with it. The bishops bide their time and wait for the psychological moment to become more violent in their opposition to Nazism.

The following of the Church has greatly increased recently.

The second most powerful opposition is made up of Communists. They are numerous, and I don't think it any exaggeration to say that there are ten million Communist-minded people in Germany now. But they work sporadically and have little unity.

How should we deal with the Germans once we have beaten them?

That is a tough question; but I would say this: Don't forget that, even at the very moment the Germans are struggling to cope with massive attacks from all sides, they are planning for the next war.

Planning's arrangements are, to my certain knowledge, being made to "bury" key members of the Oe-

Electric Storms Cause Damage In P.E. County

Picton, June 4 — Damage in Pr. Edward County during Friday night's severe electrical storm included the burning of a barn, loss of a dairy-house by fire, slight damage to a church spire, damage to hydro transformers, several trees struck.

The heaviest loss was sustained by Clare McCormick on a farm he owns at Bongards Corners. The large frame structure was a total loss, along with 700 apple hampers, 15 tons hay, 250 cradles, a rake, disc plow. Neighbors rescued pigs, a calf and a wagon from the blazing structure. The bolt struck a machine shed attached to the barn, and flames spread rapidly. Three houses and a church are directly opposite. Across the road, but were not endangered as the wind fanned flames and sparks in the opposite direction.

A drive house on the farm of Dr. S. H. Rollin, on Glenora Road, and owned by Theodore Sexsmith, was struck and burned. Used as a storehouse, it contained a variety of articles.

On the steeple of the old Church of St. Mary Magdalene was struck and a number of shingles torn off. It did not injure the edifice, but now used, is closely linked with the history of the town. Two bolts of fire were seen by residents of that district, on Church Street.

Damage to several transformers were blown out. One near the Roman Catholic church plunged the town into darkness and service in the church was conducted by candlelight.

There were four casualties when Mr. and Mrs. J. Wasa's lawn, West Main St., was hit. The house was a two-storey, cut-stone structure, featherd friends.

A home of Fred Lawrence was cut on the farm of John L. Mitchell caught fire, it was a three apple tree in full leaf. The electrical discharge set fire to a hollow section and it presented a strange sight as smoke poured up through the leaves during a heavy rain.

Ernest Pierson, Hillier farmer, reported a horse killed while in a pasture field.

The rain was of much benefit to growing crops. The storm was short but very severe.

Contractor Adds Two Outstanding Holsteins to Herd

Picton, June 6 — Harvey J. McFarland has added two more outstanding animals to his Holstein herd at Far Land Farm, Picton. He made Holstein history when he paid $2,500 for "Lisa" Wonderful Lady, an eleven-months-old heifer calf at the Canadian National Exhibition on May 31st. This was the highest price paid at the Exhibition sale.

Mr. McFarland also purchased Woodland Bessie Burke Posch, a two-year-old heifer from George M. Van Tyler of Aylmer, at $1,275. She is a sister of the world champion producer, Sweetholme Rag Apple Posch.

The 61 animals sold at this sale average $633.33. The highest national figure since 1920. The 46 females averaged $691.30, and 15 bulls $466.76. Eight head brought more than $1,000.

"Wonderful Lady" is a beautiful individual and is ready to breed. She is being noted as one of the greatest producing cows in the Dominion. Her sire on both sides of pedigree she traces to the famous foundation bull, Carnation Sir Posch Apple Pabst.

This is the fourth outstanding animal purchased by Mr. McFarland from Hays and Co. of Caledonia.

Hays' Wonderful Lady is the youngest daughter of Lady Bessie Hay's Snowden Lady, the world's greatest living 4-year-old producing 128,119 pounds of 4.08 per cent milk.

Her sire is Hays' Little Joe whose dam made 125,826 pounds of milk 4,801 pounds of fat in seven lactations, including an 820-lb. fat record at four years, and her sire in turn made 861 lbs. fat. His get has proven themselves big producers and high testers.

Both her grandmother, Montvie Rag Apple De Kol' and Montvie Rag Apple Echoe, are sons of Johanna Rag Apple Pabst. She is a full sister to the noted sire, Hays' Sensation and Hays' High Time.

Of this heifer the breeders state, "We believe we have bred only one Hays heifer that was Hays' Wonderful Lady."

The heifer, Woodland Designer Hengerveld, is 2-year-old, is due in August to the service of Glenafton Glengarry Pabst, son of Markzman who topped the 1943 sensational sale in Brantford. Designer, son of Colony Fayne Sir Hengerveld, 797-lb. fat daughter of Paul's Her dam is Woodland Hartog Schilling Gift (Sweetie) whose dam was a 1943 Honor List producer with 13,891 pounds milk, 4.96 per cent, 872-lb. fat on three times-a-day milking.

Other Purchases.

Mr. McFarland's first purchase from Hays and Co. was "Hays' Great Journey," a son of the 32-lb. the all-Canadian sale.

Since then, Mr. McFarland purchased from the same herd, (H) two outstanding heifers. They are Hays Lady Bessie Posch and Hays' Rag Apple De Kol, 96 lbs. fat in 305 days at two years and 21 days; 21 lbs. fat in 60 days as six years, and is out of a 112,000 pound cow.

Mr. McFarland has the nucleus of a great herd in these four animals alone. His herd is already outstanding and should be heard from in future. It is pointed Prince Edward County on the map as a Holstein centre.

Shifts, Dismissals In Liquor Stores

Toronto, June 6 — (CP) — There have been "shifts and dismissals" of employees in liquor stores throughout the province, Victor Goggin, Chief Commissioner of Liquor Control Board of Ontario, said yesterday. The Commissioner said that the dismissals were for "irregularities" but he declined to be specific to elaborate. He would not say what stores were affected. The commissioner reported that there were dismissals in Toronto because store staffs had given customers more liquor than their monthly ration.

Looking Ahead In Ottowa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, June 5 (CP) — Possible effect of the invasion of Europe on gasoline supplies available to Canadian motorists has become a matter of speculation but there is no indication here that any ratio changes are likely.

It is known that the gasoline situation continues to be tight. Munitions Minister Howe has repeatedly said that the present ration of three gallons per month does not carry any guarantee and may have to be changed at any time to meet new demands.

On the other hand, some observers lean to the opinion that gasoline demands are already at or near their peak.

Manpower: General tightening of Selective Service manpower controls is expected to follow a recent conference of regional directors in Ottawa.

Similar meetings have been held periodically but with the manpower situation now tighter than ever, it is understood emphasis was placed on enforcement of the regulations at the recent meeting.

Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, had previously announced that the number of prosecutions for violation of the job control measures was increasing. This, he said, was the result of a closer check rather than an increase in infractions.

2ND CANADIAN DIV. REINFORCED SAYS NAZI RADIO

This Division Took Part in Dieppe Attack in August, 1942

NO CONFIRMATION

London, June 7. — (CP Cable) — The German DNB Agency was quoted today by Reuters News Agency as saying that the 2nd Canadian Infantry Division in the Allied Beachhead in Northern France was considerably reinforced during the night.

This first identification of a Canadian unit was not immediately confirmed by Allied or Canadian sources.

There was no identification by the Allies of the Canadian formations which went ashore in France as the invasion was launched.

It was the 2nd Canadian Division which provided the men who landed at Dieppe in August, 1942, in a reconnaissance in force, designed to probe enemy defenses in Northern France.

Speaking of troops landed near the River Orne, which flows into the English Channel just north of the City of Caen, the German Agency asserted,

"Although the formations which landed here, which comprise small forces of the 6th British airborne division, were mostly wiped out, and the 7th and 8th British Tank Divisions, the 50th British Infantry Division and the 2nd Canadian Infantry Divisions were considerably reinforced during the night, they failed to include Caen in the bridgehead position."

None of the Allied dispatches today gave any idea of operations here been identified by Allied sources as yet.

CHILD DROWNS IN POND

Trenton, June 7 — (CP) — Marc Battle, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Battle of Seeley's Bay, Carleton, drowned yesterday in four feet of water in a pond. He was playing up on a small dam at the end of the pond and fell when he lost his balance as he tried to pick up a pebble.

Munro Gives Graphic Description of Trip With Troops to France

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With Canadian Forces Landing in France, June 7 — (CP Cable) — Canada's assault forces bounced through the stormy sea in landing craft yesterday and in broad day light stormed the French beaches and battled their way inland.

There was some stiff opposition on certain sections of this particular beach but 1¼ hours after the landing, reports of success came in rapidly to this headquarters ship.

One Canadian regiment after another flashed back messages that it was advancing through the coastal defence strip, part of the German so-called west wall. Hard fighting was expected inland, however, but the Canadian forces expected that.

A number of enemy strongpoints on the beach area resisted and they were being fired on by naval craft.

The big surprise in the second front attack was that it went in during daylight.

Six-foot Waves

(Another dispatch from Munro reported that in two hours and 45 minutes' flighting the Canadians won their beachhead and showed on inland. Some still fighting was met in the little coastal towns, Munro added.)

The heavy sea running off the French coast was not what authorities wanted but the attack went in anyway and the small assault craft plunged headlong through six-foot-high waves to reach the beaches and land troops.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 ships and craft of many types participated and for miles along the French coast this fleet was lying off-shore, pouring men, supplies and vehicles ashore.

Earlier, naval bombardment and air force bombing blasted the French coast until it shuddered. From the deck of this ship I watched the whole incredible armada from start to the finish and never have I witnessed anything so tremendous in any seagoing attack.

As we were crossing the Channel, R.A.F. heavy bombers struck at the beach defences and specific targets up and down the coastline. When daylight came, United States medium bombers took over the attack and hundreds of planes dropped high explosives all along the beaches.

After that, United States medium bombers went in with a roar that drowned out the sound of the naval gunfire and struck other targets.

I saw gigantic flashes along the coast as the bombs exploded.

Cruisers started off the naval bombardment, which was by far the heaviest naval shelling of the war. For 45 minutes, hundreds of guns were shelling without a let-up. The coast was clouded with smoke as warships, destroyers, gunboats and support craft piled up and down the coast and hit every target that could be seen.

Gun Objectives on Time.

Under cover of this colossal barrage, Canadian infantry and engineers in the first assault wave plunged through the white-capped channel-water in small landing craft and the first regiment touched down early.

Other units followed in rapid succession, some coming under heavy machinegun fire and shelling. They fought their way ashore and gained their first objectives on scheduled time.

Allied tanks also landed with the assault forces and went into action with the infantry.

The deliberation with which the whole invasion fleet slipped off the coasts after dawn and formed up for the assault was astounding. The Navy had everything under control and there wasn't the slightest interference in the early part of the morning from enemy surface craft.

Fighter patrols were over the fleet right from daylight and no enemy aircraft appeared. Spitfires and American fighters carried out

Invasion Forces Repulse German Counter-Attacks In Caen Area of France

Since June 1 Allied Air Forces Fly 71,000 Sorties

Heavy Fighting Inland

Supreme Advance Command Post, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 —(CP)— Allied troops have struck inland in France in heavy fighting, repulsing Nazi counterblows near Caen nine miles from the coast, after clearing the enemy from all their landing beaches and linkinh up some of the beachheads.

Reports from the Cherbourg peninsula invasion front showed "decided improvement" at midday, and the Allies are making "considerable progress on the whole front" despite bad weather and stiffening resistance, a headquarters officer said.

Both sides dropped airborne troops into the flaming battle front, with Allied parachutists and glider troops pouring down early today from a 50-mile-long reinforcing sky train.

Caen is at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, and southwest of Le Havre.

Midday Reports Improved.

Headquarters said front reports showed improvement by midday after being "disappointing" early this morning.

Through the initial beachheads—which the Germans asserted extended over more than a 50-mile-stretch—have been cleared and some linked with those nearby, a few may still be under German artillery fire.

Air headquarters declared the Allied air forces in mammoth support of the invasion thrust had flown more than 71,000 sorties between June 1 and last night.

The huge numbers of airborne Allied troops seized key positions and helped throw back Nazi tank-led counter-blows. The Germans likewise rushed in parachutists.

For four months the Germans have been building an airborne army for just this purpose, led by Lt.-Gen. Kurt Student who engineered the landings in Crete. R.A.F. Mosquitos last night destroyed five Junkers-52 troop carriers.

Reuters news agency recorded a German DNB agency report which asserted that the 2nd Canadian Infantry was in the fighting. The enemy report—unconfirmed immediately by any Allied source—said this division was in the beachhead area and was considerably reinforced during the night.

Allies Hold Bridges North of Caen.

In New York the British Information Service said the British airborne 6th Division has captured and is holding bridges north of Caen.

The Germans asserted they beat off new landing attempts near Calais, 150 miles northeast of Cherbourg, but later their reports indicated German coastal guns merely fired at Allied ships in the area, and there were no indications Supreme Headquarters was trying to invade there.

Allied invasion task forces have been sailing in feints post many points, keeping the Germans in doubt where the next landings would come.

Various unconfirmed reports said penetrations had been made as deep as 12 miles at some places, but the fighting was so confused it was doubtful if any regular lines were established. Reported Field Marshal Rommel was rushing up reserves of the German 7th and 15th armies.

"Satisfactory progress" is being made in the historic invasion continuing under thundering blows by great sea and sky fleets, headquarters said, and cautious officers described the tricky air-borne operations as "a complete success."

Great bomber fleets droned out to blast Nazi defences and troops today, possibly in strength equalling or surpassing the stupendous total of 13,000 sorties yesterday.

Pilots reported a great ring of fires at Lisieux, south of Le Havre, and a sinister glow over Caen, where Prime Minister Churchill had reported fighting in the streets. Caen is nine miles inland and southwest of Le Havre.

Berlin dispatches to Stockholm asserted six Allied airborne divisions totalling 26,000 men had been landed since Tuesday morning.

13,000 SORTIES FLOWN TUESDAY TO COVER TROOPS

Stream of Bombs Dropped on German Forces Moving to Front

WORK BEYOND FRONT

By W. W. HERCHEER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 7. (AP)—Allied air forces, taking supreme command of the air over invaded France, flew more than 13,000 sorties from dawn yesterday until dawn today in support of assault forces and surged out a like number in new attacks beyond the beachhead.

Tuesday night more than 1,000 heavy R. A. F. and U. S. bombers poured a stream of explosives upon German reinforcements moving toward the fighting front. As they returned United States raiders headed out over Dover Strait toward the small portion of France which has been neglected.

Sun broke through rain-clouds as the formations swung out.

Night crews found the sky moonlit over the battle area, with patches of cloud. Through clear spots they saw a misery traffic of ships crossing the channel in both directions.

Over France fires flickered and the air was cut by arcs of star shells.

Because of unfavorable weather and a determination to put their bombs where they will count most, almost all types of Allied aircraft operated at lower levels than usual. Almost total lack of opposition in the air made these tactics possible although danger from anti-aircraft fire increased and was severe.

Mighty Demonstration.

Never before had the world seen such a mighty demonstration of air power.

The measure of the almost incredibly weak opposition from the German Air Force was indicated in the loss of 18 R. A. F. and Canadian fighters and 11 American heavy bomber and 17 Allied fighters. Yesterday 53 enemy planes were destroyed.

The Allies maintained constant fighter patrol over a 60-mile square of France, with Le Havre approximately at its northeast corner. At least 200 fighters were protecting Headquarters was trying to invade there.

Allied invasion task forces have been sailing in feints post many points, keeping the Germans in doubt where the next landings would come.

Various unconfirmed reports said penetrations had been made as deep as 12 miles at some places, but the fighting was so confused it was doubtful if any regular lines were established. Reported Field Marshal Rommel was rushing up reserves of the German 7th and 15th armies.

"Satisfactory progress" is being made in the historic invasion continuing under thundering blows by great sea and sky fleets, headquarters said, and cautious officers described the tricky air-borne operations as "a complete success."

Great bomber fleets droned out to blast Nazi defences and troops today, possibly in strength equalling or surpassing the stupendous total of 13,000 sorties yesterday.

Pilots reported a great ring of fires at Lisieux, south of Le Havre, and a sinister glow over Caen, where Prime Minister Churchill had reported fighting in the streets. Caen is nine miles inland and southwest of Le Havre.

Berlin dispatches to Stockholm asserted six Allied airborne divisions totalling 26,000 men had been landed since Tuesday morning.

Some figures on the invasion of France:

Thirteen thousand individual flights were made by Allied planes in the first day of invasion. Prime Minister Churchill said 11,000 planes were available. On the seas were 4,000 ships and many more lighter craft.

More than 900 C-47 troop transports and gliders were used in the opening blow. The "train," nine planes wide, was 200 miles long as it went across the English Channel 300 feet above the water. Today another "train," 50 miles long, poured in reinforcements.

Newsman Describes His Impressions Of Trip to France With Canadians

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

With Allied Invasion Forces, June 5 —(CP Cable)—(delayed)— We are sailing for France with the invasion forces in the greatest military operation of all time.

It was a cool, grey evening and the surface of the choppy sea is strung for miles with hundreds of invasion ships, all headed across the Channel.

The first ships to set out on the water-borne crusade raised anchor this morning. They are slower ships carrying tanks and other heavy equipment.

Departure of invasion shipping in blue and grey war paint went on all day though the weather looked anything but invasion weather.

As the ships slid in long lines from the harbor they were so numerous they looked like an orderly assortment of stepping stones which disappeared over the horizon.

I was with the Canadians who spent the time waiting for their departure checking and rechecking their equipment.

On the little ship on which I am sailing with the headquarters of an assault formation there were exercises in transferring to much smaller craft which will take us ashore.

The army and naval men on our ships are old friends. They have been on several exercises together.

As the ship got under way a Canadian sergeant came around and told them: "Here is the dope. We are sailing for France to open the second front."

Later maps and little booklets on France were issued and the men given the general invasion plans.

There was no cheering either from the seamen or the soldiers.

The news was a relief to most because it had been so long in coming.

The view of most was expressed by a 30-year-old soldier: "I am in an assault role . . . My only worry is about the first half hour. If I get through that, I know I'll be okay."

The great event didn't dim the spirits of the men, though there were countless jokes about the invasion, most printable epithets and predicaments.

As we got under way army officers and men went to their bunks to catch a precious match of sleep. Very few slept immediately but all seemed calmer. The ship's previous slight roll was refused to a slight sway.

Our little group in the wardroom, where I dozed on two chairs, was awakened about 4 a.m. with news of flares visible in the sky over the starboard quarter.

Reports today indicate a slightly improved by doctors who have attended him, and he is resting localized. The patient, however, is still not out of danger, it was stated.

DENY KNOWLEDGE OF OWNERSHIP

When city police raided Victoria Park to investigate an alleged drinking party yesterday afternoon their efforts were not exactly in high vain. the law suppose, when Joseph Turcott of Kingston on a charge of failing to produce his motorist registration card and also nestled the police empty beer bottles, found strewn about the ground. Turcott, was remanded in custody to await trial today.

When police arrived at Victoria Park arrests could have been sitting nonchalantly about on park benches and the bandstand. Not that it is surprised when all denied knowledge of the bottles. But the 24 empty beer bottles happened to be lying around on the ground some distance from where the men were sitting enjoying the cool bay breezes.

SPECIAL MASS AT ST. MICHAEL'S ON INVASION DAY

The church bell of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel resounded at seven o'clock on Tuesday morning, a clear denotion that "D Day" had come at last. For the second time during the war, hope, there was special Mass at eight o'clock which was attended by large congregation. At four o'clock in the afternoon, a large congregation also attended the Mass of the Rosary, followed by Benediction. At 7.30 o'clock last evening the Rosary was recited and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed. Throughout the remainder of the day services were conducted in all city churches, including those of other faiths. Many thousand of local residents over the safety of troops taking part in the invasion forces. Special prayers in the church in the city was crowded to the doors with worshippers and prayers were offered for the success of the Allied armies in the battle for liberation of the oppressed peoples of the world.

GLENORA RESIDENT PICKS WILD BERRIES

Hurried by the rapid growing season, berries are already ripening in May, wild strawberries are already ripening in the woods. The first berries of the season being picked this week by Miss Mary Cowan, Glenora, who has already picked the berries in the vicinity of Wary's Mountain. Her reports state that the potent that there was about a box full in the berries picked.

According to reports of district farmers the berry crop in the Bellville district this year will be a light one as vines were heavily winter-killed.

PAPER CARTONS USED TO PACK EGGS

Illustrating another use to which paper is being put as the result of the war, the Canada Packers Limited is the appearance of paper cartons for use as egg crates. The new cartons are to be used by the shippers as the result of inability to procure the required numbers of wooden crates. New wooden crates are practically impossible to buy, according to local egg dealers.

The new paper cartons being used as egg crates are of both 18 dozen and 30 dozen size, with the smaller type claimed to be fairly satisfactory. The 30-dozen cartons are said not to be right enough and require careful handling. It is claimed that there is now greater quantities of eggs in storage than normally at this time of year is in some measure responsible for the shortage of the conventional wooden type egg crates, it was stated.

Jury Recommends Better Lighting At Coal Chutes

A verdict of accidental death was returned by Coroner Dr. Leslie Ketcheson at the Ontario Hydro-Electric Railway coal chutes, Belleville, when the jury at the inquest into the death of Frederick Lennox, 19, Belleville, on May 26th, brought in a verdict of accidental death.

The jury also recommended better lighting at the coal chutes and that the railway company should provide a watchman at the chutes during the night.

Constable Thos. Thorne, who investigated the accident, told the jury that he found the body of the deceased lying between the coal chutes and the railway tracks. The position the body was found between the rails, indicated that the deceased had been struck by a train. Pope had started to run down the tracks to catch the outgoing coal car, when the accident occurred, Constable Thorne said. H. E. locomotive foreman, told of the type of work Pope was employed at as a coal heaver. Mr. G. Cook, fireman on a yard engine, told of first finding the body, after the accident. Provincial Constable Jas. Driscoll also testified.

After returning a verdict of accidentally death the jury added a recommendation that the type of work at the coal chute was too dangerous for employees, that it had been established that Pope was but 19 years of age, that the jury recommended better lighting facilities be established on the coal chute and that the Belleville east and yards after it had been stated there was no lighting at the point where the fatality occurred.

The coroner's jury empanelled by Constable Thos. Thorne included the following:—Timothy Sullivan (foreman), F. J. Hibbert, James Bennett, Fred Chamberlain and G. D. Wider.

POLICE COURT

Given 3 Months For Bike Theft

When it was established that 22-year-old William Shortt of Bonarlaw had previously been convicted of bicycle stealing in a Kingston court, Shortt was given three months in jail by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd after he was convicted of bicycle stealing in police court here yesterday.

There have been altogether too many bicycles stolen in Belleville and although for the greater part they are taken for joy-riding purposes this practice causes no end of trouble for owners, Constable Thorne pointed out Crown Attorney R. D. Donnan K. C. as he asked for a jail term.

Held in Custody.

Cecil Lennox, 16 who resides on West Moira St., appeared before the court charged with the theft of $18.00 from the person of J. M. Ferguson. The charge of having liquor not obtained on his individual permit was also heard. Both men were held over for a day during which time Lennox will be held in custody on remand.

Four barristers, one a woman, paid the convention fine and cost after being convicted on charges of intoxication.

KIDS QUITE EXPENSIVE

Kitchener, June 7 — (CP) — Attempting to kiss a pretty member of the CWAC while the latter was on sentry duty at the gate in the training centre here, brought Roger Lamonte of Montreal choice of a $10 fine or 30 days in jail from Magistrate F. B. Polson today. The charge was vagrancy.

Constables Assist In Rescuing Cat

Thanks to the foresight and ingenuity of Police Constables Wm. Evans and Wilfred Johnson, a Mrs. Smith's cat still retains its nine lives.

It appears that just a few minutes before the crack o' dawn the other morning two of the Celestial's were walking up and down West Bridge Street between the corners and the eastern approach of the lower city bridge, when to the ear of the family kitty, they sorrowfully told the constables.

Yes, they knew where it was but they were at a loss to rescue the fuzzy or the scared feline.

The kitty was mewing plaintively from a lonely perch on the top of the bridge, when the officers strolled by. Constable Evans, a fine animal lover, was safe in her Chinese master's arms.

As we looked out from the deck, someone said "looks like Scarborough."

A little later in the wardroom as officer came with a secret anti-aircraft fire visible from the port side. Soon he returned to report to a breakfast of cereal, liver and bacon, browned potatoes and coffee.

A little later: Two columns of black smoke are visible on the shore. Bombers can be seen flying in to targets in front of us. Flashes and thuds of bombs exploding can be felt right through the ship and have killed hundreds of the silver fish which are floating on the water.

Our ship is shuddering gently from the vibration from the concussion of other ships' guns.

Other special and secret combined operations bombardment units are sliding slowly shoreward in their landing craft with spectacular fire, while ships carrying troops prepare to lower assault forces away.

Welcome! Spitfires are patrolling the skies.

It's seven o'clock in the morning now and the infantry ships have stopped their motor boats for the bobbing trip to the beaches. The water is rough enough for plenty of seasickness.

Obituary

JOHN A. VICKERS
(Formerly of Bellville)

The late Mr. Vickers was born in Belleville, and early in life entered the service of the Grand Trunk Railway, where he remained for many years. He retired in the city many years ago, and resided there until his death. He was well known, highly respected and his many friends regret his death has brought such regret. Twenty-five years ago he left Toronto to settle in Belleville.

In religion Mr. Vickers was a member of the Church of England and while living here was a parishioner of St. Thomas' Church. Fraternally he was a Sir, member of Moira Lodge No. 11, A.F. & A.M.

Surviving him are four sons, Frederick, Ray and Lorne, all of Belleville, and Harold of Winnipeg; a sister, Mrs. Robert Oldham, Belleville, and a brother in England, and a brother in Kingston.

Funeral of the late John A. Vickers of Forest Home, 36 Everett Street, Belleville, with interment announcement will be made on Thursday.

Late MRS. W. HAROLD REID

In the chapel at the Martin Funeral Home, Belleville, this morning at 10:30 o'clock a funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. G. Hornsby, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, for the late Mrs. Nettie Allen (McKenzie) Reid, wife of Sgt. Pte. W. Harold Reid, formerly of Belleville, who died in Quebec City on Saturday, May 27th. Relatives were present at the service.

The late Mrs. Reid's yesterday service was conducted in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Quebec City, by the Rev. W. Harold Reid, M. A. is the minister. To the congregation of that church the late Mrs. Harold Reid has occasioned much sorrow by her death, and also to the work of the various organizations in connection with the church, where she had a high place in the regard of all who knew her.

Interment took place in Belleville Cemetery, the service there being conducted this (Wed.) afternoon by. The bearers were Mr. A. R. Cameron, Mr. Fred Wilson, Mr. Wyatt, Mr. H. B. Stock, Mr. Alf. F. O. Chamberlain and Mr. R. D. Arnott, K. C.

MILTON VANDUSEN (Picton)

Picton, June 7.—The death occurred on Monday here yesterday of Milton VanDusen who for the past 26 years has been identified with the automobile agency business. He was working in the garden when he was taken ill, mother, Mrs. D. F. VanDusen, when stricken with heart attack, passing away a few days previously. He had not previously been ill and his death came as a great shock.

Milton VanDusen was widely known, having been agent for General Motors since 1918, and in recent years a representative of Trudeau Motor Sales of Belleville.

Born here 63 years ago, he spent some years in the west. He was an active sportsman and boatman. He was a member of the United Church. His wife, D. F. VanDusen died some years ago as did his sister, Mrs. Charlton Metcalfe. Besides his mother he is survived by his wife, two sons, Keith of Picton, Mac in the R.C.A.F., Corp. Suggests Churches be Asked To Urge Voluntary Tests

Toronto, June 7. (CP)—Recommendation that Presbyterian churches be asked to urge voluntary pre-marital physical examinations is made in the report of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service and Work to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Meetings of the Assembly begin today and continue into next week.

The board said, however, that it does not favor approaching the state on this question and it also disapproves compulsion. It asks the provincial government to make provision for civil marriage ceremonies.

patrols, however.

In mid-morning the sea began to calm. Skies were clouds and high wind which threatened to upset the invasion timetable. However, the way to clearing skies while the wind moderated.

Off the Normand Coast.

After the landing, destroyers cruised about and turned their bows to-ward the beach, firing salvoes before leaving away at the last sign of enemy troops on the beach. Smoke drifted over the coast, partly covering the green fields and trees.

A heavy swell was running which made the landing craft pitch and toss, while cops. A rough landing for the assault troops was in prospect.

Commander Lapd

Small craft carrying Commandos bobbed past us, nosing deep into the waves. Then they were going in land.

The infantry landing ships, carrying the assault troops, moved in a point near us. Troops got into their landing craft and were lowered into the rough sea. The landing craft were then driven shoreward the beaches about five miles away, churning through the waves. The landing was finished.

Here we were within sight of the French coast in broad daylight and the navy was going about its job as methodically as if it were practising off the British coast.

At 6:30, the sun appeared getting clear and, although the haze broke through the clouds for a while, the day darkened again and rain came and it looked like rain. The channel was still being as fraish as ever.

A few Spitfires hung over the fleet and then 800 of them came flying south, causing scores of men to look up with grim satisfaction. American fighters roared past us too and our German interest was aroused by "Beats Sky Ott."

Naval Operations Successful Beyond All Expectations

Allied Fleet Dominated Invasion Routes Across Channel

CASUALTIES LIGHT

London, June 7 — (CP)—Successful beyond all expectation in the first round of the huge invasion task, a great combined fleet of British, American and Canadian naval vessels dominated invasion routes across the English Channel today, protecting the masses of men and matching rushed to support yesterday's assault landings.

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, R. N., Allied naval Commander-in-Chief, declared his forces were 100 per cent successful in the convoy job against an anticipated loss of 10 per cent of the assault forces.

"We have won the first round," Sir Bertram said confidently. "We can see no sign that the enemy will be in a position to beat us in the second round."

He added it was "remarkable" that the Allied had lost only a few combat ships and this did not affect the result of the initial invasion assaults.

The British light cruiser Scylla—heroine of many a sea-fight—flew the flag of Rear Admiral Sir Philip Vian, task-force commander of the task forces engaged.

Also reported in action were the British battleships Nelson, Ramillies and Warspite, and cruisers Glasgow, Enterprise and Black Prince.

Canadian Destroyers Take Part

The H.C.M.C. destroyers Qu'Appelle and Algonquin also took part in the operation.

American vessels named were the cruisers Augusta and Tuscaloosa, and the battleships Nevada, Texas and Arkansas.

Six battleship ships blasted the Nazi shore defences with a hurricane of fire, pounding away with every thing from 16-inch rifles to four-inchers, pumping 2,000 tons of shells every 10 minutes to prepare the way for the landings.

As the land forces dashed through gaps blasted in the Germans' beach obstacle belt, the Allied ships ploughed on to shatter other defences miles inland coast. Truly Allied Navy Show Polish, Dutch, Norwegian, French and Greek ships joined to make it a truly Allied naval show.

After the Allied ships did their work the Channel swarmed with landing craft, of every description, bearing men and all the varied equipment and munitions needed for modern warfare.

It was said officially that naval casualties were very light.

"Our plan was a set piece of such momentous size that there was no room for should reach the other side," said Admiral Ramsay. "There was no opposition whatever until the paratroopers landed on the other side, when the German coastal batteries opened up. Their opposition was much less than we anticipated. This is a very good augury for the future."

CLARK'S MESSA GE TO FIFTH ARMY

Rome, June 7 — (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Clark, in a congratulatory message to British, American and French divisions of the Fifth Army, said today that through capture of Rome "you have again preserved you form a great Allied fighting team ready to launch new assaults on other objectives. These will be between us and complete victory."

Early Hours of Invasion Seemed Too Easy To Be True Says Newsman

By TOM YARBROUGH
Associated Press War Correspondent

Aboard the British destroyer Codrington off the beach coast of France, June 7—(AP)—This little ship with four 4-inch guns is going back to England now after spending 12 incredible hours in the front rank phase of the initial invasion of France.

From where we sat—about a mile and a half off shore—it seemed too easy and too smooth to be true. The men of this ship thank God—several of them told me so—that it went well as it did the first day, though they know full well the hardest part is to come. Even it's still almost incredible, though, that the force of men and ships spent 12 hours within easy shooting distance of German-occupied France and did not encounter a single German plane or ship.

With strong binoculars I saw thousands of men and machines tumble safely across beaches bristling with ugly spikes driven into the sand at crazy angles and topped with mines.

Here are the ailient highlights of what occurred around us.

At 7:29 this morning 27-year-old Lieut. William D. O'Brien, R. N., his eyes fixed on the beach, said, "the first vehicles are touching ground. This is H-hour now."

Opposition was so weak generally—thanks to the seemingly complete tactical surprise—that this ship and others were still using the 4-inch guns after the main targets were available. One enemy shell exploded within about 50 feet of us, but caused no damage.

Landing troops moved across the beaches and advanced about 300 yards inland before noon, pushing ahead "like locusts" one officer said, leaving up from the shore. Our sector included little Normandy towns with Caen farther back from the beaches already immediately out of the Cherbourg peninsula.

At the height of the assault a pall of black and gray smoke hung over the beaches in an area of five or six miles and six times whole towns appeared to be burning. We could see our own troops moving but we couldn't make out figures of Germans or Frenchmen with certainty because of civilians had been moved out long before. Windows of many buildings were blacked up as if to fortify them.

The War Today— Other Allied Landings Possible To Throw the Enemy Off Balance

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Hitler's undoubtedly powerful Atlantic wall, which he has long vaunted and threatened, has been broken at one of its strongest points. The Germans have been building on the Cherbourg peninsula of Normandy for years. Their defenses have been continued. Allied headquarters reports satisfactory progress has been made."

That's an amazing statement of fact, not mere anticipations, but we must remember that this is only the beginning. We don't know what that this is intended as the major assault or that the main thrust won't come somewhere else. What we do know, and it's important, is that it is successful.

The all-out German counter-attack expected has not developed.

Under normal circumstances a concerted Nazi land counter-attack wouldn't be mounted before today. It might be several days before reserves were brought up for a full-scale assault.

Significant that the coastline is thinly held by the Germans, and that Hitler's reserves are mostly far back of the coastal defences. He has to keep them there although for quick movement in any direction.

The Cherbourg peninsula is an ideal invasion base. There is not only one of the finest ports in the world, but a railway direct to Paris, and a network of roads for troop and supply movement of troops and equipment.

However, even if Normandy represents the main thrust, Hitler cannot be sure that other landings—probably several of them. The Allies have the initiative and they will keep the Germans off balance all along the line. They have forces to send their reserves for defence.

Also, obviously the Allies weaken the enemy by attacking and invading his forces. The Hitlerites may be counting on this. What we say is that's too few if they have to defend the whole 2,000 miles of the Mediterranean coastlines.

Where will other Allied attacks if any, be made? There are a lot of likely spots north of Normandy and closer to Britain as a base—Belgium.

One likely-looking spot is in the Rhone valley of southern France, on the Mediterranean coast. There the French army eagerly waiting for action, and if they were there in force it certainly would raise hob with the Nazis by forcing them to defend a front so far separated from northern France, It's worth watching.

Invasion Briefs

Kansas City, June 7, (AP)—Frats Whitney, who is one of the world's largest plants for making parachutes, said today that employees informed on invasion news by posting bulletins on factory lobby. A special notice said: "The greatest military operation in history is on! Everybody effort will be made to keep you informed. Remember, the more you could use our engines. Let's work as the boys fight."

New York, June 7, (AP)— Residents of the principal cities of Europe have been warned by German occupation forces not to leave their homes between dusk and dawn or to park on streets at night, a BBC report today said.

London, June 7, (CP)—The London Daily Express and Daily Telegraph both omitted all advertisements from morning editions today in order to give full space to invasion coverage.

Boston, June 7. (AP) — Officers and crew of a French warship tied up at Boston today, but knew from news of the invasion with mixed feeling reactions. They were pleased at the choice of the invasion route because they felt it would mean the liberation of France first, but were downcast because they were standing by 2,000 miles across the sea.

Galveston, June 7. (AP)—When the news of the invasion reached Rev. Edmund B. Guerry, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, startled parishioners set a one-finger rendition of "America" on the chimes. Tim Rice, city editor of the Galveston News and an amateur musician, heard the music, stopped off on his way to work long enough to relieve the rector and play several hymns.

Popular Bluff, Mo., June 7 (AP)— The Bluff Daily Citizen, semi-weekly daily American Republic was working furiously on an extra when the telephone rang.

The conversation:—

"Is the invasion on?"

"Yes."

"Are you putting out an extra?"

"Yes."

"I don't want to wait up for it: Would you please read me some of the news so I can get back to bed?"

The editor's response: (Censored).

Folkestone, England, June 7 (CP) turning back."

—German long-range guns on the Pas de Calais coast opened on units of the Allied invasion beachheads and fired across the Dover strait for nearly two hours yesterday but the hour batteries between Boulogne and Calais were silent as many as four and six shells at a time. The explosions shook coastal towns on this side.

Nazis Professed To Know Invasion Date Says Allen

Larry Allen, Associated Press broadcaster who has been returned on the Cripshola, spent three months with a Hitler platoon of war. Following is the picture he brought back from the front in action to Allied invasion plans.

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press War Correspondent

New York, June 7 (AP)—Nazi Germany professed to know the exact moment and place the Allied armies would strike in the first invasion of the "fortress of Europe."

Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, Reichsminister for Propaganda.

Furthermore, he declared, Germany not only was confident of repelling the attack, but was in the position herself to take the offensive. He made these statements in a recent speech.

Goebbels did not elaborate on the details of "offensive" plans, but indicated that Britain would bear the brunt of German fury.

Goebbels, who has done most of the talking in Germany this year, declared there could be no doubt but that the Allies would be beaten back into the sea "and all the filth of Scotland that guards the "fortress of Europe."

Germany's two crack commanders in the west, Gen. Field Marshals Erwin Rommel and Gerd Von Rundstedt, professed same opinion, although Rommel inferentially admitted the Allies, if they paid the cost of an additional 500,000 casualties, probably would succeed in establishing themselves on first stretches of the powerfully fortified "Atlantic wall."

Rommel apparently expected the big showdown on the first beaches about 50 miles from the Atlantic coast.

Battles for the second "Atlantic wall" has been built.

At least two commanders along this bastion, Rommel has issued this order:

"These positions will be held to the last man. There will be no

Swift Retreat By Jap Troops In Kohima Area

Kandy, Ceylon, June 7 —(AP)— The Japanese are withdrawing rapidly in the Kohima area of northeastern India owing to their heavy losses, and the British have occupied a village six miles east of the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Japanese retreat was said to be so rapid that British troops were unable to keep contact.

British gains also were recorded on the Imphal Spur to the east and to the northwest of Bishenpur, the latter being the main objective.

At Mytikyina in North Burma the Allied line was advanced slightly in the southern outskirts of town, while to the west in the Mogaung valley the Chinese closed in to within five miles west of Kamaing.

C.P. Newsman Scores His Fourth Consecutive Beat

(By The Canadian Press.)

Ross Munro, whose eyewitness stories were ahead of those of all other correspondents at Dieppe and in the invasions of Sicily and Italy, scored his fourth consecutive beat on the invasion of France.

Munro, of the C.P. war correspondents with the assault wave in the invading Canadian forces, got his story back from the battle area 20 hours and 30 minutes after the landing began. The first Canadian troops landed at 8 a.m. Tuesday. Munro reported in a story filed from London at 4:30 a.m. (Double Wednesday) (10:30 p.m. E.D.T. Tuesday).

It had not been considered likely the first story would be transmitted from the battle zone sooner than 36 hours after the landings—the time it took for Munro's first story on the Dieppe raid to get out.

For the invasion from the west Munro was flagged by C.P.'s William Stewart, as in Sicily and Italy.

Another C.P. war correspondent, Maurice DesJardins, is with the French-Canadian troops and Allan Dickieson is with the Royal Canadian navy; Ralph Allen is the war correspondent with the R.C.A.F. Munro has been a regular overseas since the start of the operation, but he has been in England throughout.

President Leads Nation in Prayer

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Invasion forces today carried with them into the assault on Europe a prayer to God for strength, for the ultimate conquest of "Apostles of greed and racial arrogance," and for the "freedom of suffering humanity."

President Roosevelt by radio last night led in the supplication, asking those at home to join with him "in this poignant hour." He said the invasion "has come to pass with success, thus far."

He ordered a prayer for "us, at home—our sons, our brothers, children, wives, sisters and brothers of brave men overseas."

"Help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in their support," he said.

Mr. Roosevelt commented that when he had broadcast Monday night the fall of Rome was unknown of the invasion plans.

"At this moment," he said, "that troops of the United States and our Allies were crossing the channel in another and greater operation which has come to pass with success thus far.

Hands Tied With String From Red Cross Packages Says Repatriate

Montreal, June 7 (CP)—Canadian repatriates who came over on the exchange liner Gripsholm, arrived here today.

Four of them Montreal's Central Station was the end of the long trek back from Stalag 8B, while for four others it was a stop-over point before boarding a regular train for western destinations.

The largest group of repatriates—from Ontario points—did not enter the station. Travelling in a sealed car which was changed to another train in the railway yards, they continued their journey to Toronto.

Glad to set foot on Canadian soil, veterans of action at Dieppe were smiling for cameramen and for old friends welcomed by army and Red Cross officials as well as relatives and friends.

"Finally we're home," said Tpr. William E. Schechtert, of Drumheller and Calgary, Alta., "and according to what the beginning of the end has started."

Some of the battle-scarred men had the same story to tell about the Red Cross parcels. "We've lived mostly on the bread, spuds and margarine the Jerries dish up," Pte. Kenneth Coyle of Morden, Man., remarked. "The Red Cross food parcels, which came about once a week, were a Godsend."

Anxious to get another crack at the German, especially since they are set free on the day of their return to England, Schechtert said that many of the boys, who were with the Calgary Regiment, were anxious to get another crack at the Germans, "especially since they had to go back to the front line."

The Red Cross gave the Germans indirect aid," he said. "At first they had no tins or tools to use, so they tied our hands with string from the Red Cross packages."

"We saw plenty of damage to rail communications in the Germans' rear," he remarked. 'And many of the roadbeds we travelled over seemed very new or rebuilt."

BULLETINS

MANY GERMANS PINNED DOWN

Barcelona, Spain, June 7 —(AP)— Italian guerilla forces, estimated at 12,000 were reported from the French border today to have entered from the Piedmont along smugglers' trails into France where they have joined French guerillas awaiting orders to take the offensive.

In this region, which would be vital in event of an Allied landing from the Mediterranean, a considerable force of German troops was reported pinned down.

LOSE 70 PLANES IN INVASION

London, June 7 —(CP)— Allied air forces have lost 70 aircraft in this theatre since the invasion started, today's announcement showed. The announcements gave this breakdown: 13 R.A.F. heavy bombers, one American heavy bomber, 12 American C-47 troop carriers, 12 American CG-42 gliders, and 32 other Allied fighter bombers and fighters.

Stratford Motion to Increase Old Age Pensions Tabled by Councillors

Supporting the motion of Reeve William West, Stirling, that the Stirling Public Welfare Advisory Council yesterday did not concur in a resolution forwarded by the Municipal Council of the City of Stratford to the effect that "the Federal and Provincial governments be petitioned to increase the amount of old age pensions to $60 per month for man and wife and to $45 per month for a single person; that the 5th pension age be lowered to 60 years and be payable to both man and wife upon the man reaching the age of sixty years.

Further, the resolution included, "and that provision be made for all irrespective of means and that such pension be free from execution and attachment in any way."

The resolution included an itemized account of minimum budgets of two people on Old Age pensions. The account included Meat—3 meals per day at 15c for 365 days—$164.25; 1 fresh chicken at $3 per day for three years, $10; 1 suit underwear (winter) $1; 1 suit underwear (summer), $1; 2 pairs socks $1.50; 2 pairs summer socks $1; 1 winter overcoat at $30 every five years, $6; 1 Spring overcoat at $20 every 5 years, $4; 1 pair shoes per year, $5; 1 hat at $4 ever 5 years, 80c; shirts per year, $3; 2 suits pyjamas at $3.50; 1 pair gloves, $1; 1 pair galoshes, every two years, $1; 1 pair carpet slippers, $1; 1 necktie, 50c; 1 pair braces every two years at $1, 50c; 2 handkerchiefs per year at 40c, $1.60 and shaving accessories, $1.

Female—3 meals per day at 15c, $164.25; 2 street dress, $8; 2 housedresses, $3; 1 pair shoes (2) 3 years $10.00; 1 pair underclothing, $2.50; 2 slips, $2; 1 winter overcoat every 5 years at $6, $1; 1 spring coat, every 5 years at $30, $4; 1 pair gloves, $1; 1 pair galoshes, every two years at $2, $1; 1 summer hat $1; 2 winter hats, $2.50; 2 pairs stockings, $3; 1 pair bedroom slippers, $1; hairpins, hair nets, shaving cream, $2.

Joint Expenses—MAN, per year; $221.25; WOMAN, per year, $221.25; rent 3-room heated apartment at $25 month; $300; light, $3 per month, $36; household or toilet necessities, soap, cleaning powder, tooth paste, etc., $14 a total of $772.15.

From the foregoing it would appear, the resolution read, that the minimum amount required to support a man and wife on Old Age Pensions would be $771.15 or $64.43 a month.

Such an amount does not include any allowance for such incidentals as transportation, postage, carfare, stationery, newspapers, medical treatment and supplies, dentistry, clothing, radio license, church donations, tobacco or amusements of any description. Even the enjoyment of inviting a friend for a cup of tea is precluded.

After some brief debate upon the resolution concluded, are based on a poverty standard of existence which should not be tolerated in a country so richly endowed with natural resources as Canada.

Marmora and District

Residents Hold On D-Day Service In Town Hall

Marmora, June 7 (Special) — Citizens of all creeds assembled in large numbers at the town hall on Tuesday evening for a service of intercession for the Divine blessing on the offensive just launched. Rev. Father R. J. Carroll performed the service with an impressive address. He carried the thoughts of the congregation back to the evening in 1939 when in the same hall farewell was taken of a large number of local boys who had enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He reminded his hearers that he had stated on that occasion in his address on that occasion, "what would fate play with these fine young men?" "Today," he continued, "we wonder where they are. We are gathered here for a solemn commemoration of an event that will go down in all history as one of the greatest. We do not realize at this time the full significance of the event that happened at the dawning of this day. We have been looked forward to as D-Day. I would prefer to call it "Our Day" marking as it does the invasion of the territory occupied by those who have opposed Christianity so strongly. Every one of us should go down on his knees tonight and pray to God to help our boys even those who have not gone on their knees before". Rev. E. M. Cadigan of St. Andrew's United Church then announced as the hymn "Abide With Me" which was sung with much feeling. Mist. W. Litt being the organist. Scripture readings were taken by Rev. L. Ball, pastor of the Wesley Pree Methodist Church, after which an appropriate prayer was offered by Rev. H. J. Farrell. Next "O God our Help in Ages Past" was sung followed by the minutes of silent prayer and the National Anthem sung as Rev. E. M. Cadigan requested in the spirit of a prayer. The benediction was pronounced by the pastor of St. Andrew's.

A short service was conducted at Marmora Public School at 9 a.m. by the Rev. E. M. Cadigan, in the significance of the day. At Marmora high school at 11 a.m. Pte. H. J. Sparks, Rev. E. M. Cadigan took part in an impressive service. The principal dealing on the significance of the day and the part Canada is to play in the task scripture reading and prayer.

FIGHTS OFF ASSAILANT ARMED WITH REVOLVER

Brantford, Ont., June 7 (CP)— Police said today that James Macmillan fought off an assailant who threatened him with a revolver in a lodging house early Monday night. Macmillan and two companions ran away, but the three returned with Macmillan's horse dealer, that they were interested in seeing some horses. Macmillan is in hospital suffering from one of them pushed a gun into his ribs, demanding money.

Pilots Report Things Going Well On Invasion Front

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

At an R.C.A.F. Station, Somewhere in England, June 7 (Censored)—Canadian fighter pilots back from their first sorties of the second day over the invasion beaches of northern France reported that things generally are going well" on the American-held stretch er of Europe's shore.

Flt. Lt. Don Hayworth, Regina, told of seeing what he described as "unbelievable" gliders containing flying after dawn today.

"It was the most interesting thing I've ever seen," Hayworth recounted. "It seems so small a thing to call them to get.links."

Thisairborne operation was a follow-up to new glider-carried troops sent in during the night.

Hayworth said: "There was a fair amount of shelling going on both by the navy and by batteries inland." The Regina pilot added that there were still no enemy aircraft sighted in the air.

Well-known list of Allied aircraft were in the skies—including fighters and fighter-bombers.

The weather was not exceptionally good. The ceiling was about 2,000 feet and light rain fell in some spots, making it bad to see what was going on.

PRISONERS NOT YET SOLD OF ROME'S FALL, INVASION

Chatham, Ont., June 7 —(CP)— The 300 German prisoners of war held in summer work camps at nearby Harwich have not yet been informed of the fall of Rome or the invasion of Europe, Camp officials said today.

There was none in the fifth day of a work stoppage, which began when the Germans claimed conditions at the camp were "unsatisfactory." They were ordered back to work on district farms. All volunteered for the work.

Swift Movement of Events

Events are moving swiftly in the war theatres. Rome fell on Sunday to the advancing Allied armies and on Tuesday morning the first great blow in the invasion of Continental Europe was under-German domination struck. News of the Supreme Command of the Allied forces tells of satisfaction with the progress of the great undertaking since the combined air, land and sea operations were carried out. Losses, according to Prime Minister Churchill, were far less than were expected to sea-borne troops and the air-borne forces, as well. German resistance was much less than had been anticipated. It has been revealed that the invasion had been planned for Monday morning but was delayed for 24 hours because of conditions in the English Channel.

Since the Allied landings, wonder at the immensity of the task which the British, American and troops of the Dominions have undertaken continues to grow upon the people and this mood is the proof of the perfect organization with which the English-speaking nations met and shall yet overcome that the Nazi German defences, said to be the most powerful anywhere in the world. Mr. Churchill said, "we hope to furnish the enemy with a succession of surprises during the course of the fighting."

The peoples of the Allied nations can rightly feel proud that they have done everything in their power to provide the forces, the men who are defending the firesides of the democracies of the world, the best in weapons and armor that are possible to be provided. United effort in the fighting front and the home front is what is spelling victory and giving the assurance of further victories.

The opening of the grand assault upon the boasting Germans' defences is the culmination of all the events of the past four years since Germany overthrew France. Today the French still is being waged the great battle that leads but in one direction—the freeing of France and of the rest of Nazi-held Europe. The Allies have waited for the opportunity to hurl their fullest might against the aggressor. Long preparation has gone into this work and the die is now cast.

The days ahead are days in which heavy fighting is expected. They will be days that will thrill and also they will be days of anxiety for the sake of the men in the forces who now on the soil of France are giving their best and all if necessary in the fight against the enemy of civilization.

Hitler now has three actual land fronts and a united east-west air front along which Allied planes can shuttle back and forth to deliver their cargos of explosives with a minimum of loss of time in travel.

The tremendous air power of the United Nations of the West was given its greatest demonstration in conflict when with the vast number engaged in the landing operations Tuesday, air raids could be carried on against the enemy while on guard in reserve were many thousands of air planes.

The magnitude of the number of ships used in the operations is almost unbelievable and yet that grand fleet of ships was the very excellence of precision and flexibility. Only great sea-going nations with great shipping and world experience could have achieved these things.

Two Creaking Axis Voices

When Rome fell the Germans tried to explain that the possession of Rome did not signify a great deal in the war. But the Germans at heart know better than that. They should know that Germans would not give up unless only sheer force and necessity had forced the hurried retreat of the German force to try to escape entrapment.

Two things stand out in regard to the fall of Rome, it was not in the nature of Germany to do a favor or to do a right thing. Germany did not yield Rome because she was swayed by humanitarian and cultural motives, but it was because her armies were beaten and out-generalled by the Allies in Italy.

There was another message and this purported to come from Mussolini, so-called head of the empty organization of dead Fascism which claims to be holding out against the Allies. Mussolini's message read suspiciously as if it were German-dictated. But Mussolini is only Hitler's stooge after all and playing the stooge is a thankless act especially in dealing with Hitler.

Mussolini's advice to the Italians was to make the way of the Allies as hard as possible and not to give them assistance. Then too he advised the Italians not to make a "moral surrender" to the Allies. The former Duce is a "fine" figure to be talking of morals when he sold out Italy to Hitler and degraded his country and brought upon it a train of woes. The two Axis leaders are known by these messages to be all that the Allied peoples know they are, brutal and savage pagans, men of evil.

Events do not lend any hope to these two men with the world of their creation being shattered, Mussolini degraded and Hitler nearing the time when he will face the very extremity of human fortune for many he will be brought to trial for his crimes against humanity.

The Romans had a way of showing their joy in Rome's liberation by the welcome they gave the Allied forces with kisses, flowers and wine. Numbers of the anti-Fascist Italians fought stripped to the waist in the Rome area and engaged in hand-to-hand action against the Germans and Fascists.

To the last Hitler reveals he knows no law. His word that Rome was free of Germans was false. His army left snipers behind to harass the Allies.

It is with a great deal of satisfaction that the world knows that the course of events so worked out that the liberation of Rome has come without damage to religious shrines and to historic monuments dating from the day of pre-Christian Rome which was the capital of the great empire which ruled from the Northern Sea to the sands of North Africa and from the Atlantic to far into Asia.

Homes 12 Centuries Ago

(London News-Chronicle)

Houses built 12 centuries or so ago with central heating,bathrooms, sun-bathing portices and other "modern features" lie buried only a foot or two below the bombed basements of the City of London.

They were the homes of rich British merchants who traded with the Gauls, Italians and Spaniards after the fall of the Roman Empire ,and founded the first great native civilization in England.

Archaeologists have formed a council to help unscramble potsherds, measure and record these houses and other remains of a "lost city" before they are swept away forever by the excavations for deep modern foundations.

"Most staggering discoveries lie there for the finding, and our children will not forgive us if we rob them of these treasures," said Miss K. M. Kenyon, of the Institute of Archaeology, secretary of the council.

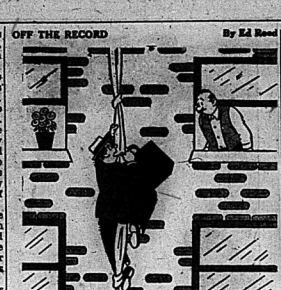
DOGWOOD



"I want," said Mother Nature, "some distinctive bit of dress,
A creation mode exclusive; one no other
I'd like to have it fragile, with a charm to catch the eye.
Rather delicate of color, but a joy to passers-by.
I have many bits of beauty I am very proud to wear;
Now, I'm asking you for something that will be beyond compare.

"Call the cleverest of your artists, both above ground and below,
And explain to them, I'm seeking the most perfect bloom to grow.
Though a cherry tree in blossom is a lovely thing to see
I hope they'll fashion something that will even lovelier be,
Something just a little different to make women say: "Divine!"
And the surliest man who sees it to admit he thinks it fine."

So the artists of the hillside and the forest and the field
Drew a model and a pattern in their studios concealed.
From the loveliest of pigments, pink and scarlet, they could find
And the silkiest of fabrics was a masterpiece designed;
A bit of living beauty, robed in blossom, twig and bough,
A joy to all beholders, and it's known as dogwood, now.

About sixty members of the Epworth League in connection with Holloway Street Methodist Church enjoyed a drive to Foxboro last evening and furnished the program at an entertainment in a debate, resolved, "That the influence of the woman for good is greater than that of man", the affirmative was taken by Mr. Terry and Mr. Poulter and the negative by Mr. Ransom and Mr. Stokes. The decision was in favor of the negative side. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Sanderson, a reading was given by Miss Laura Salesman, Mr. Ransom gave a violin solo and the Misses Wooten sang a duet. The evening was most enjoyable.

SOLDIER AND CIVILIAN KILLED AS CAR CRASHES CULVERT

Sarnia, Ont., June 7.— (CP) Two men, Trooper Edward Bennett, 24, of London, and John Antonich, 26, civilian of Sarnia, were killed Monday when a car crashed into a cement culvert on highway 7, 20 miles east of Sarnia. They were on their way to London.

The automobile, owned by Claire McGee, of Sarnia was earlier reported stolen from a parking lot. Both men, it was said, formerly lived in Winnipeg. Antonich was employed here as a truck driver.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

A movie history of Canadian railroads might well include a fade-out of gleaming steel rails followed by a fade-in of primitive rails made of wood. Wood was used in all possible ways a century ago since it was plentiful. Steel was used but seldom because it was hard to get. So the first rails on which locomotives and cars were run in Canada were fashioned of carefully cut wood with flat bars of iron spiked on them. However, these were soon rejected in favor of iron rails, for the bars twisted up during hot weather and added to the risks of travel. The wooden rails were called "snake-rails."

Additional evidence that the pioneering period in Canada was an Age of Wood is found in pictures of wood-burning locomotives. These treasured photos show tall engines heavily loaded with great stabs of wood to be fed to the fires.

For those who relish statistics there is interest in the fact that. In 1900, 1,382 miles of railroad had been laid and there were 10 lines of railway, some with extensive branches. Much, indeed, had been accomplished since the first steam railway was built in British America in 1836. This small line took care of stone to be carried to the citadel of Quebec from the wharves at Cape Diamond.

GRAVES GUARDED BY SOLDIERS

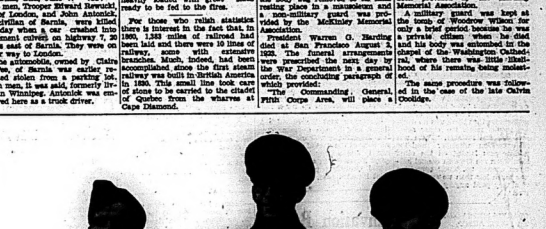
There is no prescribed policy in placing guards of honor over the graves of deceased President and ex-Presidents of the United States.

The War Department says the circumstances in each case determine the action taken.

A military guard was maintained at the grave of James A. Garfield in Lakeview Cemetery, Cleveland, Ohio, from October, 1881, to June, 1886.

The remains of William McKinley rested temporarily in the family vault at Canton, Ohio, where a military guard was established September 19, 1901, and continued until July 1, 1910, when the body was removed to its final resting place in a mausoleum and a non-military guard was provided by the McKinley Memorial Association.

President Warren G. Harding died at San Francisco August 2, 1923. The funeral arrangements were prescribed the next day by the War Department in a general order, the concluding paragraph of which provided:



"The Commanding General, Fifth Corps Area, will place a suitable guard, commanded by an officer, at the tomb of the late President Harding, at Marion, Ohio, to remain there until further orders."

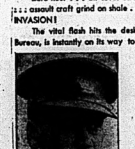
A military guard consisting of one officer and 26 enlisted men was maintained at the tomb for nearly five years, a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased and to prevent unauthorized persons from entering.

This guard, it is estimated, cost the government $185,000. It was removed May 1, 1928, after the bodies of the late President and his wife had been transferred from the temporary tomb to the mausoleum and a civilian guard had been provided by the Harding Memorial Association.

A military guard was kept at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson for only a brief period because he was a private citizen when he died and his body was entombed in the crypt of the Washington Cathedral, where there was little likelihood of his remains being molested.

The same procedure was followed in the case of the late Calvin Coolidge.

ASSIGNED TO INVASION...

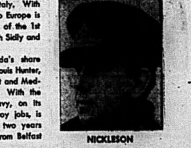


STEWART MUNRO HUNTER

D-Day ::: the greatest armada of all time slips through the night ::: ships, men, guns, tanks.

Zero-hour ::: air-cover screams down ::: naval guns roar ::: assault craft grind on shore ::: the attack ::: the landing ... INVASION!

The vital flash hits the desk of the Canadian Press London Bureau, is instantly on its way to the people of Canada. The story of the invasion is under way.



DESJARDINS

Through almost five years of war, Canada's newspapers have built up the overseas staff of The Canadian Press, their news-handling co-operative. Their duty to the waiting folks at home grew with Canada's armed might. The London staff of five became 14.

Through CP, which covers the world for Canada, came the invasion reports of Reuters, the Empire agency, and The Associated Press, world-wide American news agency. Because even these were not enough, CP trained Canadians to cover Canada at war.

For D-Day, the invasion team grew to five men; each battle-tested in his job. Heading them is Ross Munro, the only Canadian who went to Spitsbergen, Dieppe, North Africa, Sicily, Italy. With him for the drive into Europe is Lionel Stewart, veteran of the 1st Division's fight through Sicily and Italy to Ortona.

Covering Canada's share in the air assault is Louis Hunter, ace air correspondent and Mediterranean veteran. With the Royal Canadian Navy, on its greatest of all convoy jobs, is Allen Nickleson, for two years war correspondent from Belfast to the Med.

NICKLESON

Assigned to the French-Canadian troops he has covered through Sicily and Italy is Maurice Desjardins, who represents CP's French-language newspapers.

These five war correspondents for years have written for the home folks the stories of fighting Canadians in five campaigns. They have trained with the troops, lived with them and have gone into battle with them. They know their business, they know the dangers. They're proud of their job—Assigned to Invasion.

INVASION

Nearly 30 hours after history's greatest overseas military operation had begun, the third invasion communique telling of the reinforcing said "satisfactory progress was made." No details of fighting areas were disclosed.

The communique largely was devoted to the terrific Allied aerial assault. More than 13,000 sorties were flown yesterday, headquarters said.

Of the airborne operations, the communique said:

"The whole airborne operation is going according to or ahead of plan."

Fresh troops from a huge sky glider train seized key positions on Cherbourg Peninsula early today and reinforced Allied soldiers fighting against Nazi tank counter-attacks.

Three waves of American gliders strung out in a 50-mile-long train across the Channel brought "a steady stream of men, equipment and supplies" to troops already smashing inland from initial landing points in France, Supreme Headquarters announced.

Front dispatches said airborne forces had seized bridges and roads, and linked up with troops landed from the sea at several points.

The reinforced Allied troops battled inside the old Gothic port city of Caen and fought their way inland along a 100-mile front in Normandy. The Germans reported fierce counter-attacks against the invaders east of Cherbourg, major Allied peninsular objective.

The Germans, indicated the Allies had expanded their original beachheads with fresh landings north of Le Havre. That great port 80 miles across the Channel from the English coast is threatened by Allied troops attacking south of it on the southern side of the Seine Estuary, Berlin had indicated.

Street Fighting in Caen

There was no official word here so far on the extent of the penetrations into the Normandy Peninsula, aside from yesterday's statement to the House of Commons by Prime Minister Churchill that Allied troops had begun street fighting in Caen, nine miles inland on the Orne River.

Nor was there further word of the part Canada's forces are playing in the great attack. They last were reported to have won their immediate objective, an unidentified beachhead on the gun-studded French coast, after little more than 2½ hours fighting yesterday, and to be moving inland.

The first dispatch from France came from Ross Munro, veteran Canadian Press war correspondent who is with one of the Canadian invasion spearheads. He said in his "beat" from the invasion coast that the Canadian invasion commander had reported to headquarters:

"Beachhead taken. Well on way to immediate objective."

That was at 10.45 p.m. Tuesday. There has been no further word directly from the beachhead.

An indication that another Canadian assault force was in the Cherbourg area came from William Stewart, C.P. war correspondent who told in a dispatch from an invasion forces headquarters last night how the formations he was with moved across the Channel.

Visible from the ship he was aboard, Stewart said, as the forces moved into the French coast were many flares and he quoted a member of the ship's company as saying: "Looks like Cherbourg."

Lay Wall of Bombs

The tremendous aerial bombardment was highlighted by the attack Tuesday night of more than 1,000 RAF and RCAF heavy bombers which swung over the beachheads to lay a wall of bombs in front of German reinforcements moving toward the fighting front.

An estimated 5,000 long tons of bombs were dropped, concentrated on roads and railways between 15 and 40 miles behind the Normandy landing points. The Canadian bomber group participating in the assault set a group record in the tonnage dropped. The RCAF planes suffered no losses.

The German radio, meanwhile, continued to pour out its version of the landings. Berlin said strong Nazi bomber formations had attacked Allied warships and landing craft just after midnight off the coast north of Le Havre. This was the area in which the Germans first erroneously reported Allied landings early Tuesday, later explaining that "dummy parachutists" had been dropped there.

Germany Makes Claim

The German international information bureau broadcast that at least 18 troop carriers and 34 other Allied aircraft were downed yesterday. That agency also asserted that German naval forces surprised and attacked three Allied destroyers in the mouth of the Seine River at 3.39 a.m., setting one of them on fire.

Berlin radio claimed that two British airborne battalions were almost wiped out at Deauville last night, while at Le Havre, it asserted, Allied airborne units were pressed back to the coast.

(The BBC said today in a broadcast recorded in New York that Allied tanks were moving up toward Caen and had penetrated 10 miles inland at some points along the coast. It did not specify the sectors.

Occupy 50 Miles of Coast

(The BBC reported another Allied airborne landing south of Cherbourg this morning and a Blue network correspondent broadcast from London that Allied troops had occupied a 50-mile stretch of the French coast. The correspondent, Herbert M. Clark, said Allied forces had advanced inland at some points to a depth of 12 miles or more.)

From Louis V. Hunter, Canadian Press war correspondent with the RCAF, word came today that returning Canadian fighter pilots reported that "things generally are going well" on the American-held stretches of the invasion coast.

Allied troops already have cleared Norman beaches of shell-dazed Axis coast defence units and are pushing on inland with the apparent objective of seizing the peninsula with its prize port of Cherbourg on the tip, returning airmen said.

Use Big Bulldozers

Engineers were using their big bulldozers, landed in the first hours of D-Day, to hack out landing strips for succeeding waves of reinforcements which Berlin said hit the beaches during the night after a 100-mile trip across the Channel.

One fighter-bomber flight leader yesterday reported:

"The American beachhead was going along very successfully, but the British and Canadians were getting the hell beat out of them for a while. In the afternoon their position eased off."

Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, Allied naval commander-in-chief, made the statement that the navy had been "100 per cent successful" in putting the original assault forces ashore in France. He said that 10 per cent losses had been expected because of Nazi water obstacles and other defences, but those defences proved surprisingly ineffective.

Supply Race Starts

Admiral Ramsay said the forthcoming days would be marked by a supply race between these two wily antagonists of old, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the Allied ground troops, and Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel.

Some unconfirmed reports reaching here said the troops fighting in the Caen area had severed the Paris-Cherbourg railway, major feeder route for the Germans garrisoned on the 5,000-square mile Normandy Peninsula, which also has airfields the Allies could use to gain a substantial foothold in western Europe.

Official spokesmen said Allied casualties were unexpectedly light in the first day of operations. Naval casualties were said to have been "very, very light."

Thus far there was no indication that any full-scale German counter offensive had begun to shape up. It has been expected that the Germans will wait for perhaps 48 hours before deciding to their own satisfaction exactly what are Allied intentions.

Critical Days Ahead

Then, with German mobile reserves beginning to move to the battle zone, will come the critical days for the Allies.

Allied airmen are watching for this development. The German air force also apparently is waiting because thus far it has not made any conspicuous showing in the Allied-dominated coastal skies despite Reichsmarshal Goering's reported assertion that it must be sacrificed, if necessary, in trying to halt the Allies.

A Vichy radio broadcast recorded by the Ministry of Information said that Rouen, ancient French Cathedral City, 41 miles east of Le Havre is now "almost completely deserted."

It was north of Rouen that the Vichy radio last night said a vicious fight was raging "between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces."

Thousands of Ships in Service

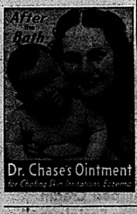
Thousands of Allied ships were in service in the broad channel, turning their huge guns, including 16-inch rifles, on Axis gun batteries and arching their shells inland in support of the attacking ground forces.

The Warspite was among the British and American battleships in action. The Warspite was the vessel that threaded a narrow Norwegian fjord during the 1940 German invasion of Norway and sank seven German destroyers in Narvik. She since has fought in the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and other seas.

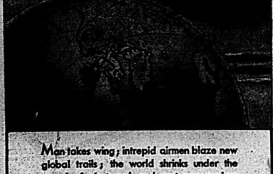
Also aiding in the bombardment of the enemy coast were the Canadian destroyers Sioux and Algonquin, it was announced.

Among the American battleships engaged was the 29,000-ton Nevada which arose from the wreckage of Pearl Harbor.

Mr. Churchill's statement that Allied troops had reached the streets of Caen, where ancient buildings founded by William the Conqueror still stand, was denied by the German high command.



Additional Statements Expected



Additional statements by the Prime Minister on the progress of the invasion were expected today, and one Swedish report said a speech by Hitler also might be forthcoming today.

The Paris radio announced that its Paris-Normandy and Paris-Brittany train services had been cancelled. Presumably passenger services to Western France now have been taken over by the Nazis for military purposes.

From west to east along the 100-mile invanded Norman coast, Axis accounts located the fighting areas as:

The port of Barfleur, 15 miles east of Cherbourg on the northeast tip of the Normandy peninsula; the fishing village St. Vaast La Hougue, five miles south of Barfleur; both sides of the Valognes-Carentan highway, a section of the important supply road to Cherbourg running 5 miles inland from the coast a 27-mile-long area between Carentan and Bayeux on the same highway; the Orne River Estuary, nine miles north of Caen; a stretch in the Villers-Trouville area across the broad Seine Estuary from Le Havre, and the town of Honfleur, on the Seine six miles southeast of Le Havre.

Man takes wing; intrepid airmen blaze new global trails; the world shrinks under the speed of air travel, and vast new regions are laid open to development.

Post-war skyways, following the Great Circle routes to the north, will place Canada at the cross-roads of the world, with wide scope for promoting international trade, travel, and understanding.

With the progress of to-morrow, Canadians will, as in the past, find The Royal Trust Company ready to serve them in safeguarding the fruits of their labours, while at home or on missions to new horizons.

Allies Drive Ten Miles Beyond Rome After Harried Nazis

Series of Targets in Balkans Including Oil Refineries at Ploesti Raided

34 AIRCRAFT DOWNED

Naples, June 7. (AP)— Allied 5th Army troops have driven ten miles beyond Rome in their pursuit of retreating Nazi forces, Allied headquarters announced today.

Only a light resistance is being encountered from the German rearguards, a communique said.

New Zealand troops of the 8th Army, meanwhile, were reported to have captured Balsorano, about six miles north of Sora, in their advance up Highway 32 toward Avezzano.

These forces are meeting strong resistance, the communique added.

Strong forces of 15th Air Force heavy bombers struck a series of targets yesterday in the Balkans—oil refineries in the Ploesti area, railyards at Brasov and Pitestei in Romania and Belgrade in Yugoslavia, and the iron gate canal at Turnu-Severin in Romania.

Thirty-four enemy aircraft were destroyed during the day. Sixteen heavy bombers and 17 other aircraft failed to return.

Fifth army infantrymen, chasing Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's fleeing army, have punched their way ten miles north of Rome to a point only five miles short of the Lake of Bracchino.

Another column has driven at least ten miles northwest of the Italian capital after crossing the Tiber and still is forging steadily ahead behind enemy rearguards.

Patrols probing west from Rome reached points three to five miles from the sea and nearly a dozen miles north of the Tiber's mouth.

Only spotty resistance was being encountered by Allied 5th Army forces but the British 8th Army was engaged in brisk battles with strong German delaying forces in the mountain sectors east of the capital.

Canadian corps troops, which fought with the 8th Army during the early stages of the offensive which opened May 11, now are out of the line.

Broadcast to Patriots

The newest gains were reported after Gen. Alexander, Allied commander-in-chief in Italy, in a broadcast to Italian patriots, declared that "in less than a month the strength of the German armies has been broken".

He urged the patriots to rise against the Nazis and do all in their power to sabotage enemy communications and hinder Kesselring's efforts to disengage his troops and retire northward.

"The liberation of Italy now is well under way", the Allied commander declared.

The total of prisoners taken in the offensive still was rising steadily with the 5th Army alone now claiming more than 18,000.

A headquarters spokesman said the Germans "appear to be forming small battle groups composed of elements from varied units" pulled hastily together to fight desperate delaying actions.

REFUSED TO GO ON WATCH

Cobourg, June 7 — (CP) — 13 seamen from the car ferry Ontario No. 1, who yesterday refused to go on watch in protest against a change of hours, yesterday were given a suspended sentence when they agreed to return to work on a seven-days notice period and try the new schedule. They were charged under the Canadian Shipping Act.

1,000 Tons Bombs Dumped by RCAF On Coast Defences

London, June 7—(CP Cable)—In a quick follow-up to the great invasion-eve assault on the German-held French coast the R. C. A. F. bomber group set a record last night during its participation with the R. A. F. in the attack on coastal defences.

At least 1,000 tons of bombs were dropped by R. C. A. F. heavy bombers. Targets were roads and railways back to the beachheads and bridges inland destruction of which would delay reinforcement of the German coastal defence forces.

The Canadians went out in two waves 90 minutes apart, one wave attacking coastal objectives and the other the inland targets. Not a plane was lost.

Flashes on the ground showed where the Allies were engaged in fighting and in the moonlight over the channel the fliers could see shipping moving back and forth across the water.

One of the most active Canadian aerial units during the night was the noted city of Edmonton Mosquito squadron, the pilots in which were gleeful this morning at having at last—for the first time since the invasion opened—exchanged gunfire with Nazi airmen.

City of Edmonton Mosquitos knocked down six enemy aircraft and damaged another without loss to themselves.

This squadron is the intruder unit which has been making a name for itself since the start of the year with successful sorties almost daily and nightly.

Cloudy Skies Over Channel

London, June 7 — (CP)—Invasion chieftains, admittedly concerned about weather conditions in the Channel, were greeted by grey, cloudy skies at dawn today.

The sea on this side of the Dover Strait on the second day of invasion was moderate, but it was blowing toward the French coast, where conditions would not be so smooth.

Rain fell for some hours during the night. This morning temperatures were cool, with a light northwesterly wind blowing at times, carrying more rain.

Visibility had improved a little since dusk, and the clouds, breaking in places, were a little higher. Conditions generally were cheerless for this time of the year and the barometer dropped slightly again during the night.

There was sunshine over the Strait area before 9 a.m. (3 a.m. E.D.T.) but soon afterward more clouds gathered and there were alternate periods of sun and overcast skies.

Cloud banks were massed high over the French coast, especially in the Calais area. During the night the temperature fell to 47 degrees, then climbed just over 50 at 9 a.m.

TOLD NOT TO WORRY

New York, June 7 — (AP)—Joan Ellis, 22-year-old British teletype operator who sent the false flash three days ago reporting the European invasion was happily remembered by newspaper editors when D-day finally arrived. Many American editors sent cables telling her not to worry about her mistake.

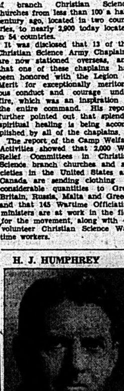
Annual Meeting Of First Church Of Christ, Scientist

While holding military might essential to victory of Allied nations over the anti-Christ claims of injustice and intolerance, The Christian Science Board of Directors on Monday, June 5 told the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, that freedom is essentially a spiritual gift "to be realized only through spiritual understanding and attainment."

"The problems we face are great, but God is greater, far greater," the new President Paul Stark Seeley affirmed. "His hold upon the universe is not shaken. The ideas with which every one of humanity's problems, individual or collective, will be solved existed before the problem appeared, for as the prophet assures us, 'that which is to be hath already been . . .' We fear no problems at home or abroad. As the children of almighty God we accept their challenge as a demand that we use more confidently the power of all-knowing Mind which is ever at hand to reveal every step of the way out of the thralldom of earth into the freedom of God's heaven."



Reports from the field and from the various departments of the Christian Science movement indicated a sharp turn to religion as the mainstay of a war-torn world.

Tracing the growth of the Christian Science movement from the time of the erection of the original edifice of The Mother Church, 50 years next December, to the present day, the new president revealed an increase in the number of branch Christian Science churches from less than 100 a half century ago, located in two countries, to nearly 2,900 today located in 54 countries.

It was disclosed that 13 of the Christian Science Army Chaplains are now stationed overseas, and that one of these chaplains has been honored with the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct and courage under fire, which was an inspiration to the entire command. His report further pointed out that splendid spiritual healing is being accomplished by all of the chaplains.

The report of the Camp Welfare Activities showed that 2,000 War Relief Committees in Christian Science branch churches and societies in the United States and Canada are sending clothing in considerable quantities to Great Britain, Russia, Malta and Greece, and that 145 Wartime Officiating ministers are at work in the field for the movement, along with 428 volunteer Christian Science Wartime workers.

Canadian Forces Won Their Beachhead in Less Than 3 Hours Fighting

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Forces Landing in France, June 6 — (CP Cable) — In two hours and 45 minutes' fighting on the beaches here Canadian invasion forces won their beachhead and shoved on inland.

At 10:45 o'clock this morning the Canadian commander sent this message to Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, "Beachhead taken. Well on way to immediate objective."

The strip of coast won by the Canadians in this initial assault was quite narrow but it gave them beaches and provided a base for further penetration.

There was some stiff street fighting in the little coastal towns and the Canadians also met considerable enemy fire on the beaches and as they worked their way into the German defences they had to overcome numerous steel and wooden obstacles which had been placed out on a tidal part of the beach.

However, the assault went in just as the tide began to rise and many of these obstacles were cleared away by engineers before water covered them, enabling follow-up craft to beach and unload.

Suffered Some Casualties

The Canadians suffered some casualties from machine guns, mortars and artillery fire.

By 10 a.m. the Canadians were about 1,000 yards inland and going strong, meeting only small pockets of Germans.

The first prisoners taken were identified as belonging to a coastal defence unit.

On other parts of the front near us the operation is moving along. Canadian and British airborne troops did a good job when they dropped and came in by gliders at 3:30 a.m. They captured and held several important bridges.

Cruisers provided the Canadians with very effective support. One cruiser knocked out a troublesome battery about a mile and a half from the coast with six direct hits.

Enemy tanks are reported about 10 or 15 miles south of the beachhead and some of the enemy's transport also is moving.

The French coast still is wreathed in smoke driving far down the Channel. In some bombarded towns fires are burning and destroyers and support craft still are prowling up and down the coast to finish off anything else that may show up.

Allied air cover over the fleet and beachhead is very complete. Every few minutes Spitfires or Lightnings sweep past in the sunshine which has now come out. The wind shows signs of abating.

The Canadian assault formation staff appears pleased at the result of the morning's battle but they are not going to be certain until they get a solid line on a perimeter inland from which they can strike deeper into France.

MARRIAGE NOTICE

WELCH—ROBERTSON — Mr. and Mrs. Percy Welch wish to announce the marriage of their son, F/O. Howard Robert Welch, R.C.A.F., to Florence, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson of London, England, on Saturday, April 29, by Rev. Scott of the Church of Scotland, London, Eng. A cousin of the bride and brother of the groom, Sgt. Arnold Welch, R.A.F., were the attendants.

Mrs. C. G. Knight, Church St., received roses on Tuesday, from her son, Frank, in Italy.

Mrs. Charles Hadden, of Picton, will spend two weeks with her sister, Mrs. H. J. Clark, in Belleville.

Mrs. William McCaw, Emily St., received roses on Tuesday, from her son, Allan Moore, who is serving with the Armed Forces in Italy.

John Langmaid, of the Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm of Kingston, was a recent visitor of Flight Sergeant Woolland and Miss Peggy Woolland, Victoria Street.

Mrs. R. G. Gardiner, 74 Cedar Street, received roses on Tuesday, from her son-in-law, Dick Sargent, in Italy.

Mrs. Arthur Booth, who underwent an operation on Monday, in the Belleville General Hospital, is progressing favorably.

The recipient of a bouquet of roses on Tuesday from her son, Pte. W. R. Worrall, in Italy, was Mrs. William Worrell, Station Street.

Pte. Andrew E. Curtis, Ottawa, Ontario, Army Service Corps, and who served in Sicilian campaign, returned to Canada May 18, and is now visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Ethel Hyde, 38 I-I Bleecker Street, in this city. He was returned to Canada for medical treatment.

At the marriage ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, of Marguerite Bannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bannon, of Hastings, to Fred Iler, son of Mrs. Hay and the late John Hay, of Trent River, the wedding music was played by Mrs. Arthur Hubbs, of Belleville, aunt of the bride.

The Canadian Women's Army Corps Military Brass Band, which along with the twenty-seven piece Pipe Band of the C.W.A.C. is now on his second Dominion tour in the interests of a nation-wide recruiting campaign. The bands will visit Belleville June 26th.—(Canadian Army Photo).

MUSICAL MARCH

The Canadian Women's Army Corps Military Brass and Pipe Bands, formed slightly over a year ago, and now on their second Dominion-wide tour in the interests of recruiting, are up to full strength. Under the leadership of Pipe-Major Lillian Grant and Bandmaster Nadia Sherrish, the girls have won for themselves an enviable reputation for smartness and musical ability, and have delighted large crowds all across Canada.

Regimental Pipe March of the C.W.A.C. is "Queen Elizabeth," composed by a famous Pipe-Major of a Scottish Highland Band. Several years ago it was played at a Highland function attended by the Queen, and when asked to give it a name she wrote across the music the words "Queen Elizabeth." Official adoption by Royal consent at a later date.

Official military march of the C.W.A.C. is "Athena," which was especially written for the Corps by Lt. S. R. Hinchey of Belleville, Ontario, one of the leading Canadian composers of band music. The Athena Badge, the official head of Athena, the Greek goddess of wisdom, serves as badge of the Corps, and is engraved on tunic and great-coat buttons. Lt. Hinchey was present on the occasion of the premiere of his march at Belleville last summer.

WEDDINGS

ADAMS—SWORD

Picton, June 7. — St. Andrew's Anglican Church at Wellington, was beautifully decorated with lilacs, peonies and irises, in a color scheme in blue and white, for the marriage at three-thirty Saturday afternoon, June third, of May Mable Elizabeth Sword, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Sword, Wellington, to Lt. Cmdr. Charles Alexander Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Adams, Brandon, Man.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a two-piece street-length dress of white crepe with embroidery, brown hat and accessories and corsage of yellow roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Donald Lepper of Rochester, N.Y., was matron of honor, wearing a two-piece suit of blue wool with brown hat and accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses and ivy.

Rev. J. J. Lane officiated. Mrs. Dayton Murphy, in rose silk jersey, was at the organ.

Cpl. David Johnson, Belleville, attended the groom.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother, was in navy crepe with black hat and accessories. In the absence of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Mildred Way, wearing an orchid suit with black accessories, received with the bridal party. There were fifty guests. Those from out-of-town were Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lefferman, Mr. Lionel Lefman, Mrs. Donald Lepper of Rochester; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sword of Owen Sound; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Jackson, Cpl. and Mrs. D. Johnson, Mrs. Isabel Allison, Mrs. R. Turvey, Mrs. Aman and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bovey, all of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Carson Hubbs and children, Brighton; Mr. Dick Hoole, Miss Ruth Chatten, Brighton; Miss Madge Wood, Trenton.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of silverware and reflector, to the best man, a gold knife and chain, to Jim Hinchman, a gold bracelet, to the pianist and soloist, ear-rings.

TUMMON—WALKER

The home of the bride's parents was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, June third, at three o'clock, when the Rev. J. R. Trumpour officiated at the marriage ceremony of Hazel May Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker, 3rd of Thurlow, to Douglas Leslie Tummon, son of Mr. and Harry Tummon, of Mrs. Mrs. Tummon, of Zion's Hill.

Mrs. Horace Casey, played softly throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Milton Orille, sister of the bride, sang, "I Love You Truly".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a radiant picture in her long wedding gown of white sheer and lace. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion fell in graceful folds from her hair, misted with a headdress of lily-of-the-valley. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Miss Beatie Walker, as her sister's bridesmaid, was wearing a floor length gown of flimy pink sheer and carrying a nosegay of sweetpeas. Little Miss Sheila Hamilton, cousin of the bride, wore a pretty flower girl in her frock of blue taffeta. Her bouquet was a nosegay of carnations.

Mr. Gerald Tummon, brother of the groom, attended his brother.

For the reception, the bride's mother received the guests in a blue flowered silk jersey gown with corsage of red roses. The aunt of the bride looked lovely in a gown of white sheer with matching bolero lace yoke and long sleeves. Her matching headdress of white roses held in place her finger-tip veil and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and bouvardia.

The bride's attendant, Miss Shirley Holland of Frankford, was heavenly blue sheer made with sweetheart neckline. She wore a blue net shoulder-length veil crowned with blue flowers and carried a bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Mr. Harold Pitcher, brother of the bride, was best man.

After the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to about seventy guests at the home where they were received in a gown of English imported sheer, blue with corsage of pink rose. The groom's mother was in navy blue Queen's blue silk crepe and corsage of tea roses. The dining room was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells with wedding cake in the centre of the table.

After the reception the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to points west. For travelling the bride chose a dress of Romance blue organza with silk embroidery and white accessories. On their return they will make their home on the groom's farm in Murray township.

Guests were present for the ceremony from Toronto, Kingston, Stirling, Trenton, Consecon and Belleville.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of silverware and reflector, to the best man, a gold knife and chain, to Jim Hinchman, a gold bracelet, to the pianist and soloist, ear-rings.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH, W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church, was held in the ladies' parlors last Friday, with Mrs. R. D. F. Davidson presiding.

Mrs. Holmes explained the new plan, for a birthday gift offering.

Miss Cook sang the solo "Like as a Father Pitieth His Children".

Miss Leona Riggs accompanied her on the piano.

Mrs. Baker spoke on the Book of Luke, giving something of the history of the Gospel, and of the author.

Mrs. McClure's group then took charge of the meeting with Mrs. Burr as leader. Chapter of the day Study Book, "For All of Life", was presented by Mrs. Ackerman. This chapter dealt with the Inspiration of Worship.

Mrs. Wood gave a paper on the first half of Chapter six, on the true mission of the Church. Mrs. Hyde followed with the second half of the chapter which compared the all inclusive work of the Mission churches to the grain of mustard seed.

Mrs. Semple was in charge of a short rectification service of the Canadian Girls in Training with the Women's Missionary Society. Mrs. Davidson gave the purpose of the Society and the girls responded with verses of Scripture.

Mrs. Semple recited the words of the Hymn

"Lord of Light, whose name outshineth
All the stars and suns of space".

Mrs. Semple also closed the meeting with the benediction.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The June meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School rooms on Thursday.

Reports were given by the secretaries. The Worship Service was given as outlined in the programme monthly. The theme "The Lift of Prayer" was taken by Mrs. Puffer. The President stated that through fellowship in Christ, one may learn how much better one can serve this generation of children and youth. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. R. Pound. A poem was given by Mrs. Miles Benedict.

Mrs. J. Trumpour gave a very interesting talk on Christian Stewardship emphasizing that the stewardship of life takes account of one's time, talents, even if seemingly small, one's personality and money, whether the gift by small or large if it be proportionate. The meeting closed by singing a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Little.

Women's Christian Association Meets

The June meeting of the Women's Christian Association, who own and operate the Bellville General Hospital and the Bellevilla Home for the Aged, was held in the Board Room of the hospital on Tuesday afternoon. The President, Mrs. J. Abrams opened the meeting with passages of Scriptures suitable for the Trinity Day. Reports were heard from the various committees and the meeting closed with refreshments prepared by Miss Torrens, the hospital dietician. The Lady-on-Duty at the home for June will be Mrs. T. Dolan.

Donations for the month of May are as follows:

Four pts of canned beans, 12 pts. of canned peaches, and 1 pt of pears, Mrs. A. E. Purdy; 2 pair of men's clothing, shortening, Mrs. Welch; Sandwiches, Mrs. P. C. McGuire.

Service was conducted on May 7, by the Salvation Army.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

The Food Value of the Potato.

We read about the food stuffs of various nations and while they vary, they are alike in one respect, the starch or carbohydrate foods form the bulk of the food eaten by all nations—rice in India and China, soy bean and rice in Japan, wheat in America and Britain, and potatoes in Ireland.

What about the potato as a food-stuff? In the Lancet, London, Drs Harriette Chick and Margery Pascal Cutting report their investigation of the nutritive value of wheat and potatoes.

On a dry weight basis the nutritive value of the potato is about equal to wheat but whereas bread contains 35 per cent. water, potatoes contain 78 per cent, so that it takes more than 3 lbs. potatoes as much bulk of potatoes to furnish the same amount of energy. However, from the standpoint of vitamins the potato is superior to wheat in that wheat is not rich in vitamin C. "The potato has been the poor man's protection against scurvy". However, wheat has the same amount of the other vitamins, B and G as the potato.

On the other hand the potato contains only about one-half the amount of nitrogen present in wheat; it is nitrogen that builds cells and replaces old ones, Nature's body builder. While the amount of nitrogen in the potato was even larger than in wheat, it was not of such good quality.

As compared to milk, the nitrogen substances in wheat and in the potato were not as rich or nourishing as in milk.

"The value of a food as a source of nitrogen for the body's needs does not, however, depend only on the proteins it contains, for the proteins are broken down in the intestine into their simpler amino acids thus obtained the body rebuilds its own proteins". Accordingly, if the food stuff contains amino acids in addition to protein, these must be taken into account when estimating their all round food value".

The conclusions arrived by these research workers is that the mixture of nitrogenous substances in the potato has a value as high as that of wheat protein.

While most of us likely enjoy the wheat products more than potatoes, it is interesting to know that the potato has about the same food value.

IT'S EASY to go gala by teaming up a long skirt with a special blouse. Designers for special smart wear is a lovely blouse of soft blue with misty purple tiny ballerina figures. Blouse follows long, tunic lines and is caught in a soft sash bow at one hip. Short sleeves cut in one with blouse which has a short wide V collarless neckline.

DRESSING UP fine printed cottons and transferring them into smart town frocks is a major specialization with our designers. Balloon cloth in black with tiny pink flowers is used for a pretty frock with flattering self ruffled sweetheart neckline and tiny ruffles on sleeves. Soft skirt fullness in front.

LIGHT AND LOVELY dressy hats of natural color panama accent the summer scene. A wide brimmed sailor in this medium trims its brim with a row of tiny brown grosgrain ribbon bows. Matching wide grosgrain ribbon band is finished with tiny brown wool tassels.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S WORTHWHILE! how many ideas and details can appear in a brief little black frock of very slim yardage. Black triple sheer for an afternoon frock has very short ruffled sleeves, an arched shoulder line, a deep wide cubist necklace marked by a self bow, diagonal seaming for a molded line that ends in a bow at the kneeling.

NO FLATTERY like that bestowed by a white hat. White satin is used for a lovely design, its brim draped with full rosettes of white satin caught by rhinestone-studded black velvet rops.

You Can Have Brighter Teeth!

Imperial laboratories made hundreds of tests. Scientists checked their findings with photoelectric measuring devices and perfected this statement: PEPSODENT POWDER PRODUCES A LUSTRE ON TEETH TWICE AS BRIGHT AS THE AVERAGE OF ALL OTHER LEADING BRANDS ::: BRIGHTER THAN ANY OF THEM—BAR NONE! These findings have been double - checked by identical tests made by impartial in-the-home tests ::: by technicians in dental clinics ::: by dentists in their own offices: The result is always the same: Pepsodent Powder with Irium makes teeth far brighter.

You owe your change a child's fear!

This young boy, for example, had badly-stripped teeth. Such ugly marks are often caused by abnormal tooth structure present at birth. Dentists call it "hypocalcification." Others call it "mottled enamel." Whatever the name, it's the cause of many a child's unhappiness and fear. Pepsodent Powder with Irium makes teeth far brighter, helps them stay so longer.

H.&P.E. Regt. Helped to Break The Hitler Line

Picton, June 7—That Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was in the thick of the fighting when the famed Hitler line was smashed in Italy, is revealed in a letter received here from Lieut. A. Mowat of that unit. He is a son of a Major Angus Mowat, formerly stationed at Kingston, and now in civilian life as Inspector of Public Hospitals in Ontario.

In part he wrote: You may have been reading in the newspapers these days and if so, the Adolph Hitler line will be familiar to you. But not as familiar as it is to a lot of us.

"This has been the finest job done by the Canadians in this war. In 36 hours our division smashed, overran and passed through the line which the Germans said was as impregnable as the Maginot line.

"Today, I have examined some of the fortifications. That flesh and blood men could crack that line is purely a miracle. Among other things I saw were the turrets of Mr. V 'Panther' tanks in concrete turrets six inches thick; Mr. G's in three-inch steel armored emplacements; minefields a hundred yards deep and with 90 foot wide entanglements, dug-in tanks and strongholds, concrete and steel bunkers without number, as well as the finest natural defence terrain that any army could ask for.

"The Hasty P's did a magnificent job. I need say no more except that some (I can't say how many) hundreds of Nazis came in as prisoners of war, and many hundreds more were placed where all good Germans eventually go.

Asked to Enforce By-laws

The local police force came in for some criticism for not enforcing local by-laws, during a discussion at town council Tuesday night. Reeve W. Hendry was instructed to speak to the Chief of Police R. Biddle and inform him that council will back the force in enforcing all the by-laws of the town.

50-Mile-Long Glider Train Lands Airborne Troops

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 — (AP) — A 50-mile-long train of gliders towed by transports reinforced positions in the Cherbourg peninsula today, today, the United States 9th Air Force announced.

Berlin dispatches to Swedish newspapers asserted six Allied airborne divisions totalling 25,000 men had been landed on the invasion coast since the start of operations Tuesday morning.

A Canadian flier back from the continent told of seeing tremendous glider formations setting down air-borne troops after dawn today.

The German-controlled Paris radio claimed "annihilation" of parachutist troops on the channel islands of Jersey and Guernsey. There has been no Allied confirmation of landings on these islands.

Germans Killed Most of Youths In Sevastopol

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Moscow, June 7 — Soviet war correspondents filed the story of the survivors of the battered Sevastopol, who described the final German bloodbath—leading the young—by young men of the city on barges, which were towed to the middle of the harbor and then sunk only a few days before the Red army stormed the fortress.

This was described as a terrible tragedy, dictated by the "bullies hats" of the remaining German and Rumanian troops, who knew their number was up because the powerful Red Army was quickly approaching and ready to break through the fortifications that protect the city's mountain ring approaches. No estimate was given of the number of young men thus exterminated.

From dispatches and maps printed in the Soviet press it is evident that once beautiful Sevastopol has been almost completely destroyed —perhaps replacing Stalingrad as Russia's most devastated city. This was the result of both the 250-day siege in 1941 and 1942, when the Germans dropped as many as 128,000 bombs in a single month and poured in countless artillery shells, and the latest siege, in which the German army left up many of the remaining installations as they had time for.

Correspondent Eugenia Kriger wrote in Izvestia that the centre of Sevastopol was like a "a rocky desert." He said "Prunse St. has become a graveyard," and that "on Lenin St., where the Germans were, nothing is left alive." He reported that no large buildings or houses were left standing intact.

Eleven A "Perfection" Richmond Beauties

This week, Form XIA, under the direction of Miss Youdale, presented a play of an entirely new pattern. A group of amateur artists who are endeavouring to put on a record each one at a time to their leader's home to tell her what number they are going to render at the coming show.

However, as each one arrives and informs the director of his or her intentions, it becomes apparent that each has prepared to sing, play or recite the same song.

The comedy continues as the group finally gets together and thrashes out a new program after which, each performer presents his own form of entertainment to the assembly.

The whole cast was excellent. As the bewildered host and director, Ruth Hinchcliffe gave a finished bit of acting, while a similarly superb job is done by Phyllis Trundle as her maid. As the actors begin to arrive, we find Norman Armstrong give an excellent performance as the young singing star. Then Jean Carswell as Professor Hornblow, a student of the French horn, struts about in a masculine manner. Next Garth McCreary appears as the male vocal soloist a la Sinatra followed by a dancing team, Margaret Williams and Kay Sidney who botch up their belief with a beautiful bang. They are followed by Mary Ann Starr, a long winded quiet, who appears later with her accordion as Shlale, who not only gives a fine impersonation of a well-known Canadian theatrical but also entertains in the status of a soloist with a hillarious faded up trick. Then we see Caroline Morden and Lois Woods enter to give us a bit of the hayness to one who shall recite at the concert, and we are informed that the recitation is a "Ballad of Mary Pickford" Peter Pickford's perfect performance as the bewildered host and Miss Youdale as she never quite sure when to serve the sandwiches. Then Mary Polmeier, and Mary Doyle gives a realistic portrayal as the announcer of the various acts, and somehow always manages to keep the audience informed as to what is going on during the fast moving drama.

Selections were presented.

The assembly was favored this week by the piano selections by Eleanor Pickle. As her first solo, Miss Pickle played Polonaise, and her audience sat in thrilled silence as the stirring chords of this well-known classic brushed their ears. As an encore, she presented Mozart Minuet in D major, and although this number is perhaps not as well know its quiet beauty was enjoyed by all. Although the applause suggested a third selection, Eleanor did not appear again.

Election Drives In United States Will Be Limited

By C. H. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, June 7 (CP)—Democratic and Republican National Committees have agreed to limit drastically limited campaign activities in this year's election, it was learned today.

There will be no luxurious special trains hauling the candidates, their staffs and newspaper correspondents across the continent. That has gone out with the war and may never return.

Present plans are based upon the assumption that the candidates will be President Roosevelt and Gov. Thomas Dewey of New York.

Neither has yet said whether he will be a candidate but the time is fast approaching when they must speak.

Dewey must announce his decision in the week of June 26, when Republicans open their national convention in Chicago. Democrats meet in Chicago early in July to pick their candidates.

Almost all State Democratic organizations have named delegates to the July convention and more than enough are pledged to Roosevelt to make his nomination little more than a formality.

State Republican organizations have not made the same progress in selecting delegates to their convention but Dewey is far out in front with these choices.

118 Games of 341 Played in First Quarter of Major League Races Have Been Decided by One Run

Frankie Frisch's Pirates Have Best Record in Title Respect

CHICAGO SOX SECOND

By JACK HAND

If anybody asks the experts at the end of the season as the answer to the race for the pennant between Pittsburgh Pirates and the fourth, fifth or sixth place clubs for today are bound for the big league loop.

As the Majors resumed operations after a two-day rest period caused mainly by the double-header rush and D-Day, a survey of the first quarter of the Major League races revealed that of 341 games played roughly one-third or 118 have been decided by a single score.

Frankie Frisch's Pirates are the best "users" of the game, those tight ones out of the fire, winning eight of 11 for a .727 percentage right above the Cincinnati Reds who played just as hair-raising ball at Brooklyn and Chicago have won at least as many close ones as they've lost.

Strongly enough the St. Louis Cardinals, last year's champs, let their nine close calls but lead the league by four games, indicating they don't often make it close. The New York Giants have the poorest record winning but .417.

Just as deputy the American League race is definitely a job to do with a hitchfield and a hat pin, separating the also-rans from the pennant for a decimal point aspect. The late facts of the league standings showed that only a half gained from top to bottom indicates there is no standout club.

The White Sox have the edge in one-run games by hitting exactly 11 but Detroit with 10 of 16 is close behind. Cleveland has been involved in 21 of 52, winning 13 and the world champion New York Yankees have been hard pressed to get an even break in 12 starts. Washington has had the worst luck in the close ones, losing 10 of 15.

D-DAY SIDELINED ALL LOOP GAMES

D-Day sidelined the International League along with most professional baseball but the Dodgers don't give the appearance of being prepared to resume its "already" season today with a schedule of six games.

Streaks have been the rule rather than the exception in the first quarter of the campaign with flyweek leaders looking strong in the league.

Since the Chiefs blanked Baltimore May 24, they haven't managed a victory while dropping one to Rochester, six to Toronto, three to Baltimore and three to Buffalo.

The Bisons, who have surged into second place only a half game back of Jersey City, bar the door to a Syracuse victory tonight in a doubleheader.

Baltimore and Rochester each have compiled eight-game win streaks and Syracuse, Jersey City and Toronto have managed six in a row. Next to Syracuse, Newark's stretch of seven defeats is the longest. The Bears also were losing a suspended game called to let them to make a train connection.

Montreal has been playing .500 ball alternating its triumphs and defeats so evenly that a three-game win streak and two consecutive defeats are their contributions to the list of streaks.

'MARINES' MOVE INTO FIRST PLACE, BEAT POINTERS

Slugging Marines Squad Defeats Ottawas 8-3 in Close Contest

SMART CONTEST

Slugging at Lansdowne Park last night, the Marines defeated the Ottawas 8-3 in the Interclub Men's Softball League game before a fair crowd. The Marines moved into first place in the league race by the win.

Bill Anderson went to the hilltop for the Marines and scattered six hits in a masterful manner. Instead the Ottawas were able to get more as he failed to give up a single extra base hit. Virgil Hartley, who was on the mound for the Ottawamen but after Cannon's circuit blow in the seventh and Lefebvre's single in the eighth, Carson got a triple with one aboard in the ninth as the Marines scored their third.

Extra base hits and Anderson's strong pitching hurtled against the Marines to victory and the top six games in the loop. Cannon blasted a home run and a triple, while Lefebvre hit for the circuit and Jim Hartley connected a two-base blow. The Marines out-hit the hometown nine by six, four being of the extra base nature.

The lineups:

Stephens-Adamson: Barrige lf., Hartley c., Anderson p., LaBonne 1b., Latchford c.; Wardbaugh 3b.; Woods cf.; Frain and Tomaso rf., and Anderson p.

Point Anng: Whitehead ss.; Lefebvre 2b., Cannon lf., Carson cf., Mann p.; Horwood m.; Bennett rf., Lacombe 1b.; Scott lf.; DePuga and Gilmore.

Score by innings:

Steph-Adamson.	100	010	01a	—	3	6	1
Point Anne	000	001	010	—	2	6	2

Umpires—Ethier and Bawden.

DODGERS BEST

It's Vern Baxter the elongated Dodger first baseman who nets John "Tiger" Eaton, the Paleroo Panther in the main bout at the Ottawa Auditorium tonight. Eaton is noted for his aggressive ring tactics, especially his dazzling flying head scissors attack that usually leaves his opponent a hapless victim. Baxter, like Eaton, is chasing Pruna Stefan, the Pacific Coast champion for a bout. Two all-star preliminaries precede this important meeting.

Sport World Inactive on D-Day As Mark of Respect to Armed Forces

(By The Canadian Press.)

With the exception of racing at two tracks and a scanty sprinkling of New York the great receipts of which were donated to the Red Cross, the sport world was inactive on D-Day as a mark of respect to the young men in uniform who had launched the invasion of liberated Europe. Joe Louis, Pelham, Chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, ordered the suspension of boxing in that state while Jim Braddock, former Illinois 10-rounder at Philadelphia was also postponed. At Delaware Park, the only eastern track which functioned, there was trouble when the jockeys held up the program until better payments were forthcoming. Bay Meadows, in California, donated its proceeds to war charities.

Coming out of a five-months' retirement subsequent to losing his N.B.A. featherweight title, Lauro Salas of Brooklyn bowed to Petlambert Field at St. Louis.

Toronto, June 7.—(CP)—Western Canadian racetracks have produced more than their share of jockeys who have gone farther afield and reached the top of their profession, which is riding. George Schilling, a Western race judge, thinks he has the solution, and it all boils down to two reasons—the short ball-park tracks and the work the boys get.

The tracks at Calgary, Edmonton, Edmonton and Regina are of the hand-box size and a jockey has to be clever to toil his mount around the sharp turns. When he goes East to ride Tiger Brooks it's just duck soup for him, and he can see an opening before it's there, schilling said.

Then there's the work. With the supply of horses now too plentiful in every boy gets at least five or six mounts a day, and sometimes more, daily spends the morning exercising the horses after that these isn't much he don't know about the business.

The West has produced such top-notch riders as Johnny Longden, Dennie Meade, Red Peller, Johnny Gilbert, Herb Litzenberger, Ted Steffens, Tom Luther, Ted Leishman, Scotty Craigmyle, Albert Rodiou and Ken Lavitt to name a few listed by Schilling.

Incidentally:

Hamilton took advantage of the new amateur baseball ruling in Ontario to import two cracker-jack United States players. One is Buck Geary, formerly of Pittsburgh Pirates, and the other is Oy Williams who played with Albany in the Eastern League . . . Harvey Bennett, who has supplied Ottawa Generals with Memorial Cup this Spring, has been rejected by the Army, He has been lined up to tend goal for Boston Bruins next season . . . Dick Irvin, Montreal Canadiens coach, is also a pigeon fancier. One of his birds took fourth place in a recent race. . . . Jimmy Ward, Saskatoon Regina Pigeon Race . . . Dave Cawthorne, recently discharged from the R. C. A. F., has been ordered to Aurora to join Headquarters June 16. Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson comments: "It is possible he will sign with still his other manager in addition to the plethora of same now managing his affairs." Jimmy Daron, popular sassy rider who was injured in the fall at Ottawa, has been appointed broadcaster for the race meets in Montreal . . .

COLUMBIA KIDS BEATEN 8-4 BY C.N. RAILROADERS

Winners Both Outhit and Outfielded Losers to Win Easily

BAWDEN ON MOUND

Taking full advantage of thirteen safeties and the odd miscue on the part of their opponents, the Brown's C. N. R. softballers had little difficulty in disposing of the Columbia Squires "Irish" nine by a scheduled city softball fixture at the Agricultural Park last night as they doubled the Irish 8-4 in a fairly 3-4 win.

The Railroaders were full value for their win, both outhitting and outfielding their opponents as they scooted to victory behind the fourhit hurling of veteran Johnnie Bawden after they had collected but nothing lead in the first two innings. From then on it was all Railroaders like Sgnny Green didn't come too often on ball club rosters and he could deliver in the clutch while exchanging verbal cracks with the best of them.

(Grimsby collection.)

Last week Bud Townsend selected an all-star softball team with players gleaned from the Belleville district—a period of the last half of July. Townsend Reid's Belleville club's altogether at any too well with one of the best ballplayers ever to play the game in the Belleville area. We refer to none other than Bud "Sonny" Dyma, former Point Anne star Softballer, who is leading read Mr. Townsend's selection last week and apparently had the skids because elsewhere in today's issue say the Belleville and Sonny Green's idea of an all-time all-star softball team for Belleville and district and he doesn't altogether agree with Townsend's except to have John Bawden as his No. 1 hurler, Nicky Zero at short and Art Cannon.

In his letter to the Sports Department Sonny intimates that, apparently Mr. Townsend can't remember ten years back. Back in 1931 to be exact. However, Green's all-star team is well worth looking over, for instance he has Bawden, who is mentioned in ball circles reminds us of the time when the Six Nations Indian lad's sense of humor was responsible for in the heyday of Belleville's old C.O.B.L. Yes! For instance it isn't many fans who know his pet trick among his teammates was "Cronbyzatchia", or as he would explain it, "Let's get to ball with the remark—:let old Ron show how." Considering the odds for the great Mohawk Indian Chieftain leader, and Sonny must, by his pet nickname honestly as the Tecumseh age he was a leader himself.

Then there's Art Cannon, when Sonny was relieving Perry Mills as catcher for Belleville in a league game one sunny Saturday afternoon and outfielding their opponents, continued and a smoke screen barrage laid down by Point Anne's Bill Mann, a hysterika old his forebearer much credit to practically win over the Ottawa shaghinskaites. Cannon registers like Sgnny Green didn't come too often on ball club rosters and he could deliver in the clutch while exchanging verbal cracks with the best of them.

The Kibitzer

Almost anything can happen in a bridge game. A player should keep his eyes peeled and his ears spread out for a break of some kind. If you like that sort of thing, there is never a dull moment.

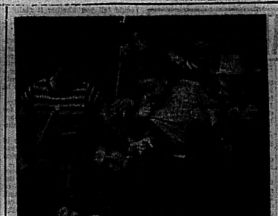
You are sitting in the south as declarer. Your partner opens a spade. The opening lead from west is five of hearts. Quick guidance at the dummy will tell you what you are up against.

You can draft two south clubs on dummy's K Q of hearts. But then still leaves you two possible south club losers. And only a startling adventure, it seems could save one of them.

If there is any hope, it is with a cockeyed-endplay. Or, you must first strip-as many suits as possible. Then with a throw-in force an opponent to lead something favorable.

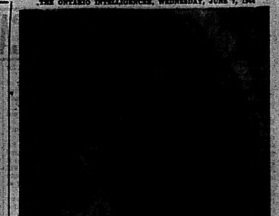
With the first trick, two trumps, heart ace, shift two south clubs on dummy K Q of hearts, and trump dummy's last diamond. By this time, your hands are out of trump cards and opponents are out of diamonds.

Now lead a small south club toward dummy with jack. If west has both the king and queen of clubs, he will be endplayed. And it makes no difference whether or not he has other clubs with them.



Suppose west wins with the queen and leads a small club. Dummy plays, wins and then the south ace. Or, if west leads back the club king, south ace wins and then dummy ruffs.

Instead of a club, suppose west elects to lead a heart. You have merely aluff a club in one hand and trump in the other. Quick thinking would happen if west had the king of clubs all alone.



Such plays can be found when you have the right selective instinct. This will leave you two possible south club losers. And only a startling

AT THE BELLE

"A GUY NAMED JOE"

Another boost to stardom came to Van Johnson with his assignment to the important role of Ted Randall in A Guy Named Joe, co-starring Spencer Tracy and Irene Dunne.

In the film, now in its final day at the Belle theatre, Johnson plays the aviator who falls in love with Miss Dunne. It is he who comes under the protection of Tracy, the pilot who has lost his flyers' legend, that's returns, do not die, but return to serve as inspiration and guides to the young men who carry on after them.

The Canadian Movietone News, and an entertaining short subject complete the program.

"CRASH OF LIGHTNING"

As direct and explosive as machine gun fire, "Crash Dive of Lightning" which starts it's engagement at the Belle theatre tomorrow, becomes Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most powerful war drama to feature an all-male cast.

With Jean Pierre Aumont, Gene Kelly, Dame Sybil Thorndike and Richard Whorf, the film deals with the rigors of a company of courageous French soldiers during an internment in a German prison camp.

Starring in the various male characterization in "Assignment in Brittany," Aumont makes a bid for further screen laurels as Paul Dupuy, French soldier of war who escapes to join the fight against the Nazis — just as he did in real life.

Handling the role of Father Lebeche, an iron-spirited, idealistic Gallic soldier, Gene Kelly chalks up another peerless portrayal. His characterization of the no-nonsense driver who refuses to be coerced by Nazi cruelty, vies with his roles in "Pilot No. 5", "Du Barry Was a Lady" and "Thousands Cheer."

Highlighted by the gripping escape of Kelly and Aumont from the grim German prison and their subsequent dangerous journey to Unoccupied France, "The Cross of Lorraine" was adapted from the recent best-seller by refugee author Hans Habe, "A Thousand Shall Fall."

"THE FALCON OUT WEST"

Crammed with sizzling action and presenting one of the most baffling plots in the history of the popular "Falcon" pictures, the "Falcon Out West" as the companion feature, narrated the adventures which befall the master sleuth when he becomes involved in the two mysterious rattlesnake deaths.

Tom Conway again brings to the screen his skilful impersonation of the debonair sleuth detective. The supporting cast is headed by Carole Gallagher, Barbara Hale, Joan Barclay and Don Douglas.

An exceptionally fine cast includes Cliff Clark, Si Gargan, Lyle Talbot, Minor Watson and Don Douglas.

An entertaining short subject "Film Violets" completes the program.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cover Girl"

To lovers of lilting music, and who isn't in the mood for that Jerome Kern and Ira Gershwin have composed within the score and title of Columbia's Technicolor musical, "Cover Girl" currently starring Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly at the McCarthy Theatre, will come as a welcome relief from the usual.

Kern, as a matter of fact, during the 30's, he collaborated on screen plays, has written and lyrics which explains why his musical scores reveal the sure touch of an expert showman. No song of his seems to suffer when put to the unreliable spot. Rather, must there be a need for a song, and the song is right till the end.

Consequently, he has been seeking out the world's greatest successes and Hollywood hits that he is known by, summoning them all here. However, not to reach a few of the Kern melodies, there are "Long Ago and Far Away," "The Touch Of Your Hand" the Academy award-winning "The Way You Look Tonight" and his classic "Man River" from the greatest operetta written in these times, "Show Boat".

Lyric collaborator with whom he is now working for the fire time, Ira Gershwin's songs have all been written for the stage or screen. With his brother, George, he turned out the songs for eighteen shows, including those for the only musical play to win the Pulitzer Prize, "Of Thee I Sing" its successful sequel, "Let It Rat Cake," and with the addition of DuBose Heyward to the team, "Porgy and Bess" that outstanding American folk opera. Between assignments with George, Ira collaborated with many other top-flight composers, among them Harold Arlen, Billy Rose and Vincent Youmans. It was with the last named that he scored his first success, "The Little Girls, In Blue."

Do you remember "I Got Rhythm" "Lady Be Good," "Embraceable You," "S Wonderful" and "I Got Man I Love". Credit Ira with the lyrics on all as well as on many more of equal brilliance.

Now, together for the fire time in "Cover Girl," Kern and Gershwin have produced what many consider their best. There are seven songs: "Make Way For Tomorrow", "One Thing", "Put Me To The Test", "The Show Must Go On", "Cover Girl", "Long Ago" and "Who's Complaining?" and each one is a honey, a "His Parade" candidate or occupant.

AT THE CAPITOL

(East Side Kids)

Fans of the East Side Kids will get laughs and thrills from the latest film of their rough-and-tumble audience, "Million Dollar Kid," which opens at the Capital Theatre tomorrow. Featuring Ben Edmund and Jack Dietz had Frank H. Young write the screen play, contending which gets the gang involved with society's upper crust.

Starring in the Monogram film are Lee Gorcey, Hunts Hall, Gabriel Dell and Billy Benedict. Williams Fox directed the picture, which also has Al Curtis, Herbert Ekeland, Noah Beery, Sr., Stanley Brown and Iris Adrian in the cast.

"Death Valley Rangers"

Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard and Bob Steele, three of the screen's outstanding cowboy heroes, are featured in "Death Valley Rangers," Monogram's latest "Trail Blazers" western drama which opens an engagement at the Capital Theatre next to the hit. Linda Brent plays the leading feminine role, and the cast also includes Kenneth Harlan, Charles Stone, Weldon Harburn, Glen Strange, Forrest Taylor and Lee Bonnell. The film was produced and directed by Robert Tansey, and the original story by Robert Emmett and Frances Kavanaugh was adapted for the screen by Elizabeth Beecher.

LARDING IN GREECE UNCONFIRMED

London, June 7 — (CP)— Wholly unconfirmed reports of an Allied landing in Greece last night came from Ankara.

Diplomatic advices located the area reported landing in the Peloponnesus—part of Greece south of the Corinth Canal—and Reuters, the United Nations radio at Algiers said Berlin radio broadcast an Ankara report placing it more specifically at Pairas on the northwest coast.

'Sonny' Green Tries His Hand At Selecting an All-Star Team

It looks as though H. W. "Red" Townsend started something when he selected an all-star team taken from the personnel of district softball clubs over a period of the past ten years or so.

Now the question of selection has been submitted by Earl "Sonny" Green, former Point Anne and Belleville ballster, who in his own right was one of the top-ranking softball pitchers and players ever to appear on a local district.

Twenty years ago "Sonny" Green had no peer when it came to pitching the business of softball, which he today refers to as "smallball." Before submitting his selection Mr. Green, who now resides in Deseronto, states that he is going further back than a decade ago for his choice as the No. 1 all-star team of alltime and his second choice.

In case you're interested in "Sonny's" selections here they are:

First Base	Pitcher	Second Team
John Bayden	Pitcher	Stan Luffman
Lorne Jackman	Pitcher	Jim Hannan
Clarence Tuttle	Catcher	Murney Green
Don Jordan	1st Base	Harold Bayden
Rene St. Denis	2nd Base	Ted Henn
Art Whitehead	3rd Base	Cyrald Ribler
Ricky Sero	Shortstop	Carman Cook
Left Field	Left Field	Frank Murray
"Sonny" Tuttle	Centre Field	Harold Ford
Art Genereaux	Right Field	Phil Lott
Bill Whelan	Utility	Ted Joslin

Now you've read "Sonny" Green's and "Red" Townsend's selections of alltime, all-star softball teams of this district. Are there any others who would like to try a hand at it?

Reds Promise Full Offensive Against Germans

Moscow, June 7 — (AP)— Russia is prepared to throw the great weight of the Red army into the growing offensive against Germany, Red Star, the soviet army newspaper, said today.

"A strong, mounting attack of all the armies of the United Nations will be fully developed," Red Star said.

The great armies which at Teheran gave solemn promises not to make a separate peace are beginning to move forward for a meeting in Berlin the newspaper added.

Moscovites got up early this morning to read the freshest invasion bulletins, despite one of the wildest night of celebration during the war. The soviet press, in an unprecedented display, turned over whole pages to the momentous military developments Russia is being awaited.

Intercessional Service Opens June Session of Hastings County Council

Their usual opening-term amenities hampered by the shadow of momentous happenings overseas, members of the Hastings County Council under Warden Thomas Fleming, inaugurated their annual June session Tuesday with an intercessional service prior to launching into the important business of their sessional activities.

In common with industry, business and hundreds of city residents, the county-councillors joined in the simple yet impressive service that characterized other gatherings during the day. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. G. Hornby, and the quiet dignity of Bible Hall was enhanced with the low intonation of the Lord's Prayer, a hymn and the National Anthem.

Warden Thomas Fleming in his opening address extended the chair's sympathy to the sorrowing and especially directed his words to the newly-appointed reeve of Dekro, Mr. Gordon Currie, whose son had been killed in the air service of his country. "One body, even as ours, is giving up their lives to protect what we are duty bound to maintain for them not only now but in the years to come. They fully expect us to carry on "business as usual" and it is our solemn duty to live up to their expectations."

The warden asked the full co-operation of the council in the important deliberations, resolutions and decisions to follow in the coming three days session.

Committees Named

Immediately following the warden's address, the council named 3 important committees to deal with important matters. These were the Committee on Equalization of Assessment, the Relief Committee, The Equalization Committee, as named, consists of Chairman George MacDonald; Fred Wilson; A. A. Mavety; G. Montgomery; J. A. Bell; David Mawson; E. R. Vivian; W.R. Linn; W. C. Weir; Treasurer James Haggerty; County Clerk Eric Denyes and the Warden.

The Relief Committee which went into special session this morning at 9 o'clock, is composed of S. W. Nicolson; R. A. Harrison; W. J. Thompson; Charles Mills; Mrs. Rickle; James Moore; John Churcher; W. J. Davis; Jos. Rowsell; George West; the county clerk and the Warden.

Applications for the position of physician to the Hastings County Home were received and will be dealt with at a future meeting. Minutes of meetings of the Agricultural Committee recommending certain agricultural grants were also tabled for reference to the Ways and Means Committee.

Council concurred in a resolution forwarded by the Lanark County Council which stated that inasmuch as sufficient aid is not being given to Children's Societies of Ontario by the Provincial Government, the Government be petitioned to increase the present grants to over fifty per cent of the cost of the Societies.

Need More Gasoline

Endorsement was also given by council to a resolution already con-a post-war fund to purchase road-sidered in by several other county councils, asking that the Oil Controller give serious consideration to suitable gasoline categories for members of county councils. It is felt that there, deputy reeve, who comprises such bodies and who conduct the business on several municipal offices, are sometimes forced to drive more than 3,000 to 4,000 extra miles. It was the belief of the councils supporting the recommendation that if the councillors were willing to supply cars for this important municipal work, the government through the Oil Controller should co-operate and supply the necessary gasoline coupons.

Policy Changed

Previous to this year, council was informed, the Department of Highways instead of paying a fifty per-cent subsidy on the price of machinery purchased, had subdivided counties on a mileage basis. This year this policy had been changed, and the department will pay the subsidy on the basis of what the amounts to $3,600.

This announcement brought on a serious discussion with members taking appreciative exception to the Road Committee's recommendation that the sum be set aside in valley.

Japanese Troops Reach Outskirts Of Changsha

Chungking, June 7 (AP)—Japanese troops were reported today to have reached the outskirts of Changsha, their major goal in the renewed offensive in Hunan Province.

Previous dispatches told of bitter resistance by the Chinese against the Japanese drive on the province capital a bar against enemy control of the Hankow-Canton railroad.

Six Japanese columns had been reported slashing southward against the three-ragged city.

Earlier a Chinese communique said that in continued attacks along the Salween front in Yunnan Province, the Chinese forced the Japanese out of Chiaotou, and that Chinese troops reached Chiangtsun, Wa Weizen in the drive toward Shwell river valley.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 16.

I was still asking myself that question when Nettie was brought in, to corroborate — or refute — Roberts' story.

"I don't know nothing. I was in the kitchen minding my own business," she began the instant the door closed behind her. "Roberts come in, around eight it was, with a pie what Aggy gave him, and we gave him some more vittles. Miss Kay said we could," she finished defiantly. And I nodded the truth.

"And after a while Miss Kay and her aunt come in and said this here Professor was lying in the library, over to the new Burton house, dead and murdered. And then she walked out again and Roberts and us talked it over and said wasn't it awful, and he didn't like very much to go in the house when maybe the murder was still lurking and we said it was his dooty and so in the end he went. That's all I know."

With that she stopped, thoroughly out of breath.

"Okay. You can go, Nettie. Send in your sister, will you?" the Inspector told her pleasantly.

A few minutes later the Leda cameo had replaced the black onyx, and Mae was twisting the hem of her apron nervously, while she repeated her sister's statement almost verbatim—and pretty nearly as breathlessly.

Somehow it didn't seem right to me. I murmured an excuse, put down my pad and slipped from the room.

Two policemen were idling in the hall. I didn't want them to see where I was going, and so detoured through Dad's study and the hall behind the stairs to my room, before I went into the kitchen.

Nettie was standing at the stove, stirring something. She didn't wear a brooch, I noticed. Neither a cameo nor the black onyx.

"How's the stew coming—Mae?" I asked quietly, stepping close to her.

She gasped and dropped the ladle she was holding. "Why — why — how did you guess?" she stammered shakily.

"Nettie forgot to say 'ayah' when she impersonated you", I told her. "Why did you do it? Scared you can't—lie so well?"

Mae started to cry. "Oh, please, Miss Kay, don't tell Joe Pettengill. It ain't account of that. I can lie good as Nettie. It's—I'm scared of the police. And when I'm scared I get balled up and say things. I shouldn't oughter. I don't mean lies—just things".

"I understand". I patted her back reassuringly. "Tell Nettie I know. And be careful, Inspector Pettengill is shrewd.

"Don't I know it!" Mae wailed. "That's why I'm so scared. Oh, I wish he'd leave us alone. You won't tell on us Miss Kay, now will you, please?"

"Of course I won't", I promised a second time.

How could I tell on anyone, I thought on my way back to the drawing room, when I was hiding so much myself?

Soon after his futile attempt at finding enlightenment in our backstairs regions, the Inspector left for a while, and Aunt Millie and I had a breathing spell and could indulge in plots and deliberations.

"It's simply disgusting how all our plans have gone haywire", Aunt Millie complained. "Here I thought it was a bright idea, getting into that house, and now look what I've let you in for".

"It doesn't matter, so long as the Inspector doesn't know why I sneaked back in", I consoled her.

"Give him time and he will", she prophesied. "He can see we—and all the others he's questioning—are hiding something. He'll put two and two together all right and 'guess' we're all hiding the same thing. Or—don't you think we are?"

"It looks that way", I agreed morosely. "Too bad we can't have a general get-together on it".

"Don't you do it! Don't you give yourself away to anyone", Aunt Millie cautioned me in open alarm. "We are only hiding the suspicion that a certain party has been holing up in his own house, and we may be wrong at that. The police must have searched the third floor, and we'd have heard it if they'd found signs of recent occupation. But Forrestall and Roberts and — yes, your maids also —Gods knows what they're hiding! Probably the murderer himself."

"You mean— Bruce?" I asked warily.

"Who else? Who had a better right to smack down the thieving little professor?" Aunt Millie wanted to know. "If only he hadn't smacked so hard! And—the worst of it is, I daren't take you to Reno now".

"You mean, the Inspector wouldn't let us go?"

Aunt Millie sniffed. "Wouldn't let us go? On the contrary! He'd tell us it was a grand plan, and then he'd have us shadowed all the way".

"Yes—and if he found out I was in Reno, divorcing Bruce Jollimar, he'd 'guess' —what I had lost in his house", I followed up the thought.

"That's only the half of it. Imagine if it was Bruce, and they arrested him for murder just when the judge pronounced you free. Would that be a Roman holiday for the tabloids!"

The words conjured up vision of clamorous reporters and lurid headlines—all highly injurious to Dad's position and Allan's future.

"Nothing to do but stick it out then", I said resignedly.

"Nothing but brazen it out", Aunt Millie corrected.

Dad and Allan didn't come in for lunch, but the Inspector appeared just as we were sitting down to it and was tempted to join us. I will say he was a charming guest and didn't once mention the murder at the table. Or afterwards.

The latter, simply because there was no afterwards. He proceeded straight from the dining room to his temporary office, without demanding my assistance, or Aunt Millie's company.

It gave us the foolish idea that the afternoon was to be ours, and we were deep in a debate what to do with it—whether to return some calls or take a drive into the country on this miraculously rainless day—when the terrace door burst open and Mrs. Libby walked in. This time her escort was Dr. Spencer Woodill, the Boston diagnostician.

"Glad to find you in, my dears", she told us jointly and tersely. "But I'm not calling on you. One of the policemen over at the Burton house said I'd find Inspector Pettengill here. Where is he?—In the drawing room?—Fine! — Come along then. I want you as an audience for what I have to say".

In the drawing room she installed herself in the most comfortable chair, waved the Doctor to another and told the Inspector peremptorily:'

"You're a nincompoop, Joe Pettengill. Calling a murder murder, when accident or suicide would have been much more convenient".

The Inspector didn't seem to resent her rudeness or the omission of his title. "Also much less correct", he said placidly. "What's on your mind, Mrs. Libby—outside of bawling me out?"

"The dead man, Professor Stoddard", she snapped at him. "He came to Cliffport with a letter of introduction to me, and I sponsored him socially. How d'you think I like it, reading in the paper he was killed while trying to commit a robbery?"

"The paper didn't say that. It only hinted it looked thataway".

"That's the same. And it's a lie. He didn't. He went there because of a scientific discovery that had driven him crazy. And I mean crazy, and can prove it. Tell him, Spence!" she ordered belligerently.

The Boston physician smiled indulgently. "Gladly, my dear Grace. Only—don't you think you should proceed a little further with the—er—preliminaries?"

"I see what you mean". She settled herself firmly for action. "Now, where'll I start? You all know about the medical dispute that almost disrupted my party last Thursday—about Roberts' hands?"

The Inspector was ignorant of the incident, and Mrs. Libby sketched it briefly for him.

"And then yesterday—you remember how it poured?—when I get home from a Red Cross meeting, there is the professor, waiting for me in a perfect dither of excitement. Wanted to know how he could get hold of Dr. Woodill. Had to ask him something, urgently. In connection with Roberts' hands".

"With Roberts' hands? But — why all the fuss about 'em? He's had this trouble a couple years, and everyone knows it's just—something wrong with his system", the Inspector wondered.

"Maybe it is and maybe it isn't. Don't interrupt". Mrs. Libby admonished. "Anyway! I got Spence on the phone—he was only at the hospital butting in—and he promised to come right over. Now you go on, Spence".

"As you wish, my dear". The famous diagnostician leaned forward, elbows on the arms of his chair, fingertips beating a gentle tattoo against each other—a picture of professional eminence about to give a verdict. "I followed Mrs. Libby's summons immediately, and found Professor Stoddard very excited indeed when I arrived a few minutes later. It is hardly any distance at all from the hospital to Mrs. Libby's residence, you know—"

"Yes. Sure, we know. Go on", urged the Inspector.

"It is almost impossible to give you a clear picture of our conversation. The man was incoherent with excitement. Only one of his many questions was clear, and that one he literally jumped at me. It was: "Have you ever heard of the Valley of Sickness, somewhere in Central America?"

"The what?" asked Inspector Pettengill incredulously.

And Mrs. Libby threw in triumphantly: "Didn't I tell you he was crazy?"

"I told him I had not". Dr. Woodill went on calmly. "And as a result we had to listen to a wild tale about this strange place, all mixed up with local superstitions. It was called the Valley of Sickness because anyone staying in it for a certain length of time became afflicted with a dreadful disease. Of which he told me the symptoms—in a layman's manner naturally, and—"

"And then he wanted to know if it could be leprosy", Mrs. Libby again cut in, unable to leave the spotlight entirely to her companion.

"Leprosy! Don't tell me he was intimating Roberts might be—a leper!" Aunt Millie burst out worriedly.

Dr. Woodill smiled soothingly at her. "Don't excite yourself, dear lady. Roberts is not a leper. And to return to our—er—valley: I told Professor Stoddard his description of the symptoms applied to a number of disease, and then—"

"Then he asked, did it apply to radium poisoning also?" Mrs. Libby finished for her friend.

"And does it?" the Inspector inquired, plainly interested in spite of himself.

"Certainly. That's why the whole thing impressed me. That is Roberts' affliction. Radium poisoning. I stake my professional reputation on it, no matter how many of my colleagues here assure me it is impossible, that the man has never been in contact with radium. But don't let me digress. I asked the Professor why he made the suggestion, and he became secretive and —well—rambling again. As I pieced his gibberish together, later on, it showed he had come to the conclusion that the outcroppings of rock in this mysterious valley were pitchblende—uranium, the source of radium, you know?— of such strength that it had the same disintegrating effect on the human tissues as pure radium— in lesser degree, of course."

"And could that be so?" Aunt Millie gasped.

The Doctor shrugged. "Possibly. No pitchblende of such potent radium content has ever been found in quantity, but that doesn't say there is none. Small stones have appeared a few times, from various sources. Always connected with weird tales of inaccessible spots and native hostility. I even recall a fruitless expedition or two in search of alleged deposits of just such powerul ore— into the jungles of South —or maybe Central—America. I told Professor Stoddard that. I even added: 'If there is such a valley, please lead me to it!' Such a find would be worth untold millions, besides being the greatest boon to mankind".

"But you just said it made people ill", Inspector Pettengill objected.

"So does fire destroy a house if it isn't watched", Dr. Woodill expounded. "If an uranium deposit of such strength were discovered, why —there would be no end of the good it could do. The prohibitive price of radium would drop. It would become generally available for experiments—cures. Imagine what it would do in the field of cancer treatment alone: All sorts of miracles would be accomplished in the various branches of science—"

"You told the Professor all that?" the Inspector interrupted.

"I didn't need to. He knew it. Besides, he didn't give me the chance. Once I'd admitted the mere possibility, he went completely mad".

"Yes. Jumped up and down like a Jack-in-the-box and squealed with joy", Mrs. Libby took up the tale. "Kissed me, and kissed Dr. Woodill, if you please! And then he ran out of the house without a good-by or thank you. And I mean, ran. On foot. In the rain. His car is still parked in my driveway".

"All this took place around five. He must have gone straight to the Burton house—and his death—when he left", Dr. Woodill concluded gravely.

"But what has the Burton house to do with that—that strange valley somewhere in Central America?" the Inspector puzzled.

I couldn't keep silent any longer.

"Everything!" I shouted excitedly. "But everything! Don't you see? That's why he was hunting for the safe. The stone! It came from that valley. He said it was an ordinary fieldstone, but he lied. It was pitchblende. That's how Roberts got his hands. He's been handling the stone for years. And Conley Forrestall told us there was a letter in the safe, with directions for finding—whatever it was Mr. Burton had discovered".

"Holy smoke!" said the Inspector in a kind of awe. "Holy smoke! I believe you're right!"

For a moment there was profound silence after the Inspector's pronouncement. Then everybody was talking at once, Aunt Millie and I supplying the details of the afternoon's discussion, Mrs. Libby and Dr. Woodill expressing their opinion of them.

Only Inspector Pettengill had nothing more to say. He sat, teetering back and forth in his chair, a cherubic smile on his face—listening with all his might. Until Mrs. Libby addressed him directly.

"See the paper gets it right now, Joe Pettengill", she laid down the law. "Professor Stoddard was not burgling that house. He went there to confirm a scientific discovery. In an unconventional manner, I grant you. But that was because the magnitude of his find had temporarily unbalanced his reason".

"Why, Mrs. Libby, I'm astonished at you!" The Inspector smiled his pleasantest at the ruler of Cliffport. "If I tell the paper to print what you said, I'd be calling your dead friend the worst robber ever was. And as to him being crazy—I'd say he was crazy like a fox, wanting to steal millions worth of radium".

Perhaps Mrs. Libby recognized the logic of his words. At any rate, the sharp retort I had expected didn't come. She merely snapped: "Then see the whole thing doesn't go further. Keep the Boston reporters away".

And Dr. Woodill, no doubt to create a diversion, asked: "Er—about the stone. If you would be kind enough to show it to me, I probably could tell you whether it really is pitchblende."

"But the stone is no longer—" I began innocently.

A quick glance from the Inspector silenced me. "Sorry, the stone's no longer around here", he changed what I had intended to say with great presence of mind "It's—er—down to headquarters. Being tested, for blood. We suspect it to be the murder weapon".

He got up while talking. "Mrs. Libby—Dr. Woodill; thanks for coming to tell me, and good-by. Flynn—Flynn! Come here a minute!"

And then we were all outside in the hall, and Sergeant Flynn was inside in the drawing room, closeted with his chief.

It was the second time I had seen the Inspector dismiss one of the Cliffport's great without fuss or apology. That jovial Pettengill smile was a blind for a lot of resourcefulness, I thought admiringly.

Fashion Flashes

INDICATIVE of a new silhouette is a black crepe frock by Irene. Sleeveless with slightly extended shoulders, it is slit very low in the neckline which has brief upstanding revers. The very slender sheath is broken at the hipline by a crushed sash of gold lame pulled through slots and tied in a big bow at hip.

VERY LITTLE DAUGHTER likes smart clothes. Next autumn she's going to be cozy and pretty wearing a blazer suit, a red cardigan jacket bounded with white braid and a pleated wool skirt in red, white, green and tan. Mothers and youngsters applauded this one at a recent fashion show.

JUST PERFECT for smart summer wear is a low-crowned wide brimmed sailor of white baku. The brim has a wide scallop edge and is piped in navy taffeta to match the broad crown band.

A FORMULA for smartly detailed prints that looks like an autum hold-over is the deep wide fichu eckline and bare arms, the fichu extending over the bare shoulder. Nice on a white and navy dotted silk crepe frock with pink roses set on navy ribbos at the base of the deep fichu neckline.

JUST AS SMART come autum as they were in the spring, is the verdict on the soft bloude of printed fabric with neckline tied in big bow. Pink chiffon sprigged with black flower clusters is used for an especially pretty blouse.

CANADIAN UNIT PINNED ON BEACH FOR SOME TIME

Finally Moves Inland Several Hundred Yards From the Shore

By LES HAWKINS
Dispatched by The Canadian Press
Aboard a Landing Craft Assault, June 7 — A Canadian unit was pinned for some time to a beach on the Normandy coast between Cherbourg and La Harve by machine-gun fire and mortar and shell fire.

These machine-gun fire poured on the Canadians after they landed yesterday, directed from behind a ridge some 300 yards beyond high-water mark.

For several hours the men were forced to hold on in trenches but finally they fought their way out and moved several hundred yards inland.

The unit suffered from mines which knocked out several waterproofed tanks which were supposed to go on shore to shore. Artillery fire also was a problem although it seemed largely neutralized by prolonged bombardment before landings.

The U. S. battleship Arkansas and the French cruisers Montcalm and Georges Leygues moved into shore range to help the army forces and give all possible help to the temporarily stranded force.

D-Day Observed By Kiwanians

"Due to the tremendous news which has broken in this city today I do not think it would be right to proceed with the regular program and the club's apologies are extended to our guest speaker of the day, Walter Reid, an official of the Bell Telephone Company," was the said President Jack McVeigh, when the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club was opened at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Instead of the regular program, Lieut. Gordon Bryce, late their lunch and went to the Armouries with a body to take part in the open air intercessional service conducted by the Belleville ministerial association under the sponsorship of His Worship Mayor H. W. Robins.

At the luncheon Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Myers, Rector of Christ Church, was present and read a portion of scripture, followed by a prayer for the guidance of the Canadian boys now storming the beaches in France. His prayer that this day and hour led to return to their loved ones in their homeland. He also prayed that out of the sacrifice would come a better world. The National Anthem and the United States anthem were then sung and toasts were drunk to King George VI, General and F. D. Roosevelt, president of the United States. Mr. Bryce invited the members for inviting him as a guest another day and also asked that he would be able to return to deliver the address which was the occasion. The president thanked Mr. Reid and hoped he would not be long returning to the city and then turn of events in the world news.

Dissuade Churchill Only With Difficulty From Going to France

London, June 7 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill, it was revealed by Sir Brian Horrocks today, persuaded "only with great difficulty" from accompanying the invasion forces. Sir Brian told reporters he showed H.M.S. Hilary, as saying when he visited the ship that the Prime Minister was eventually convinced by high Allied officers that his presence in the battle area would involve a great deal of extra work in connection with protection.

Munro Scores Third Invasion Beat on Tuesday

London, June 7. (CP Cable)—Rowland Munro, chief Canadian Press War Correspondent with the Canadians invading France, made his fourth landing on Tuesday and — for the same time completed the hattrick on invasion-scene beats for the Canadian press, and also for the British Commonwealth.

It was learned here that the bespectacled correspondent went ashore yesterday at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The 31-year-old Munro, who first gained international prominence with his dramatic story of the Canadian landing at the Dieppe Beaches in 1942, scored a world beat on the invasion of Sicily. His first story was 7 ½ hours ahead of the next, and 10 hours ahead of the rest covering the assault. His spot story of the invasion of the toe of Italy took approximately the same time to get out.

Not more than a dozen stories by Munro have been received since the invasion of Normandy, all but one were written during or before the actual assault on the channel. However, Munro scored his third invasion beat when the first correspondents' contingent from correspondents accompanying ground forces.

A British war correspondent in New York at 11.31 last night said he still was waiting to see how the 45 minutes' fighting had won their beachhead objective and had shored on inland.

Canadian Press War Correspondent with the Canadian assault troops is William A. Stewart, who covered the Canadian campaigns in Sicily and Italy where he teamed up with Munro and both with Douglas Amazon, who will be still with the army covering the Italian front.

Munro, Amazon and Stewart were attached to the ground troops. CP's Allan Mcklean was accredited to the Royal Navy and was aboard the Canadian ship Prince Henry which carried Canadian troops and their landing craft to within easy distance of the coast.

Covering activities of the Canadian air forces engaged in the great assault is Louis Hunter, attached by RCAF to the 2nd Tactical Group which probably will move to France at the earliest opportunity.

Reporting for the French-speaking Canadian troops is Maurice Duplessis, who covered their fighting activities in Sicily and Italy.

Roads Committee Subsidy Placed In General Fund Instead of Special Fund for Purchase of Machinery

Hastings County Council yesterday passed a resolution to place the subsidy received from the province of Ontario, Lands, Forests, Mines and Northern Affairs, that a Roads Committee subsidy of $1,500 had been received paid by the Department of Highways, to the credit of the General Funds of the County instead of in the special fund for the purchase of machinery purchases as recommended by the Roads Committee.

The question arose when the question laid over from the previous day's session again was brought before the council. The question was before the Warden when he asked for a 15-20 minute recess.

Reeve Wood in presenting his motion stated that he would not see the point in putting the funds in a special account and purchasing a new pair of horses and at the same time pay a higher rate on borrowed money. He stated that the amount will not lower the tax rate and it is to the advantage of the county taxpayers that this amount be placed in the general funds. Reeve Linn seconded the motion.

Councillor Ellis, Sidney, Roads Chairman explained the change in subsidy policy of the Dept. of Highways. The Department, he said, had decided to pay the subsidy in full instead of on the instalment plan as formerly. He said, as did Mr. Wood, that it would be to the ratepayers advantage if the money remained in the special fund for the purchase of machinery. Councillor Ellis, in the interest of the mill rate with money so plentiful. We might better wait, he said, as the price of machinery would have control of it. If we placed the money in the special fund, the money would be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Highways. The money in the first place came out of general funds, therefore should be left where money available for the road committee.

In support of the motion, as did Reeve Dr. Lumb of Bancroft. Reeve Lumb stated he himself supported Reeve Wilson. He argued, that the county had a fortune ahead for the future and should so-operate 100 per cent with the Department of Highways, and solely received for roads should be utilized for road purposes, and not should money be earmarked for roads in the future.

Later, council concurred in a Norfolk County resolution protesting against a recent amendment of the Municipal Act calling for two signatures on all municipal cheques. The recommendation was adopted.

ALLIED TROOPS LAND IN FRANCE

British, Canadian and U. S. troops stormed the coast of France between Cherbourg and Isoulogne in the first day of the Allied invasion of Europe, gaining several bridgeheads. Four thousand ships took part in the attack which cracked the enemy's Atlantic Wall, while 11,000 planes, formed a protecting umbrella overhead. Inset photo above made by Clive Upption for the British Admiralty gives a vivid picture of what has been taking place over there on the French coast where Canada's troops have gone into action for what is hoped will be the final decisive drive against the Nazi enemy.

CANADIAN CHUTIST TROOPS READY

Force Used by Canadian Army for First Time In History

(Before Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, left Britain with troops invading Europe, he watched Canadian paratroops in their final clean-up training for this great feat. In this story he describes it.)

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army Invasion Forces, June 6 — (CP) — For the first time in Dominion history, Canadian had parachute troops ready for action when the Allies invaded Europe. Nearly two years ago this Canadian parachute force was formed for just such an assignment.

(Reports from supreme headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force said today Canadian airborne forces were among those which landed successfully in the opening assault on northwestern France.)

Every officer and man in the Canadian force is a volunteer from an infantry, artillery or tank regiment and consists of 1,500 men. When accepted by the town council, it was announced yesterday, The chief resigned last week in protest over "interference from the police committee" and constable Scott resigned in sympathy with the chief's stand.

Every officer and man in the Canadian force is a volunteer from an infantry, artillery or tank regiment and consists of 1,500 men. When accepted by the town council, it was announced yesterday, The chief resigned last week in protest over "interference from the police committee" and constable Scott resigned in sympathy with the chief's stand.

The commanding officer comes from Saskatoon and as a junior officer in the Saskatoon Light Infantry went on the Spitsbergen raid in the summer of 1941. He has commanded the force since it was organized.

Major Jeff Nicklin, Winnipeg Blue Bomber football star, is second in command.

Other majors in the unit include E. T. Munro, Ottawa and Kingston, Ont.

Among the lieutenants is W. R. Crosford, Kirkland Lake, Ont., a hard rock miner.

Three Airmen From School At St. Thomas Missing In Operating Accident

St. Thomas, Ont., June 7—(CP)—The R.C.A.F. announced names of the three men from Technical Training School, St. Thomas, who are among 14 missing in the capsizing of a rowboat at Port Stanley on Sunday.

The men are: LAC. C. K. Shenton, Abbey, Sask., ACH. L. Smith, Armstrong B.C. and ACH. R. Layton, Jr. Calgary.

Chaplains With Forces In Allied Invasion

With the Canadian Invasion Forces, June 6 — (CP) — Padres of the Canadian Chaplain Service with the Canadian invasion forces as they struck at the continent. The padres are attached in most cases to regimental air posts to help with the wounded and do anything else they can in the battle.

Among three with the field units are Capts. R. L. Seaborn, Cobourg, Ont.; R.T.P. Brain, Peterboro, Jr. M. Anderson, Galt, and G. O. Ong, Pelmemaster.

RESIGNATIONS ACCEPTED

Port Hope, June 7 — (CP)—Resignations of police chief Gordon Constable J. Scott have been accepted by the town council, it was announced yesterday. The chief resigned last week in protest over "interference from the police committee" and constable Scott resigned in sympathy with the chief's stand.

Parliament Shows Disposition To Speed Up Disposal of Business

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 7 — (CP)—Parliament yesterday showed a disposition to speed up its disposal of business as Canadian soldiers, along with other Allied armies fought forward in their greatest undertaking of the war, the invasion of Western Europe.

After nearly four months of intermittent discussion the Commons last night granted committee approval to the last of the items in the $4,650,000,000 War Appropriation Bill.

The measure under which the moneys for the war effort are provided stands for second reading when the House resumes Thursday. In prolonged debate since its first presentation on Feb. 11 the resolution preliminary to the bill drew hundreds of speeches, particularly on the items relating to the Labor Department, the Army and the Prices Board.

The resolution was approved finally a few hours after Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Gordon Graydon, Progressive-Conservative House Leader, spoke of the importance of getting on with the work of the session.

Wants to Avoid Irrelevancies

"We have reached a most serious moment in the history of the world and it is part of our obligation to human society to avoid irrelevancies as much as possible and to concentrate as completely as we can on the business, which is before us," said Mr. King.

Mr. Graydon said he sympathized with the Prime Minister's view and suggested the House sit Wednesdays for the balance of the session. Mr. King promised to consider that but said a sitting today was impossible. He suggested the party whips might meet and agree on a time to be allotted for discussion of the different measures.

The session opened amid an uproar of desk-thumping as Mr. King said that Canadian forces invading Europe had gained their initial objective and were making good progress.

He added, however, it was not desirable to give details of formations and the like participating in the attack because "it is not to be supposed that the offensive . . . will not be followed by other offensives in other parts of Europe."

After Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, and John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, made short statements on the invasion, Maurice Lalanda (—Lac Bellc) rose and addressed the house in French. Then he picked up a sheet of paper from his desk and started to sing the French National Anthem, "La Marseillaise". Fellow members joined in, some singing in French and others in English. When the anthem ended the members broke into "God Save the King".

Want Reading to Air Transport Bill

The House gave first reading to Munitions Minister, Howe's bill to create an Air Transport Board and heard Finance Minister Ilsley outline the government's plan to encourage intermediate and short term lines by farmers on a resolution preliminary to the introduction of a bill.

The Air Transport Board will be created by amending the Aeronautics Act, and in the amendments are incorporated provisions for separating air services from railway companies.

It is provided that present air transport licenses shall continue to be valid on the termination of the war in Europe and that no license shall be granted to the operator of a system of transport other than air transport unless the government decides such is in the public interest.

Mr. Ilsley said the Farm Credits Bill will provide a partial guarantee to banks against loss on loans to farmers after the pattern of the Home Improvement Act.

Farmers will be enabled to borrow at five per cent interest. The government will guarantee the banks against loss to the extent of ten per cent of loans totalling $200,000,000 over a 10-year period where the loans are for purchase of equipment or livestock, electrification, drainage, fencing, improvement of buildings and a few other purposes. The government will not guarantee loans exceeding $5,000.

The Admister said he proposed to refer the proposed bill to the Banking and Commerce Committee for study. That Committee already has before it the Farmers' Bank Bill and a bill to create an industrial development bank.

No Press Interference by W.I.B.

Reopting to criticism, Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant to Mr. King, said that Canada's Wartime Information Board had never attempted to "interfere with the freedom of the Press nor had it been used to spread political propaganda."

The political affiliations of members of the Board and of the staff were unknown, he said. However, none of them had any interest in spreading the propaganda of one political party or another.

The job of the board was to publicize Canada and the Dominion's war effort and the job had been done "admirably" with the available resources, he said. There had been a steady increase in the amount of attention Canada was receiving in the United States and British publications. The Board was ever ready to provide material for articles and to help the press.

The Board had tried to help the Press and never interfered with it, Mr. Claxton said in replying to J. F. Poulin, (L.—Translcatia).

He said Mr. Poulliot had stated the Board's job was to tell the people how to think.

"I deny that it is the duty of any board to tell the people how to think or what to think," he said. "It is the duty of the Board to give the people information on which they can make up their own minds." Says Board Creates Disunity.

Mr. Poulliot said that the Board while preaching unity was creating disunity. In attempting to explain the reason there was no conscription it was giving the impression to the rest of Canada that Quebec was not doing its share in the war effort.

T. L. Church, (P.C.—Toronto Broadview), said money was being wasted on a large staff maintained by the Board which was attempting to usurp the function of the Press.

G. K. Fraser (P.C.—Peterborough West), Hon. Grote Stirling (P.C.—Yale), and Hon. R. B. Hanson (P.C.—York-Sunbury), each offered some criticism before Stanley Knowles (C.C.F.—Winnipeg North Centre), entered the debate to say that the Board should be encouraged with constructive criticisms and suggestions rather than condemned.

Mr. Fraser and Mr. Hanson said they felt that some of the Board's publications were being used to disseminate the Liberal party's propaganda. Mr. Stirling said the publications sometimes contained inaccuracies.

Criticizes Air Mail Bulletins.

Mr. Fraser said that the Air Mail bulletins sent out by the Information Board contained a lot of "bunk."

One of the bulletins referred to the Saskatchewan election and said the "main fight is expected to be between the Liberals and the C. C. F."

"That is absolute bunk, because the conservatives are going to come out on top there. That sort of stuff should not appear in Wartime Information Board publications."

Such publications as "book shelves", "Canadian Affairs," said "Public Affairs" and "Press Digest" is set-up for the government in power."

Mr. Hanson said he objected to public funds being used to disseminate the views or propaganda of any political part. He agreed that the Board was open to the charge that it disseminated liberal propaganda.

Mr. King said he would "strongly resent" the use or public funds for political propaganda. Officials of the Board took special care to avoid that.

Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister King, said the Board's Airmail bulletins were sent out daily to diplomatic missions and contained official information and daily information from Canada. They were prepared as a courtesy to the missions and others.

Appeals for Europe's Children

J. F. Poulliot broke down and wept while urging that the government do something to help relieve the undernourished children of Europe.

"Children are dying in countless numbers in Europe at the present time, and now is the time to do something for them." Mr. Poulliot said tearfully. "The situation is so bad in France that little children cannot go to school unless they have a certificate from the doctor to the effect that they do not suffer from undernourishment."

Resources Minister Crerar said he believed that the United Nations relief and rehabilitation organization now were taking effective steps to alleviate relief for those poor people."

If steps already taken were proven insufficient no people of government in the United Nations would refuse to grant further assistance.

Mr. Crerar revealed that Canada still was offering homes to some 1,300 of the 1,500-odd British children who came here during the blitz.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said he agreed with Mr. Poulliot in his appeal and at the same time he wished to pay tribute to the British children.

The children had more than anyone else drawn Britain and Canada closer together. The children had done something for Canada and Canada had done something for them.

Many of the children were returning home, but he hoped and believed they would return.

Some 1,500 wives and children of servicemen who have married overseas have been brought to Canada, Resources Minister Crerar said. In addition a very large movement of the many thousands of women who have married Canadians was expected until after the war, he said. The cost of bringing 267 dependents to Canada from Britain in the fiscal year 1942-43 was $25,000.

Thomas Reid (L. — New Westminster) suggested children of soldiers born overseas be given the status of Canadian-born children.

Mr. Crerar said the point was worthy of consideration.

POLICE OFFERING REWARD

Toronto, June 7 — (CP) — Police today announced a $250 reward for information leading to the arrest of the three men who kidnapped Richard Watson Monday and stole $5,000 worth of cigarets and tobacco from his delivery truck. The empty truck was later discovered in the west-end district here.

ANOTHER LANDING CLAIMED

London, June 7 — (CP-Reuters) —The German Transocean Agency reported today an amphibious landing attempt this morning across the Straits of Dover.

15,000 LANDED

Stockholm, June 7 — (AP)—Sir Allied air-borne divisions totalling 25,000 men have been landed on the French invasion coast since the start of operations Tuesday morning, Berlin dispatches said today.

MAJOR GENERAL DESMOND

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 7 — (AP)— One of the best known major-generals in the United States was demoted to Lieutenant-Colonel and sent home for indicating in advance the time of D-day.

The Supreme Command allowed this information to be cabled abroad today after holding it up several weeks for security reasons.

The major-general was one of the commanders in the American Air Force, the announcement said. An army man of long standing, he was demoted after talking indiscreetly at a London cocktail party, the announcement added.

His name was not given.

Supreme Battle Of France Begun De Gaulle Says

London, June 6 — (CP-Reuters)— Gen. Charles deGaulle in a broadcast today, urged French people to fight with all the means at their disposal.

The leader of the French National Committee of Liberation addressed in London from Algiers, said: "The supreme battle has begun. This is the decisive blow, the blow for which we have so much hoped. This is the Battle of France and France's battle.

"For the sons of France there is a simple and sacred duty — to fight with all the means at their disposal."

DeGaulle said that orders given by the French government and the French local leaders appointed by the government must be followed exactly. Action behind the German rear must, be in close conjunction with Allied and French armies. All who could take action must not let themselves be made prisoner.

He concluded: "Behind the heavy cloud of our blood and tears, the sun of our grandeur is appearing once again."

INVASION TROOPS STRIVE FOR CHERBOURG PORT
ALLIES DRIVE GERMANS HARD IN NORTH ITALY

Berlin Says House-to-House Fights Rage in St. Mereglise

First Phase of Invasion Accomplished

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8—(AP)—Supreme Headquarters announced today that the first phase of the invasion now has been accomplished.

The first phase was described as the "securing of a foothold and the defeating of local German reserves."

Allied troops now are entering the second phase, which is one of defeating the German "tactical reserves," said headquarters.

The third phase, which must be won before the Allied position is completely secure, is that of defeating the German "strategic reserves."

(By WES GALLAGHER, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8—(AP)—Allied invasion troops constantly reinforced by air and sea struck south of fallen Bayeux in fierce fighting today, striving to chop off the Cherbourg peninsula and Berlin reported a pincers threat to seize the tip of the jutting coast and its strategic port of Cherbourg.

Capture of Bayeux cut the railway between Paris and Cherbourg 45 miles to the northwest, and opened the way for a thrust deeper inland.

But farther west the Germans asserted Allied forces already were within 20 miles of a junction that would choke off Cherbourg itself. Berlin declared house-to-house fighting raged in Ste. Mere-Eglise, 20 miles southeast of the port, where paratroops had landed on the west coast only a score of miles southeast of Ste. Mere-Eglise.

NO ALLIED CONFIRMATION.

There was no Allied confirmation of west coast landings or fighting at Ste. Mere-Eglise, one of the two main roads to Cherbourg.

Heavy battles with tanks and reserves sped up by both sides, flared over the peninsula. Allied beachhead troops are linking up with airborne forces dropped deeper inland, headquarters said, and improvement in advance weather added reinforcements from glider sky trains.

Field reports said British and Canadian troops had captured a number of key road and railway towns and open roads to points some miles from the coast. Infantrymen rode to battle on bicycles and tanks to speed the advance. The Canadians were reported to have moved inland and taken several hundred prisoners.

CANADIANS PUSHING INLAND.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, in a dispatch datelined with Canadian forces in France, said Canadian infantry and armor was pushing inland. He added the terrain was suitable for tank fighting. This was the first disclosure from an Allied source that Canadian tanks were in the Allied invasion area.

Pushing Southward.

A Berlin broadcast asserted British troops pushed through Bayeux early today, and are pushing southward toward the Vire river, which cuts across the peninsula.

On the third day of the invasion, supreme commander Gen. Eisenhower declared:

"My complete confidence in the ability of the Allied armies, navies and air forces to do all they are asked to do has been completely justified."

Berlin radio reported the Russians had launched an offensive north of Iasi in Rumania—perhaps the beginning of a so-anticipated multi-racker blow from the east.

Gen. Eisenhower declared the ground troops are "performing magnificently" praised the navy for landing operations and for surpassing any other amphibious operation he has seen, and lauded the "long and brilliant" aerial campaign that proved most effective preparation for landings.

Powerful air armadas scourged German defenses today with 750 to 1,000 American heavy bombers smashing through clouds to attack rail and airfields in an arc 100 to 150 miles south of the beachheads.

Several Hundred Prisoners.

Canadian and British troops have captured several hundred prisoners and shot up numerous Nazi 11-wheeled guns, field reports said. CP's Ross Munro said the Germans were reported hitting back in some area under persistent attacks, and

Planes Roar Out At Dawn in Support Of Allied Formations In Battle Areas

By W. W. HERCHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8—(AP)—A powerful force of 750 to 1,000 American heavy bombers once more wide are of South Normandy early today, smashing bridges, airdromes and railroad yards and junctions in a vigorous effort to clamp an air seal on the beachhead battlefield.

R.A.F. and Canadian heavy bombers hit pounding targets in the invasion area and also struck Cologne during the night.

Some 720 R.A.F. and Canadian Mosquito bombers of the night pounded tactical targets in the invasion battle and R.A.F. night raiders also struck at Cologne and almost every night.

While the daylight heavies hit hard at installations from 100 to 150 miles behind the front, medium bombers carried out a dawn attack on Caen, which left the city on the main railways between Cherbourg to Paris with at least 15 fires burning.

In the night strikes a series of rail targets near Paris and German transport 13 miles behind the battlefront were smashed with bombs. The transport target was a concentration of the 3rd corps at Cerisy where the road runs from Bayeux to St. Lo. The Air Ministry said the Cerisy wood target was of great tactical importance.

22,000 Sorties in 48 Hours.

Allied planes of all descriptions had flown 22,000 sorties in the last 48 hours and are maintaining that mounting as weather improved.

Among fighter-bomber targets hit were 15 bridges and a chateau used as a German headquarters.

Allied fighters in the 24 hours ending Tuesday midnight destroyed 319 enemy planes in the air and on the ground, the Allies had lost 177 aircraft; during the same period the supreme headquarters was not attempting to figure the up-to-the-minute tabulation and was leaving the announcement of losses to the individual commands.

29 Allied Planes Downed.

Night fighters shot down 29 of the R.A.F. night bombers, four of them Canadian.

Targets attacked by the daylight heavies today were located roughly in the region of Chateaudun, Lemans, Rennes, Nantes and Tours, all large German towns and especially communications points. They were accompanied by about 500 fighters.

GET BACK PAY

New York, June 8 — (AP) — Wounded American soldiers repatriated on the Exchange Liner Gripsholm arrived here with accumulated back pay yesterday, but it didn't stay in their pockets long. Fifteen of the 49 wounded men bought more than $4,000 in war bonds within four hours.

Rocket Ships Throw Explosives More Quickly Than by Warship

New York, June 8 (AP)—Rocket ships developed as a result of the Dieppe raid of 1942, used in Tuesday's invasion of France, "discharge vast quantities of explosive into beaches much more quickly than has ever been done before by a warship," the British Information Services said today. One of the rocket ships was described by Allied Expeditionary Headquarters.

"The rocket ships were developed as a result of experiences in the Dieppe raid," the British Agency said. "The actual destruction they cause is not so great as in normal bombardment, since there is no splinter, but a blast from these weapons has a terrific effect on the morale of personnel anywhere near to the explosion. Their great tactical value is needed to bring them close to the place of action.

"The ships first used in the Sicily landings, were described as British naval secret weapon.

Here are first pictures of the Allies landing on coast of France Tuesday morning. They were radioed to New York, telephoned to Toronto and engraved and mailed in time for use today. The photos at top show American "doughboys" wading through the surf to the shore. At RIGHT can be seen transports from which the men disembarked. The picture at BOTTOM, taken from transport, shows jeeps and men making their landing on an unnamed beach.

Calls 'Atlantic Wall' Biggest Bluff of War

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN
Distributed by The Canadian Press

With the Allied Invasion Forces in France, June 8 — The so-called Atlantic Wall along the coast constitutes the biggest bluff of the whole war for it simply does not exist. Some prisoners said the Germans had been frantically trying to complete defences but the task had been too vast for them.

Although we have pushed far inland without encountering serious opposition, it will not be imagined that the Germans will not react as soon as they have grouped their panzer forces.

They tried to hold us in the region of Caen and Bayeux but our tanks were in greater force. We have thrown into battle British and American tanks and self-propelled guns.

Some of these actions have been responsible for demoralizing the enemy. All the French people with whom I talked spoke of the Nazi loss of courage. They may not be beaten but their eye tear to it.

Prisoners also said the defeats in Russia and Italy are known to the bodies of German and Allied dead lay unburied. For the moment, every man was needed for fighting.

CANADIANS MAKE FIRST CONTACT WITH FOE ARMOR

New Advances Made With Hundreds Of Prisoners Taken— Clear Many Villages

POSITION STRONGER

London, June 8 —(CP)—Canadian infantry and armor, pushing inland in France, have made their first contact with German armor as the advancing Allies prepared for an expected enemy counter-attack, reports from the front said today.

Ross Munro, one of the Canadian Press War Correspondents who went in with Canadian infantry, said the Canadians made new advances, cleared several villages of the enemy and took several hundred prisoners as they advanced inland.

But precise location of the Dominion's fighting men remained as secret as that of other formations in an obvious attempt to keep the Germans guessing.

Supreme headquarters has named only two towns, fallen Bayeux five miles inland from the Central Normandy coast, and Caen, 18 miles to the southeast, where stiff battling has raged for days.

The nearest indication of where at least some Canadians are fighting came in a dispatch last night from G. L. Soles, representing the combined British Press. Dated 9 p.m. yesterday, his dispatch said: "We are on the outskirts of Caen and are joining up with the Canadians."

Munro's dispatch, first disclosure that Canadian armor was participating in the invasion, came after previous dispatches describing the Canadian landing and the capture of initial objectives. There still was no word from William Stevenson, Canadian Press War Correspondent who went in with the infantry.

Nor was there confirmation of a German report that the Canadian 2nd Division—the formation that furnished men for the ill-fated Dieppe raid of Aug. 19, 1942—was part of the invading force.

Meanwhile copy has started come out from British and American correspondents ashore, including Leonard Mosley, a Briton, who described the Allies as "a half-hour after the first paratroops landed.

5th Army Captures Civitavecchia, Port 38 Miles N. of Rome

Thrust Swiftly Up The West Coast To Maintain Contact With Enemy

BRACCIANO ALSO TAKEN

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 8 — (AP) — The Allied 5th Army has captured Civitavecchia, Rome's principal port, 38 miles northwest of the capital, and today was thrusting swiftly up the west coast to maintain contact with the retreating enemy.

Other 5th Army units, speeding in a more northerly direction, captured the town of Bracciano, 20 miles north of Rome, on the west shore of the large lake of the same name. Still another column was last reported passing the lake on the east side, 12 miles north of Rome.

The Germans still appeared to be withdrawing in a bad state of demoralization, without any indication yet available as to when they might turn and attempt a determined stand.

An official spokesman declared "The battered remnants of the German 14th Army are in a considerable state of disorganization. Upward of 40 Wehrmacht formations are represented in the collection of prisoners taken in the exodus from Rome and beyond. Apparently even battalions are attaching themselves to whatever higher unit is available."

Allied forces driving due north of Rome captured Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's former headquarters, about three miles southeast of Civita Castellana.

Capture Headquarters.

The headquarters, described as an elaborate, partially underground stronghold," was put under a strong guard.

The drive on Civita Castellana, about 28 miles northeast of Rome, made rapid progress along highway 2 and an official report that reconnaissance elements encountered some opposition west of the town but "nothing to speak of" in the first.

The British 8th Army, meanwhile, punched into the Tiber Valley north of Rome and forged ahead rapidly along the west banks of the river.

Gen. Leese's men captured the important town of Monterotondo, 13 miles northeast of Rome, and the same dispatch announced, of Tivoli and the nearby towns of Sant' Angelo, Palombara Sabina and Mentana. Guidonia is valuable because it has an air field.

409 CANADIANS IN ARMED FORCES RECEIVE HONORS

Royal Birthday List Also Contains Award of Earldom to Viscount Halifax

EMPIRE HONORS

London, June 8 — (CP) — Distinction gained in various fields of endeavor by men and women in all parts of the Empire was recognized yesterday by their inclusion in the King's Birthday Honors List. For his service as British Ambassador to Washington, Viscount Halifax was created an Earl.

Members of the Canadian Armed forces received 409 honors, 79 of which went to the Royal Canadian Navy, 170 to the army and auxiliaries and 152 to the R.A.F.

The distinctions were awarded not only for individual acts of courage, such as that displayed by Flying Officer Conner Robertson of Halifax —but also for the faithful performance of duty by airmen flying from east coast bases to protect Atlantic convoys.

A companionship in the Order of the Bath was awarded Maj.-Gen. R. O. Alexander, Inspector-General for Western Canada for the Canadian Army.

Honored for Anti-Submarine Action

A dozen members of the R.C.A.F. were awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses for anti-submarine work on the North Atlantic, and citations covering their awards gave a vivid picture of their important task.

Section Officer Jean Gibbon had also aided in the development of the R.C.A.F. and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. She received recognition in the list. Air Marshal W. A. (Billy) Bishop, Director of Recruiting, was made a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of Bath, as was Air Vice-Marshal F. W. Steadman of Ottawa, Director-General of Research.

No Canadian Civilian Awards

The Canadian list is the first time, included no civilian awards as such. The government had decided to refrain from recommending further awards of Orders of Chivalry for civilians for the duration of the war, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last December in commenting on the last New Year's honors list.

(Since then, the Canada Medal has been created as distinctive award for civilians, but it is not considered likely this distinction will be awarded during wartime.)

CANADIANS BREACH DEFENCES

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 8.—(CP)—Canadian forces taking part in the Allied invasion of France have breached the enemy's outer defences, taken several hundred prisoners, and are moving inland, it was learned in reports to Supreme Headquarters today.

FRENCH TOWN "DESTROYED"

New York, June 8 —(AP)— The French town of Vire, about 35 miles south of the Normandy coast invasion beaches, has been "completely destroyed," said Capt. Kalmar Master, of Portland, Ore., in a broadcast from England carried last night by CBS. Masters flew as an observer in a medium bomber over France. He did not explain how the town had been destroyed.

Land Fighting on Canadian Front Is Still Severe Says Ralph Allen

By RALPH ALLEN
(Toronto Globe and Mail War Correspondent, Distributed by The Canadian Press)

With the Canadians in France, June 8 — (Delayed) — Heavy fighting on the Canadian frontage is still severe. The general area is a deep coastal belt from the sea to the little resort villages on the Channel.

Their streets run to tidy hedgerows, houses and mansions of fine trees, beech, pine and poplar. The fields beyond are flat and well cultivated.

The people are poor but it is nothing like the miserable peasant poverty which the soldiers met in rural Italy. There are few signs here of hunger and fewer signs of cringing servility of the spirit which followed the Fascist collapse in Italy. Here the people are proud and independent. Most of them, incidentally, appear to be of Norman stock.

It is now two nights and days since the last of the invasion army sailed from England and anyone who can truthfully say he has had more than two periods totalling of two hours of cold, cramped sleep in either one of the two nights is one of the Lord's chosen.

The Canadians have been good to us. It started off by creating a sea swell that drenched the whole assault force. To the armpits and continued its unfriendly caprices last night by covering a golden moon with a blanket of clouds. One encouraging sign was the Luftwaffe to make gingerly raids on the beaches and supply lines from 11 p.m. onwards.

The German radio appeared to be only of token dimensions and did little damage but they impelled an almost continuous ack ack barrage from the Allied invasion fleet lying off shore. It was spectacular, noisy and highly comfortable, but apparently not conducive to rest.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

PORT HOPE SAFE LEFT ON SIDE STREET

Nobody broke and entered the creamery at Port Hope early today and heard the milk cans safe into a side street, where the marauders were attempting to break open the safe, when they were disturbed by a police car. Chief Hardy reported to district police department that at 4.15 a.m. today he was proud of the exploits of the men who man the fighter and bomber planes which are preparing the way for the invasion of Europe.

The new adversity strip is being run in place of Stan Gordon, which is being discontinued as the result of the producer entering the armed forces.

Apparently in an effort to spare their motorcycles, neither of the two recent letters home have told anything of their experiences on the battlefront, but in a letter to his brother in Belleville, Private Ivan Wood writes to Belleville by Private David Hill, Jack tells that he has been wounded in the thigh and his company landed in Sicily.

Private Wood writes: "There have been some real battles, too, but I shall not describe them as I am thankful I've been lucky, so fooling."

As the result of communications received from Lieut. R. M. Hill learned that his brother had lost a leg in Normandy. The lieut. also writes he was a cook with his unit, he says he was "fired" from the position as the result of carelessness on his part. On his next "spot of leave" Jack intended to look up his old job. He forts to see that the two men for the first time since leaving Canada.

NEW COMIC STRIP IS STARTED TODAY

Breath-taking action will be attended readers of the Ontario Intelligencer comics column starting today with the introduction of a new comic strip, "Johnny Mason", depicting the adventures of one of the highest ranking officers of one of the British Dominions. Timely as the front-page news, the story opens in Britain at the present time, with the fighter and bomber planes which are preparing the way for the invasion of Europe.

The new adventure strip is being run in place of Stan Gordon, which is being discontinued as the result of the producer entering the armed forces.

MORE CO-OPERATION ASKED TO KEEP FRONT ST. CLEAN

Co-operation of Front St. merchants in collecting refuse formerly dumped into the ditch on the morning has resulted in a considerable improvement in the shipment of the main thoroughfare, according to city hall officials. This had formerly been the practice of many merchants to sweep their refuse in the morning with the result being brushed across sidewalks to the gutters. This took place after the city street sweeper made its rounds during the night with the result that Front Street presented a dirty and untidy appearance during the day.

"There is still a few merchants who persist in their former practice, however," stated City Engineer and Street Master Ross, "and if these persons would co-operate by collecting their refuse and placing it in receptacles, it would mean a lot in the general appearance of Front Street."

ALL LEGAL OFFICES IN CITY CLOSED ON KING'S BIRTHDAY

Today being recognized as the King's birthday all legal offices in the city were closed. Also there was no session of County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House, at which court he had hitherto previously been adjourned for one week. All offices of the Police Department were closed in observation of the holiday.

ST. OLA BROTHERS HELD IN CUSTODY

Two St. Ola brothers, Owen and Washington Grant, were arrested yesterday on charges of breaking and entering the dwelling house of Mr. J. Livingstone in Limerick township and stealing therefrom. The pair was arrested by Provincial Constable Stan Palmateer and Township Constable Jim Hall. It is said by the officer that one of the Grant brothers had in his possession a revolver. The pair was lodged in the county jail on charges.

STONES ARE THROWN AT CITY BUSES

Complaints that children are throwing stones at the city buses as they pass along Bleecker Avenue were received by city police Wednesday. The seriousness of this procedure was brought more forcibly to the light yesterday when a stone thrown by a small boy crashed through the window of a bus near Forsythe Street and Bleecker Avenue. Particularly there were no passengers in direct line with the missile and no personal casualties or injuries as the result of being struck by flying glass. Police were asked to continue their vigilance in regard to this matter regarding the actions of such school.

Brothers in Italy Have not Met

Veterans of the Sicilian and Italian campaigns, two sons of Mrs. Hazel Hill, 247 Dundas St. East, Belleville, have been in action for almost each other since going overseas, despite their period of training in England that the two brothers had not met. Lieut. Hillier was in Sicily, and Lieut. Hillier was wounded there. In fact the one learned of his brother's presence in Italy by a chance meeting with another Belleville boy, Cpl. Richard Dwyer. The different companies the two sons are in are the C.S.M. Jack Hill and Pte. David Hill.

3rd Man Pleads Guilty to 13 Theft Charges

Continuing their drive to clean up the city, the police have made a strike in the Belleville area in recent weeks. Yesterday Chief of Police arraigned Raymond Woods, Belleville, before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House, at which court he was charged with 13 counts of breaking, entering and theft. Woods pleaded guilty to the entire 13 counts and was remanded in custody for sentence. Stanley Archer and James Miller, two of the others who previously pleaded guilty to equally as many similar charges, Chief of Police Ponsford announced that Woods was definitely linked up with Archer and Miller and police expected to prefer additional charges against the former accused in the near future. In the meantime the trio will be held awaiting sentence.

Again the Provincial Police have opened up the city authorities to assist in the breaking up of the most serious theft ring in cities this area in late years. The officers responsible are to be complimented upon the speed and efficiency in which they have handled seemingly cases to gain solution to practically all local robberies. Included in the list of the Brewery Warehouse, commented Crown Attorney R. C. Mikel, K.C., when the accused obtained a statement from Woods in the presence of counsel.

Of the thirteen charges preferred against Woods, included four garages or service stations, including Woodcock's on Station Street from where an automobile was stolen and Patterson and Wellington Streets, West Dundas Street from where the cash register was taken. The latter article has not as yet been recovered. Other charges of entering and theft were at the Belle Cleaners plant, Quinte Dairy Products, Chilmore Dairy, Arthur Sills, Fred Izard's cottage on the Bay Bridge Road where Woods admitted he stole a watch-mate plaque that was found on his person, the Frank Street apartment occupied by Leona Mumby, and Bridgewater's Limited in Trenton. Woods was not implicated in the Montreal Grocers robbery, police added.

HANDLES STORY LIKE TRUMAN

Athens, Ga., June 8. (AP)—John Erwin Pope was named telegraph editor of the Athens Banner Herald, Monday. It is his job to edit thousands of words, write headlines and draw up a "dummy" of the front page. On the second day of his new job, John Erwin was confronted by one of the biggest stories in modern history—D-Day. Allied invasion of Europe. He went about his business like a veteran, other editors said. John Erwin is 16 years old.

Establishment of County Board Of Health With Full Time Medical Staff Will Be Considered

Dr. J. T. Fair, Provincial Health Officer, Addresses County Council on Public Health

Establishment of a County Board of Health, with a full time staff of medical men, sanitary engineers, nurses and other specialists, was seriously considered by Hastings County Council this afternoon when Dr. J. T. Fair, Provincial Health Officer, addressed the Board will be financed by the county which will be subsidized fifty per cent by the province.

Consideration of the formation of a board was deferred until the next session of the council.

Dr. Fair's address was given at the afternoon session by Warden Thomas Bronson. The council had heard a detailed address on public health by Dr. J. T. Fair (Continued on page 8, column 1)

Prevention Main Thought.

The basic requirements which need to be considered in establishing the prevention of acute communicable diseases, such as diphtheria, scarlet fever, whooping cough, etc., should prevent chronic communicable diseases such as tuberculosis and syphilis; sanitary water, sewage and refuse, control of nuisances, control of foods, and assurance that every mother or potential mother will get adequate post-natal supervision also pre and post school supervision for the children.

This is necessary in view of the alarming fact that of the 960,000 men called to the colors during the present war, only 576,000 were found to be in category "A".

Dr. Fair stated that the speaker declared, requires that every municipality must have a public health officer, and sanitary and sanitation officers. The money spent here is very low and should not be done if the local autonomy concerned. In the Province of Ontario it meets and part time health and other officers are provided pro perty.

Less Typhoid, Diphtheria Cases.

Dr. Fair put, Dr. Fair went on, the province has done something along public health lines. Typhoid fever years ago Ontario had 7,000 to 10, 000 cases of diphtheria. In 1931, 800 died. Last year one could count the deaths on his hand. Typhoid cases, 26 years ago amounted to 3,000 yearly with a mortality of 10 to 15 per cent.

"Those days are gone. Something was done about it. We improved the milk supply and by methods of pasteurization. In the province of Ontario compares favorably with that of any state or country in the world. The death rate was the lowest in the Dominion in 1943."

Turning to another phase of the question Dr. Fair stated "it was in Hepatitis that I was a health officer to assume office as the salary paid him in Ontario. Furthermore it has been established that forty per cent of Canadian municipal boards of health meet once a year."

What the government has in mind Dr. Fair said, is to set up in county level, health units large enough to come within the financial scope and small enough to do all practical work, with a full time personnel, and which will meet all health requirements.

Town Staff.

The scheme, in which the county assumes public health administration, within its own confines, will do away with scandals and the incapability boards of health. If the scheme warrants, in addition to the proposed full time staff already mentioned, a dental service should be also a psychologist who could help teachers to direct child problems, show inaptitudes in their studies.

The cost, Dr. Fair stated, would be approximately from 75c to $1 per capita. The average spending in this country for health at present is 12 cents per capita.

The government has in mind substantial subsidies in the event of the establishment of such a county service. "We shall start out with a fifty per cent subsidization which can be extended over certain surveys of the situation have been made."

Need Strong Committee.

Dr. Fair suggested that council designate a strong committee which will confer with Department of Health officials to assess the feasibility and financial possibility of the scheme. The government desires to expand such a scheme which has proven successful in other counties. "We have selected eight counties in Ontario and have asked them not to the privilege of discussing how practical the plan might be, and financial aspect of the scheme.

A County School Health Supervision Plan has already been in effect in Oxford County and in other counties. Nurses established themselves to the plan, the speaker concluded. Sufficient municipalities been secured, the salaries and transportation of whom are paid by the counties. The government in this case provides a one-third cost subsidy.

Warden Fleming promised Dr. Fair serious consideration of the scheme.

62,000 Persons Naturalized Since War's Outbreak

Vancouver, June 8.—(CP)—More than 62,000 persons, including 4,000 from enemy countries, have become naturalized British subjects since the outbreak of war, War Services Minister Ian Mackenzie said here.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Dominion convention of the Canadian Corps here, Maj.-Gen. LaFleche said many of the descendants of people who came to Canada from European countries were always prominent in the front in the ranks of the armed forces.

"Perhaps it would it surprise you to know that we could assemble battalions more than a division of armed forces who speak a Slav language fluently and who, if they were required to, could a Ukrainian," Gen. LaFleche said. "We have over 9,000 Jewish soldiers in the army who speak Polish, despite Polish army statements.

"I think you know something of the hesitancy with which we have accepted Canadians of enemy origin in our forces and yet we have 1,000 Japanese-Canadians in the army speaking Italian.

"It is also natural that we should find their names in our lists of gallantry awards and in our lists of casualties. Many have died or killed in action are non-Anglo-Saxons and non-French."

Speaker Recounts Factors Threatening The Family Life

Peterboro, June 8 — (CP)—Juvenile delinquency, illegitimacy, divorce and other factors menacing and threatening family life in Canada, Rev. John Coburn of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church of Canada today told the Ontario Sunday School Convention.

Fundamentally, the family existed before the state and anything that attacks the family and the home undermines the country itself, he said, urging the Church to proclaim the principles of Christian morality, to provide facilities for the instruction of these principles and fundamental principles of life from the Christian standpoint, to give advice and counsel and plan for measures to fight the "drink evil," and to "preach the gospel."

War conditions, with fathers in the armed forces and mothers working in war plants, affect home life more difficult records show, the Canadian juvenile courts handled more children's cases in 1943 than in any year since 1921, before social agencies report increases in illegitimacy and divorces have shown an increase of 2,000 per cent since 1939.

The United Church of Canada is looking to great advances after the war, Rev. Mr. Coburn, general secretary, said in another address.

Two Civil Actions Decided by Court

The two civil actions listed for trial before Judge Deroche and Grand Jury Sittings of the County Court concluded yesterday. Both were settled out of court before the jury recurred sometime ago in this district. The first case was that of Robert Crawford versus McDermott and Dorsan and resulted in a verdict of eighty per cent negligence to the defendants and twenty per cent to the plaintiff. The same disposition was made in another motor-car collision case between Mac-Cammon versus Lamere of Trenton. Judge Deroche, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff in the latter case, and Crown Attorney Mikel was referred to another court.

2,000 Men Registered In County Sets 11-Mill Tax Rate

Striking a rate of 11 mills, twotenths of a mill less than the 1943 levy, the report of the Hastings County Council Committee on Finance for 1944, was unanimously adopted by the body in session today. The rate is based on the county assessment of $18,383,800.

The reduction in rate, was due, it was explained by Warden Clark and Eric Denyes, to the fact that all county debentures were paid off last year, thus eliminating any debenture charges for the county for the present year.

Expenditures and receipts this year are $284,460.80 as compared to $277,997.36 or a difference of $6,463.44.

Following are detailed accounts of the budget:

Expenditures.
Administration of Justice $	36,000.00

Council concurred in a resolution calling for governmental inquiry into rural and village fire protection in the province, also providing suitable punishment for juvenile delinquents.

Members felt that the rural mail delivery matter should be investigated and placed on a systematic basis, every person living outside municipalities do not get daily newspapers and that they are unjustly discriminated against.

Regardless of a rate per mile for rural mail carriers was voiced by Deseronto Coun. Wood, that experience he said, carriers had tendered at a loss when actual work was started.

Support Resolution.

Council was also given to a Bruce County resolution that rates to municipal clerks for services be raised to be increased from $30 to $50, also that the rate for services to municipalities be increased from $15 to $20 per hour, whether the work is performed dire in hospital or elsewhere.

Council supporting a Perth County resolution that the Provincial and Dominion governments give consideration to incorporating in their income tax returns the sum written off by Provincial and Dominion support of at least 50 per cent of the outlay be extended to school boards for remodelling or enlarging old and secondary school buildings. This to apply where the municipality can show the necessity for the alterations and additions as approved by the Department of Education.

Diver Makes Perilous Trip

An Atlantic Port, June 8—(CP)—A 25-year-old able seaman from Bell Island, Nfld., has been working for only 18 months, successfully completed one of the most hazardous jobs ever undertaken by divers from this Royal Canadian Navy port.

He is Albert (AB) Hanley and he went down in depths of 180 to 190 feet of ice-cold water to recover a "Mark 10" depth charge, primers and two depth-charge pistols which would have blown him to bits had he stepped on them when they began giver's boots.

Hanley said today the depth charge and pistols were accidentally fired and timed to explode. He found the first pistol in another 15 minutes, and then the depth charge. After an hour of cautious groping.

Then he went after a small steel bar, part of the depth charge equipment, and finally found it. He completed the job in 45 minutes, he calc. but confessed to a few underwater giggles of relief when he put the signal to hoist up the second of the armed pistols.

There isn't likely to be much time for "dugging in" in the cottage amenities of the First Great War. Many of the Allied troops have already stolen or bought at their own prices a pith helmet to keep the vaults or burial grounds, the inhabitants say they are thoughtfully offer lemonade and water.

It's true that the first troops were startled not by sandcastled Germans who looked almost as nice as those Uncle Nigar used to talk about but any gratuitous embraces that have been kicking around this part of France have been contributed by Hun and Boche.

Allied day and night heavy bombers are raiding objectives in the Pas de Calais and Normandy area. During the first evening as we slogged ashore to reach a new headquarters camp, we watched several hundred Fortresses and Liberators cross the channel from the south to the north in a great height.

Back from the burst around the formations, escorted by only a few Spitfires, we were told, then and they fall, making a long white column of vapor in the clear blue sky.

The Canadians in this sector are using hundreds of amphibious duplex drive tanks which can drive in the water or on land — to take stores and ammunition right ashore off-shore right up the line. Jeeps also are being used more extensively than ever.

The Canadian sector is heavily mined and many big 10-acre fields with lush green crops are dotted

IN MEMORIAM

CARTER — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Blanche Carter, who passed away June 8th, 1927.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow,
But our hearts keep you ever near us,
Though you died three years ago.

Lovingly remembered by Mother, Dad, Sister and Brother.

HILL — In loving memory of my dear husband, Frank Hill, who died the 8th, of June, 1927.

Nothing can ever take away
The love you so much holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Somehow time seems so near.

—Ever remembered by Mrs. Jenis Hill and family.

The War Today—
Battle Shows Signs of Becoming Game of Wits Between Leaders

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The great battle undoubtedly shows signs which is boiling up from the Allied invasion of the Cherbourg Peninsula becoming less of becoming an exceptional game of wits between two old rivals of the North African desert, Field Marshal Rommel and General Montgomery—two of the fastest-thinking and coldest-acting tacticians the war has produced.

Already the German local counter-attacks are under way and there's fierce fighting. However, Rommel seems to be moving cautiously. Of course, before he rushes a big army to the peninsula he must be sure that this is one of the major Allied thrusts and not merely a feint to draw his fire while the main attack is made elsewhere. Still, one has the feeling that he is hand pending the moment when he can do the most damage.

That may account in part for the lack of German activity on D-Day. The greatly depleted Luftwaffe is being held in reserve for crucial battles.

Rommel undoubtedly would like to get a big Allied force farther inland before his major counter-assault. He can then concentrate local reaction, and favors conditions under which he can make quick maneuvers.

He may try to force an open battle. He has with him Montgomery—providing the Allies have been able to get ashore sufficient men and equipment. It's a race against time.

We should know more about it in another week or so, if the Allies continue to develop their landing. Apparently they're aiming to cut the whole peninsula off, thereby securing a superb base, made to order with the great port of Cherbourg, and a main railroad and highways leading to Paris.

The Allied capture of the strategic rail and highway centre of Bayeux, five miles inland from the central Normandy coast — a coup which placed headquarters behind the "very important news" — will do much to help consolidate and secure the whole peninsula and that means the whole Cherbourg Peninsula.

The situation is getting hotter on the peninsula and it should be emphasized again that hitter times are ahead.

5TH ARMY

Slab up Line of Retreat.

Further to the east the 5th Army captured Subiaco, about eight miles south of the main highway running across the Italian Peninsula from Rome to the Adriatic, and stabbed up on a lateral which had been one of the main German lines of retreat.

Around Subiaco enemy tanks and infantry put up a stiff scrap and the line of advance for armored units was held to the road, which was cratered by demolitions. The villages of Venite and Vallepietra were occupied in this area.

Enemy transport withdrawing toward Avezzano in the Apennines from Balsorano was shelled heavily, and 11 German Mark V Panther tanks were found. Some of these had broken down and they were set afire by the Germans.

8th Gains Three Miles.

Near the Adriatic flank; 8th Army troops followed the withdrawing Germans, gaining two to three miles to reach the outskirts of the towns of Barres, Pescocostano and Rivisondoli in the direction of Sulmona, birthplace of the Roman Poet Ovid.

Capture of Civitavecchia, population of which is approximately 36,000 gives the Allies a valuable port, which has been enlarged greatly by the present war.

Between 250 and 300 heavy bombers yesterday pounded rail lines on the French Riviera, the port of Livorno, the Volri railyards west of Genoa, and the Savona rail yards.

Fighter-bombers continued to hammer the retreating enemy columns, destroying or damaging at least 384 vehicles. The advance to Civitavecchia brought the advance guard of the 5th Army to within 115 miles of Florence and 130 miles of Livorno.

The Mediterranean Air Force flew more than 1,500 sorties yesterday, during the course of which medium bombers hit rail and road bridges in the west coastal area north of Rome. Last night objectives were attacked near Orvieto, 60 miles northwest of Rome. Three aircraft were listed as missing.

ASTRONOMICALLY NAMED

The period of summer we know as dog days was named by the ancients as pertaining to the rising in the sky of the Dog star, Sirius.

LOSE NATURAL GRACE

Polynesian natives in Tahiti are said to be losing the graceful walk associated with their race, for too many are riding in motor vehicles.

BOMB-BATTERED

Formations of American heavy bombers were included in the daylight armada, which headed today toward the sea de Calais and into the French coast. Haze and light mist limited visibility in the Dover Straits early in the forenoon but the weather cleared later and was better for aerial operations than it had been since D-day.

Allies, too, were getting a stiffer air reaction from the Germans. The air ministry said the Lancaster and Halifaxes last night encountered more enemy night fighters than usual. It was announced, too, that Allied troops on the beaches had been bombed by German planes for the first time since the invasion started.

Paris Raided

The Paris area rail junctions of Acheres, Versailles, Massy-Palaiseau and Juvisy were hit by the night raiders in operations having the announced purpose of delaying German troop movements to the west.

A German troop and transport concentration in a wooded area 12 miles from the French invasion coast also was attacked.

Many of the big night sky raiders almost unprecedently low level to attack their targets from as low as 900 feet. One heavy piloted by FO. J. W. Anderson of Collingwood, Ont., made an attack from 800 feet and then coasted along the face of its exploding bombs.

Anderson got good deal of flak and my reargunner, FO. T. Bridgman of Toronto, managed to get in a short burst as it got better after the bombing run," said Andrew. Chatelle Ont to Strength.

One of the targets of the heavy night bombers was a German troop concentration in the area of Chatelle-en-Vexin, France, beachhead. It was not known if the Canadian group worked this particular target but it was out in strength in the general assault on the invasion coast.

No details were available on the Germans' air activity over the invasion beachhead strength upwards Headquarters described the enemy fighting as small.

The Allied communique did not furnish a figure on the total Allied losses in the air, but an unofficial recapitulation indicated the Germans had lost 122 planes in the last two days while the Allies had lost 118, including 12 troop carriers and 12 gliders.

An Urgent Appeal.

The heavy-bomber attack on the German troop concentration in the beachhead area was made in response to an urgent appeal from the ground forces.

Reconnaissance planes had spotted the target yesterday after the daylight and the big night bombers were able to take advantage of the positives. The place was believed to have been a key refueling point for German tank units opposing extension of the Allied beachheads.

Naval aircraft, both British and American, flew 370 sorties, protecting naval spotting of naval gunfire.

Allied heavy bombers with powerful fighter escorts soared out twice yesterday to the Paris area in particular in the afternoon blistered an enemy airfield and marshalling yard as well as railway bridges and highway targets from the Bay of Biscay to the Seine.

Enemy Craft Shot Down.

The escorting fighters shot down 41 enemy aircraft in combat and not a single Nazi plot managed to get at the bomber formations.

As the Germans tentatively began to attack the beachhead, a formation of R.A.F. Spitfires sailed into a bunch of Junkers 188s and knocked down eight. American fighters bagged ten Messerschmitt 109s.

The pattern of the Allied air blitz in the Cherbourg area developing over France followed that which has been built up during the last eight weeks, with the planes having the additional task of providing close support for the advancing ground troops.

Allied planes of every type have harried the Nazi lines of communication from the Cherbourg peninsula and blasted out the Germans' secret stores in blasts designed to slow down defensive operations as much as possible.

"strength is being built up rapidly in the Allied bridgeheads for the big battles which should come any day, the Germans say.

The German High Command declares that Allied troops during the attack from the bridgehead between Caen and Bayeux, and that Nazi forces counter-attacked. Heavy fighting continues, it added.

Berlin said Canadian troops who gained a foothold north of Carentan, some 27 miles southeast of Cherbourg, had suffered heavy casualties. It also claimed successes east of Caen and the Orne river.

Landing Attempt Fails is Claim.

A landing attempt in the bay of St. Aubin on the northern tip of the peninsula, near Cap De La Hague, was frustrated, the enemy High Command said.

An American Air Force troop carrier report said the Allies had captured or built at least one airstrip in the Cherbourg area.

"Everything is going excellently," said Gen. Montgomery, Allied ground forces commander.

It now is apparent the Allies have several beachheads on a 50-miles coastal stretch between Caen and Carentan, with some of them joined together.

Headquarters was silent on Berlin reports that parachutists had landed at Falaise and Argentan, 30 miles southeast of Caen, with street fighting flaring in Falaise. The German radio said 10 in Allied divisions were fighting on the peninsula.

Greeted With Flags, Kisses.

Thundering naval support of the dirty continued, and Allied airmen destroyed 102 Nazi planes yesterday.

Hungry French villagers greeted liberating troops with flags and kisses.

Prime Minister Churchill warned against over-optimism, declaring "gigantic sacrifices lie before us."

Some of the troops have been fighting continuously since Tuesday morning, and it is likely there may be a short lull in advances as they rest, regroup, and bring up

Supreme headquarters described the capture of Bayeux, five miles inland from the central Normandy coast and first French city to fall to the invaders, as "very important news" because it opens up avenues for a new advance deeper into France.

"Progress continues despite determined enemy resistance," said this morning's communique. "Fierce armored and infantry fighting has taken place."

A Berlin broadcast indicated south-bound Allied forces already had left Bayeux behind. The report said "hard fighting" still was in progress against an Allied group which jumped the Aure river.

Allied Beachhead "Impregnable."

Airborne troops which came down behind the Germans have made contact with the forces which went in from the sea, a broadcast announced, the communique said.

Canadian paratroopers — Lieutenant-Colonels Dobie and Shilt, Man.—were among the Allied forces dropped by the thousands behind the formidable coastal defences. The communique said the beachhead British and American paratroopers and airborne troops have gained ground but have not mentioned Canadians.

As the Germans tentatively began to attack the beachhead, a formation of R.A.F. Spitfires sailed into a bunch of Junkers 188s and knocked down eight. American fighters bagged ten Messerschmitt 109s.

Rommel Takes Over.

The Allied Command permitted no announcement that their landing ships were used to pound the beaches ahead of troops.

This was the first information learned from the Normandy raid to be announced," a headquarters spokesman said. "There will be others later."

A confirming stream of German broadcasts included reports of house-to-house fighting in the village of Ste. Mere-Eglise, near the eastern shore of the Cherbourg peninsula; that the Germans had driven British parachute troops from the village of Varville, east of the Orne river, and that British tank forces last night were driving south along both banks of the Seulles river, which strikes between Caen and Bayeux.

Aside from Bayeux and Caen, supreme headquarters gave no place names to locate the invasion battles, but a constant stream of Berlin broadcasts, none of them confirmed, reported Allied attacks all the way from Caen to Carentan, directly across the Dover Strait from England to the lower western coast of the Brittany Peninsula far to the south-west.

It was announced officially here that airborne operations "on a very large scale" had preceded and reinforced new contingents of troops, supplies and equipment to invaded Europe.

Canadians Push Inland.

Somewhere on the 100-mile stretch of curving coastline between Le Havre and Cherbourg, Canadian forces were pushing farther inland alongside the other Allied troops.

At least one force of Dominion troops was believed fighting in or near Caen, communications hub between Cherbourg and Paris. A dispatch last night from S. L. Solon, British War Correspondent, reported that at 1 p.m. yesterday: "We are on the outskirts of Caen and are joining up with the Canadians."

At another, unidentified point on the invader, French coast, correspondent Pierre J. Huss said, British and Canadian troops reported their objectives reached after a "hard fight" within six hours of Tuesday's landings.

The Germans said new Allied airborne operations were directed against three points on the British sector, between Caen and Bayeux, Bernay and against Falaise and Argentan, adjoining rail junctions on the main line of Caen. Stone-ice bridges, fighting in the village of Bernay, Marc-sur-Seine, Cherbourg, parachutists were reported.

Field Marshal Rommel pictured a Caen gain had been won on the Normandy coast. "A communique said the Allied had been driven back from all the landing beaches and that the bridgehead of the Allied forces had linked separate beachheads, one to the other.

Supreme Tears Success.

A spokesman for the German High Command was quoted in Stockholm by the Swedish Telegraph Bureau as saying that "no British or American troops" in the enemy headquarters expects the invasion results will be thrown back into the sea."

Gen. Eisenhower, Allied commander, toured the beach areas for 4½ hours Wednesday in a British warship, he conferred with Gen. Montgomery and other Allied operational leaders from five allies forces.

Axis broadcasts estimated the Allies had placed 13 of 60 available divisions in France.

Through the beachhead gaps in the Atlantic Wall streamed all Allied troops and military supplies poured on their way to battle inland.

Shuttling Air Raids

Germany, whose central position in Europe has made her the greatest menace to civilization and liberty, is now suffering the weakness of a central position. It made her easily an enslaver in the first days of war. But with the fully developed power of the nations seeking victory and security for justice sake, that central position makes Germany a nation besieged with the Allies all about, with a seething underground, and with the sky through which the Allied airmen fly supreme.

Hitler's Europe is being boxed in more and more, the empire of aggression is shrinking into a prison and overhead pass the shuttling planes of the United Nations from the west to Russia and from Russia to the west.

Germany can be pounded at will anywhere with heavier bomb loads from planes that are safer because they lose no time in flying as the shuttle service has a two-way delivery.

Hitler and Germany never intended that the Allies should attain air supremacy or that the time should ever come when the roof of Germany would not be safe from planes.

The new development of shuttling planes is a further step stemming out of the fully fledged might of United Nations that seek to make peace certain and sure and to abolish the barbarity of tyranny and oppression in the modern world which in other ways is advancing along the path of a federated world.

Prayer for Victory and the Forces

The spirit of the crusade—that is what the prosecution of the war means to the United Nations—is faith and prayer and action. It was His Majesty King George who said in his broadcast on invasion day that "the spirit of the people resolute, dedicated, burned like a bright flame lit surely from those unseen fires which nothing can quench" during the days after Dunkerque. "Now once more a supreme test has to be faced. This time the challenge is not to fight to survive but to fight to win the final victory. . . . That we may be worthily matched with this new summons of destiny I desire solemnly to call my people to prayer and dedication. I hope that throughout the present crisis of the liberation of Europe there may be offered up earnest and continuous widespread prayer. We who remain in this land can most effectively enter into the sufferings of subjugated Europe by prayer, whereby we can fortify the determination of our sailors, soldiers and airmen who go forth to set the captives free.

"If from every place of worship, from home and factory, from men and women of all ages and many races and occupations, our intercessions rise, then, please God, both now and in the future not remote, the predictions of an ancient psalm may be fulfilled, 'The Lord will give strength unto His people; the Lord will give His people the blessing of peace.' "

The evening of the same day President Roosevelt led the people of the great Republic of the United States in prayer for strength and ultimate victory over the apostles of greed and racial arrogancies and in prayer "for us at home"

On Tuesday large numbers of people in Belleville and in all other centres in Canada and the United States as well as in England, attended services of intercession. Large congregations indicated how deep a spiritual significance is attached to such a time and how deeply the war touches everyone. Everyone is affected by the presence of some member of the family or friend in the armed forces as well as through the significance of the struggle now being waged where the forces of righteousness and justice strive against the powers of evil as represented by the German armies and their leaders. This is a manifestation of a unity of feeling of dependence upon Providence in the hour of trial and of the satisfying character of prayer offered in the cause of right. For the many who attended public services of intercession there surely were many more who were unable to attend but who in their homes or wherever they were expressed silent prayers for the successful outcome of the invasion and for the welfare and safety of those who make up the gallant forces that represent the democracies. All are believers at heart, in great moments man feels the need of invocation of Heaven's aid for the success of Allied arms and for divine protection of the men who fight the great fight of faith and liberty on the world's battlefields. The thoughts of those at home are with the forces undertaking gigantic tasks and achieving victory.

Invasion day brought a surge of spiritual emotion as people prayed while they went about their work, thus dedicating their effort to the work of winning the victory for mankind. There was the calmness of determination and the sense of confidence everywhere.

In their individual hearts and in the company of worshippers in meditation and prayer, the people become strong. At such a time their hearts are prayerful and therefore strong to inspire and to achieve. They feel the need of communion and feel new strength in intercession and supplication.

Keeping a Bee

(Calgary Albertan)

The city council has had to concern itself with a good many different kinds of livestock in the past. Now, however, it is confronted with the apparently insoluble problem of the honey-bee.

Probably as a result of the sugar shortage, an increasing number of Calgary people have taken to raising bees. Their pets are beginning to cause trouble for the neighbors. Anyone with a flower garden or a lawn full of clover is liable to a mass invasion. Clashes between citizens and bees—with the bee the invariable winner—are becoming more numerous. As a result, complaints are being made to the council and that body is being urged to do something.

No one objects to a family keeping a few bees for his own use; but commercial bee-keeping is an occupation that should be carried on in the country.

Genius Gives Away Art

One of the greatest artists of Britain is giving away his masterpieces while other painters and art dealers are cashing in on a wartime boom in pictures. Sir Frank Brangwyn, mural designer, painter, etcher, lithographer, whose work critics rank with those of the great masters, still works at his home in Ditchling, although 77 and in ill health. "What's the use of money at my age?" he asks. "It's not much use anyway, except to help a friend now and again." He has given magnificent collections of his paintings, etchings and engravings to Bruges, where he was born, to Wales, in honor of his ancestry, to France, Holland, to Brighton and to Coventry as a token of regard for its courage in the blitz.

Making Rope That Floats

(U. S. Foreign Commerce Weekly)

A patent recently recorded in the United Kingdom describes methods of treating flexible rope so that it will float on fresh or salt water from one to ten days. Many types of fibres may be used, including cotton, flax, manila, hemp, sisal, or viscose. Rope so treated would be applicable for use as life lines in rescue work, or as landing ropes. Luminescent materials could also be applied.

Half a Billion Flying Horsepower

(U. S. Army and Navy Journal)

According to calculations of the Air Transport Association, the United States has, since the beginning of the war, manufactured airplane engines of more than half a billion horsepower. This figure amounts to almost 10 times the horsepower capacity of all the central electric generating stations in the United States and is a third of all the horsepower used by all the automobiles in this country.

THE GENTLER SIDE

We see it gleaming, far and wide,
The evidence of hopes and dreams,
The proof man has a gentler side
And would be better than he seems.

A red geranium set apart
Upon a narrow window sill
Voices the tenant's love of art,
Which drudgery has no power to kill.

Never a little garden gay
But what it tells in lovely phrase.
Devotion true from day to day,
To beauty's soul-rewarding ways.

Windows with pretty curtains white,
Trimmed lawns and boxes filled with flowers,
All bits of beauty and delight
Are proof of man's unselfish hours.

Though raiment must the body wear,
And food and fire must first be had,
With something of a tenderer care
Men keep the inner spirit clad.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JUNE 8th., 1924.

In a baseball game at Marmora yesterday the Belleville Juniors were defeated by the team of that place by a score of 15-5. The Belleville team under the management of Bill Mills and Walter Gerow looked like winners until the sixth innings when luck and the crowd went against them and the Marmora boys ran in nine runs on them. The following composed the Belleville team: Hunter, Gerow, Latchford, Hurley, Post, Rigby, Hibbard Stark, Rose and Wilkins. The game was handled by Walt Gerow.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Belleville Poultry Club at the High School last evening and seventeen new members were enrolled. Orpingtons were exhibited by Col. E. D. O'Flynn, Mr. Archibald and Mr. T. Gill, and the various points of the breed were well brought out. Black Spanish, White Minorcas and White Leghorns are to be exhibited at the July meeting. The secretary of the club is Mr. W. J. Thomson, to whom applications for membership may be made.

30 YEARS AGO

JUNE 8th., 1914.

This section was visited yesterday by a severe electrical storm which did considerable damage. The lightning was vivid, the thunder deafening and the rain at times fell in torrents accompanied by some hail. In the Township of Thurlow near Ross' Corners, a barn belonging to Mr. W. Meyers was struck by lightning and destroyed, and a horse owned by him was killed. Mr. C. H. Bonisteel, who resides at Bayside, Front of Sidney, had his barn destroyed with all its contents. On the Ridge Road a barn was struck and destroyed with contents, the owner's name could not be ascertained today. Mr. F. A. Bird, who lives in the Oak Hills, had a valuable cow killed by lightning. The animal was under a tree which was struck. Mr. John Downey of Crookston, Huntingdon Township, had a cow killed. The cow had taken shelter under a tree and other cows nearby in the open escaped. Mr. Arthur Hamblin's barn, in the Township of Sidney in the Oak Hills, was struck by lightning and destroyed. Mr. A. Sharpe's barn west of Stirling was struck by lightning and destroyed. A cow belonging to Mr. John Latonne at Thrasher's Corners was killed by lightning. A large tree on the Cannifton Road, near Lazier's Mill, was struck by lightning and shattered.

Mr. W. S. Martin of Stirling, ex-Warden of the County, was a visitor in the city today.

The Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, was in the city today and inspected the D. & D. Institute.

Mr. F. M. Clarke went to Picton today to attend the meeting of the Orange Grand Lodge.

A meeting of the I.O.O.F. for Belleville District is being held in Trenton today. The delegates from this city are Messrs. Charles Ostrom, J. E. Parks, L. C. Pascoe, R. W. Adams, and H. Ransom.

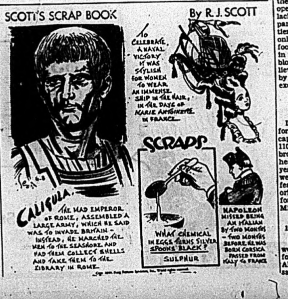
The 49th Battalion will go into camp at Kingston on June 28th.

In a football match between the High School and the Ontario Business College played yesterday on the grounds at Albert College, neither team scored. "Billie" Conger was the referee and gave general satisfaction. The following composed the teams: High School: Holton, Campbell, Davis, Vandervoort, Alford, Taugher, Carroll, Moore, Robb, Donald and Anderson; O.B.C.: McCurdy, McCallum, Wood, Rollins, Salisbury, Kenning, Minchinton, Kerr, Lannington, Rathbun and Cook. During the game Alford of the High School team had a bad fall and dislocated an elbow.

50 YEARS AGO

JUNE 8th., 1894.

Mr. J. W. Dunnett died early this morning. He was born in Scotland in the year 1840 and came to Belleville from Peterborough in 1870 and bought the drygoods business of the late George Vair and since then conducted it successfully. The store is known as Glasgow Warehouse. He was a member of Mizpah Lodge No. 127 I.O.O.F., the Independent Order of Foresters, the Select Knights, the A.O.U.W., Belleville Loyal Orange Lodge No. 727 and St. Andrew's Society. At one time he commanded a company in the 15th Battalion and retired with the rank of Junior Major. He was a director of the Y.M.C.A. He represented Murney Ward in the city council during the years 1881, 1882, 1883, and in 1884 he was elected Mayor and was re-elected the following year. He was a member of Emmanuel Church.



PRISONERS RETURN TO WORK

Chatham, June 8 (CP)—More than 300 German prisoners of war at a summer internment camp near here yesterday returned to work on Kent County farms after having been idle since last Friday. The camp commandant said there had been no cases of insubordination while the men were idle.

GERMAN GENERAL DIES

London, June 8 (CP)—A DNB dispatch heard broadcast by the Berlin radio yesterday said Gen. Glokke of the German sixth Army had died unexpectedly of a heart seizure. (The dispatch did not identify Gen. Glokke further. He is not listed in available copies of the German "who's who.")

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

Rome Would Have Cheered Victorious Mussolini

(Ottawa Journal)

Perhaps we are sour and cynical and suspicious, but all this stuff about "a carnival spirit" in Rome, and Romans lining the sidewalks to cheer mightily for the advancing Allied troops, gives us a pain in the neck.

These are the Italians, the men and women, who used to cheer lustily for the strutting Mussolini and his tinsel empire. They are the Romans, inheritors of a mighty name and nothing else, who took up Fascism whole-hog, who accepted a dictator as the noblest work of God, and set out with him to chase the British from Africa, to make the Mediterranean an Italian lake.

Now, in defeat, the people cheer our troops and make them gifts. Does anyone naively suppose they would have kept a stony silence had Mussolini come marching home triumphant? They would have hailed him as a new and mightier Caesar, and would have acclaimed their great and good allies the Germans as participants with them in a glorious occasion.

The beaten Italians have seen Mussolini overthrown, their king abdicating under democratic pressure, their navy surrendered to the British, their army playing an ignominious role. Now they want us to believe they never were anything but friends of Britain and the United States, that with them Fascism was only skin deep and they never really wanted to rule the world. Albania was just a passing phase, Abyssinia a regrettable blunder, and the attack on Egypt a bit of comedy. Remembering the throngs which used to acclaim Mussolini, that takes a very great capacity to believe the incredible.

A British United Press despatch from Reynolds and Eleanor Packard in The Evening Journal of Monday told of their drive in a jeep through the streets of Rome as the retreating Germans were still shelling and sniping in the city. Voluble Italians cheered and clapped their hands and threw roses, tried to kiss the Packards, and the driver of the jeep, a tough private from Fort Wayne, had to be restrained from punching some of the men. "We don't welcome people like that in Indiana", he said. We think Private Richardson should have been permitted a few punches, just for luck.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Treating Overweight in the Hospital.

A physician who has been successful in helping overweights to get rid of much of their surplus fat goes about the reducing of weight in a thorough and systematic manner. The patient tells the story of her ordinary everyday habits as to food eaten, rest taken day and night, and the amount of exercise taken—housework, walking, shopping or other exercise. That is, what she does Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and each day of the week.

He then puts her on a diet of 1,500 calories daily, has her reduce her rest period by one hour daily but to continue taking her usual amount of exercise. In the few cases where he suspects that there is lack of gland extract being manufactured daily, he prescribes the usual doses of thyroid, pituitary, or sex gland extract. She is to return in four weeks.

In the ordinary cases where no gland extracts have been prescribed he expects to find a weight loss of from 4 to 8 pounds in the four weeks. If not, she is put on a 1,200 calorie daily diet and is to report in another four weeks. If no real loss of weight then a small daily dose of thyroid is prescribed together with the 1,200 calorie diet.

If with a daily diet of only 1,200 calories and small doses of thyroid extract there is no real loss of weight, the physician becomes serious in his manner and states that as it is important to her health that she lose weight and she is not losing weight despite his efforts, she must enter hospital for observation.

What happens? In practically all cases weight is lost in a satisfactory manner when under observation in hospital.

Dr. George F. Dick in American Journal of Digestive Diseases, states that the failure to lose weight on low calories diets is not due to the diet itself but to lack of cooperation on the patient's part or lack of proper supervision on the part of the physician. "When patients are kept in hospital and fed only the designated or prescribed foods, there follows a constant fall in weight. Overweights with high blood pressure may be entirely relieved of their high blood pressure by losing a good proportion of their excess weight".

NAZIS CAPTURE RIBNIK

London, June 8 (CP)—Reinforced German detachments have captured Ribnik, in western Bosnia 110 miles southeast of Zagreb, a broadcast communique from the headquarters of Marshal Tito said yesterday. The Germans, however, were declared to have been "defeated and thrown back to their original positions" by the Yugoslav forces in fierce fighting near Militiste.

Prisoners Sorry, Sullen, Shabby Crew More Pathetic Than Ferocious

By MARGARET ECKER (Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

A British Port, June 8 (CP Cable)—Hitler's blitz boys who dreamed of invading Britain came to England—not under the Swastika but in an Allied landing craft returning from the French invasion coast.

As prisoners, the Wehrmacht warriors were a sorry, sullen, shabby crew, more pathetic than ferocious.

While we watched from the dock three ships in less than an hour brought in their prisoners—soldiers in grey-green, mostly wearing tank corps insignia, merchant marine men in worn civvies and E-boat crews in navy blue.

None of them showed much fight here or on the other side. When someone shouted to a ship, "where did you pick them up?" A Scottish Petty Officer called back: "We got them on the beaches. They rounded themselves up and begged us to take them."

A wounded British Tommy we talked to later said just about the same thing.

"The Jerries were hiding in houses on the beach—but after our bombers went over and gave them such a pounding they came out and surrendered in droves," he said. "They didn't seem interested in fighting once we got well into the beaches."

Either Young or Old.

They either were too young or too old—young lads on the verge of tears, silver-haired German daddies seemingly tired of it all.

A handful of officers looked like the Hollywood conception of the same. They were arrogant, firm-jawed Prussians and stood out among their comrades.

"They came to stay," said a British soldier, and most of them looked it. They were carrying full kit—water bottles, mess kits, tin helmets, rations. Some of them had blankets. Many wore Iron Crosses.

When they came on the dock they looked well fed enough but their uniforms looked threadbare. They didn't talk to each other as they stood at ease.

"They either are well-trained, scared stiff or completely exhausted," said a British officer. "I interviewed one of them Tuesday night, the first to come through this port. He was damn glad to get out of it—and I dare say these aren't too unhappy."

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

When spring was well established the housewife hung the family footstove high out of the way near the rafters, and nobody gave it a second thought until snow flew again. Then it became a "friend in need", ready to keep toes warm when long rides in the sleigh were programmed. The tiny box of a stove contained an iron pan in which coals were laid. There were perforations in its side through which heat escaped, and it was equipped with a handle for easy carrying. Heated bricks were sometimes stowed away under travellers feet when the foot stove was unavailable.

During the first winter on his farm the settler usually got about in a "jumper" sleigh, hitched to an ox or oxen. This rude contraption was made entirely of wood, even to the runners, for there was no iron with which they might be shod. The jumping powers of this sleigh may be judged by one traveller's remarks. After a series of mishaps he remarked, "Although I shall not cease to uphold the excellence of jumpers, I will be content with exhibiting them on a level road and not attempt to clear sawlogs again".

If the farmer had neither time nor talent for making a jumper sleigh he need not go without transportation facilities if he had fifty cents to spare in his purse. This was the current price for home-made sleighs of the jumper variety.

NEGROES IN CONGRESS

Only two Negroes have served in the U. S. Senate.

Hiram R. Revels was the first Negro to serve in the U. S. Congress. He took his seat as a senator from Mississippi February 25, 1870, and served until March 4, 1871.

The other Negro who has served in the U. S. Senate was Blanche K. Bruce, who was a senator from Mississippi during the term 1875-1881.

Twenty Negroes served in the House of Representatives between the years 1870 and 1928.

Joseph H. Rainey, of South Carolina, was the first Negro to serve in the House as a duly qualified member. He took his seat December 12, 1870. Rainey also served longer than any other Negro—ten years.

It is often stated that J. Willis Menard, of Louisiana, was the first colored member of Congress. He claimed he was elected to fill the vacancy made in 1868 by the death of Representative James Mann, of New Orleans. The House, however, decided against his claim and he was not permitted to take his seat.

Those states that had Negro members of the House between 1870 to 1901 are South Carolina, eight; North Carolina, four; Alabama, three; Georgia, one; Louisiana, one; Florida, one; Virginia, one, and Mississippi, one.

All these Negroes were Republicans and served in Congress during and immediately following the reconstruction period when abnormal political conditions established by Northern carpet-baggers prevailed in the South.

Representative George H. White, of North Carolina, was the last of this group of Negro members of Congress. He served from March 4, 1897, to March 4, 1901.

Since then three Negroes have served in Congress.

They were: Oscar de Priest (1929-1935); Arthur W. Mitchell (1935-1943); and William Levi Dawson (1943——). These three Negroes have all represented the same Chicago district. De Priest was a Republican, while Mitchell was the first Negro ever elected to Congress as a Democrat. Dawson is also a Democrat.

Sgt. Elmer R. Bonter of Trenton One of Four Army Photographers Who Jumped With Paratroopers

Former Correspondent of Ontario Intelligencer is Reported as Still "Somewhere in France"

By FRANK LOWE

London, June 5 (CP Cable) — Four Canadian army photographers were there, ten of them with the paratroopers, when the Canadians stormed into France, and tonight the pictures from two—Lieut. P. L. Dobreville of Ottawa and Sgt. W. R. Grant of Vancouver—have been received.

Sgts. E. R. Bonter of Trenton, Ont., and D. A. Reynolds of Toronto, who jumped with the paratroopers, are still "somewhere in France."

Dobreville's pictures of the beach-head action were the first published. The Ottawa officer parked himself on a stranded landing craft and "shot" the scene while shells and bullets whirled overhead. The pictures were played in all London newspapers.

Grant also scored a scoop and his motion pictures of the beachhead action were sent today to North American newsreel theatres. First to get out, the former drummer in a Vancouver orchestra was outfitted with a flips job.

Conditions under which Grant worked were illustrated by his remarks accorded beneath a commentary accompanying the film: "The parts he is in has just been blown up. The concussion threw me into the water. I'm all wet, but sure are all right. I hope the film is okay. Gee, I hope so."

Bonter and Reynolds qualified as paratroopers by training for nearly 18 months. They did all the jumps and Bonter suffered a broken leg before finally winning his wings.

Sgt. Elmer Bonter was formerly Trenton correspondent for Ontario Intelligencer.

U. S. MAN FIRST TO LAND

A U. S. Parachute Carrier Base, June 5 — (AP) — The first Allied soldier to set foot on the soil of France in the invasion from the west was Chief Frank Lillyman of Syracuse, N.Y.

Lillyman, 32, was the first man to jump from the lead plane of the parachute troop carriers which went in by the light of the moon before the assault from the sea.

Name Rev. Semple And H.B. Fetterly To Gen. Council

Peterborough, June 5 —(CP)— Commissioners to the General Council of the United Church were named at today's session of the Bay of Quinte Conference meeting here.

Rev. R. W. Thompson of Kingston the president of the conference and J. W. Kitchen of Smiths Falls, president of the Lay Association, are members to the executive of the General Council.

The commissioners are: Rev. James Semple and H. B. Fetterly from the Belleville Presbytery; Rev. P. F. Gardiner and A. A. Martin from the Cobourg Presbytery; Rev. H. A. Kent, and Principal R. C. Wallace from the Kingston Presbytery; Rev. F. R. Vanderburg and H. H. Winter from Lindsay Presbytery; Rev. R. E. Morton and F. M. Chapman from Ottawa Presbytery; Rev. H. L. Robert and I. H. Keefer from Peterborough Presbytery and Rev. H. A. Turner and R. A. Stewart from Renfrew Presbytery.

The largest army in its history and the largest volunteer force of any country in the world has been raised by India, Dr. L. Wimifred Bryce declared, who spent 30 years in the Orient told the conference.

Dr. Bryce pictured India as a great throbbing heart in the midst of world affairs. "Thirty years ago the poor believed that they belonged where they were, but now they are very conscious of poverty and young India is ashamed of it." The speaker gave as the two most important problems in advancing Christianity in India, the overcoming of an acute illiteracy, a problem described as beyond the capacity of the government to solve, and the promotion of the Christian family life.

Chinese Troops Occupy Part of Burma Road Town

Importance of China in the strategic plans of the "Big Four" of the United Nations Council as she is vital as a basis for land-based armies and planes in the Orient, attack on Japan, was stressed in an address Monday, May 19 by Victor Bruce to the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday night by Dr. A. J. Bruce, International Treasurer of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

Speaking to members and guests of the Y.M.C.A. War Service supervisors of district air force stations, and the Red Triangle Club in a "Y" centennial celebration, the speaker, a well-known traveller, explorer, soldier and Christian statesman, stated that the three main reasons for sustaining China were: — the new idea of government set up by the new republic; training of several thousands of her students in the country and the work of Christianity as exemplified by the church and the YMCA.

Growth and effect of the work of the Y, he said, was evidenced in the fact that at the outbreak of war, Chiang Kai Shek had only an inner group of 13 men—ten of whom were Christians and six of these Y secretaries.

The Y, he said, was celebrating its 100th birthday but it was stimulating to know that 50 years ago China accepted the Y which has been responsible for the training of her best leaders.

Turning to the war, Dr. Bruce, quoting Madame Chiang's views said that if we pursued the regular policy of beating Germany first, then attacking Japan, that would allow Japan to dig in and thus unduly prolong the war. Also if China were defeated, or forced out of the war, new casualties would be heaped by United Nations airmen.

"We must hold China for the ground attack," he declared. "Madame Chiang's views and the advice of other eastern leaders caused a revision in the Allied Strategy and at the Quebec conference last year, President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill agreed to send Lord Louis Mountbatten to the Far East to articulate the plans for joint action by land, air and sea forces.

In Burma today, the speaker continued, the British, American and Chinese forces have regained valuable ground territory. In the south four Jap columns have crossed the Indian border and are being gradually defeated and annihilated.

General Wingate and his commando methods in Burma were recognized as essentially sound and he was able to train American soldiers in this mode of warfare before his fatal crash in March.

In conclusion Dr. Bruce stated that the century saw as well for the advance of Y.M.C.A. methods "if we steadfastly and unitedly plan and work for the new Christian World Order.

The speaker was introduced by Jack Wilson and the appreciation of the large audience was voiced by R. MacArthur, organizer at the South Station Trenton. Gordon Stephens, organizer at No. 6 R.D., thanked the Red Triangle Club hostesses also Mrs. J. Shortt and the Ladies' Auxiliary for the fine repast.

Harold McKeig, Red Triangle Club, Belleville, was in the chair and extended welcome to the guests especially I.O. "Shock" Fenton, "Alabaster" murmur, down to the "Y" was given by I.A.C. Jack Nimmo, Trenton, with a response by George Long, Bell Telephone Company historian.

The musical part of the program was given by solos by Jimmy Bunker, with Alec Corbett at the piano. Dancing followed the dinner partners being provided by the Red Triangle Hostess Club.

TWO QUESTIONS WORRY GERMANS

Stockholm, June 8 — (AP) — Swedish travellers said yesterday that Germans at home were prepared for the invasion by the propaganda of Goebbels, appeared to take the news of the start of the Allied western drive with resignation and calmness.

Gen. Mark Clark Given Audience With Pope Pius

Rome, June 8 (AP)—Pope Pius XII and Lt.-Gen. Clark, commander of the 5th Army, talked for 15 minutes today in the Pope's private office in the Vatican library.

The Pope yesterday urged war correspondents to let the ultimate general purposes of their writing be for peace.

In his first press conference since becoming Pope, held in the throne room of the Vatican, the Pontiff said:—

"This war should be only a means to a peace. Write for a peace that can meet the approval of all well disposed persons that can assure one and all those conditions necessary so that they may live in a manner befitting the dignity of a human being."

The Pope, thin and pale but appearing strong, told the correspondents "you are most welcome. You have a mission of tremendous importance."

"If it would be well to have a message for you, it would be those words spoken back in 1940 on the eve of Christmas."

"If a man is sincerely interested in social, spiritual and moral conditions for future collaboration between nations, he will find in his force toward duty, truth, justice and goodwill, and even more, toward the supernatural idea of brotherly love that Christ gave to the world."

He ended the conference with a "goodbye and bless you all."

Dairy Employee Held for Murder

Hamilton, June 5—(CP)—Douglas Alfred Dunsmoor, 25-year-old dairy employee, is held in custody here today on a charge of murdering Mrs. Dorothy Martin, 33, one of the victims of the Moose Hall fire here last May 24.

He was arrested yesterday en route to work after a week's vacation and will be arraigned in court today.

His arrest followed a lengthy investigation of the tragedy.

Besides Mrs. Martin nine other persons died in hospital from injuries and burns suffered in the blaze and more than 30 others were injured.

Police first arrested Dunsmoor on three charges of arson in connection with other fires here and late yesterday Chief Joseph Crocker announced the charge of murder.

The arson charges to which he pleaded guilty, were in connection with blazes at the Wentworth Riding Academy last Dec. 30; at Trinity United Church March 23 and in the Canadian Canners Company warehouse April 27.

LAST Marjorie M. Cornish,

Post-Nuptial Reception Delightful Event

On returning from their wedding trip, a popular young Belleville couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sayers, (nee Jean Archibald), who were recently married, were guests of honor at a delightfully arranged reception at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sayers, 284 Albert Street, on Wednesday evening.

For the occasion, the home was artistically decorated throughout with its baskets of peonies, irises and lilies in all the delightful shades of their fresh attire.

Opening the door to the guests was Mrs. Wm. Sykkila and receiving them were the new bride and her mother, Mrs. A. D. Archibald, and the mother of the groom, Mrs. H. B. Sayers. Mrs. Sykkila graciously invited them to the tea room.

The tea table presented another "detail of delight" with its silver service arrangements of ivory embroidered lace cloth, pale tapers in silver candlesticks and centrepiece of pink and white peonies and purple irises in silver bowl.

Pouring tea were Mrs. A. J. W. Myers, Mrs. J. G. Hunter and Mrs. W. C. Springer. Tea assistants were Mrs. William Hunter, Mrs. Walter Douglas, Mrs. Frank McKeown and Mrs. Irvine Hefferman. Misses Jean Timmerman, Shirley McIntosh and Mary Trusler, were servitours.

Lovely Setting For White Shrine Tea And Sale

The home of Mrs. A. Nayler, 290 Bleecker Avenue, Trenton, decorated with peonies and June roses in an array of Spring bloom, formed a lovely setting for the White Shrine of Bethlehem tea on Wednesday afternoon, the affair was very successful with highly gratifying results realized.

Little Miss Jean Cornish opened the door to the graceful welcome by Mrs. Nayler and Mrs. S. Cherrie. Invited to the tea room were Mrs. George Adams and Mrs. Clifford Barger.

Presiding at the tea table, beautifully arranged and spread with an ivory lace cloth, flanked with tall tapers in amber crystal candelabra and centred with a reflector on which were placed a bowl of roses and white peonies and two unique amber crystal swans holding ivory peony buds, were Mrs. J. Smith, Mrs. Maud Elliott, Mrs. R. Bargent and Mrs. W. Harrison.

Those acting as servitours were, Mrs. A. Cornish, Mrs. John Pinch, Mrs. H. Reid, Mrs. G. Baker, Mrs. Wrank Mohan and Miss Mary Carmichael. Replenishing the tea table were Mrs. J. Goodfellow and Mrs. A. Stratton, both arranged very attractive plates for the occasion.

Convener of the tea was Mrs. O. Calnan and refreshment conveners were Mrs. H. Mason and Mrs. William Adams.

Home cooking and apron booths added a note of much interest to the festive scene, the former in charge of Mrs. Wm. McCaw, Mrs. F. Weseis and Mrs. Wm. Ashley and the latter convened by Mrs. J. Little and Mrs. E. Holst.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. C. Capp.

The draw on an angel cake was won by Mrs. C. Darrant and a sack of potatoes, donated by Mr. George Adams, was won on a raffle by Mrs. William Adams.

Couple Presented With Shower By Gilead Friends

Gilead friends and neighbors of a recently wedded couple, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Rose, (nee Ruth Livingston), assembled at the bride's home one night recently to present Mr. and Mrs. with a miscellaneous shower. The first part of the evening was spent in dancing after which a brief complimentary address was read by Miss Mary Laurenson and presented on behalf of the community by Hilda Laurenson, Mary Laurenson and Gladys Rollins. Ruth and Earl expressed their heartfelt gratitude to everyone for the very lovely and useful gifts. The bride also extended her thanks in a standing invitation to come and see them in their new home. "Every day's a jolly good fellow" was chorused, followed by a delicious lunch served by the ladies of the community. The remainder of the party was then danced on.

The Marry-Go-Round

Questionnaire For Lovers.

June is the popular marrying month, and just about now lots of lovers and engaged couples are wondering whether they should get hitched or not. Why not ask each other the usual foolish and personal questions? Do you love me? HOW MUCH do you love me? Will you ALWAYS love me? Will you love me WHEN I'M OLD? never change? The man in the moon must get awfully bored at such monotony.

Of course, there is only one really vital and important question in such hearts. "Will he (or she) love me as much if I am greatly changed, when we meet after the years?" That is the one poignant question today.

Once I made out a practical questionnaire for lovers, which went something as follows: As near it is easier to answer than the intangible questions.

Do you believe that a wife should be her husband's secretary, his cook, mistress, his valet or his yes-woman? Are you in favor of permanent marriage or any-kind variety? Do you regard a husband as permanent property or a long-lease affair?

How long does it take you to dress? To find your shoes? To assemble your face? To recover from the "night before"?

Are you bathroom monopolist, or do you believe, in democracy? MUST you sing with your shower? And when you slip on the soap do you say "Why-ye-put that thing there?"

Do you use an ash-tray or do you prefer the mahogany as a receptacle for burning cigarette ends? Do you like to finish off the three lighted cigarettes in the waste-paper-basket? Do you like to make your duty will cure you?

Do you regard a tan-opener as the most vital cooking utensil, and wonder how much as a cash-value for "left-overs"? Or are you trying to learn to cook? Can you open a can of beans without starting a flood? What do you know about the mechanism of a modern kitchen?

Who, in your opinion, has the clumsiest fists in the morning newspaper? Have you a bump of knowledge, or do you prefer brains as the things? Do you use keen analytical judgment or just brute force, in squeezing the tooth-paste?

Does one cocktail make you feel like a street-car conductor, or does it just put you to sleep after dinner?

Does the sight of food arouse your primitive lust? Do you regard the dinner-gong as a call to arms or do you prefer breakfast as the scrapping-hour?

Will you love me in civies and/or my daily clothes as you do in a snappy uniform? On this rotation of crops are you for permanency?

These are just a few leading questions which may help you to find out whether you are going to sign on for another war or for perpetual peace.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Mothers-in-Law, Like Mushrooms

Are Good and Bad.

Without levity, may I say that mothers-in-law are like mushrooms. Some apparently are Heaven-sent and to fill a long-felt want, others—poisonous.

Now, I suppose, it's easier to pick your mushrooms than your mothers-in-law. It's the latter that unless your husband's mother is bent on continuous warfare without cause she will get on well enough when you marry her big boy. If she shows jealousy of her son's affection for his wife, it's well to stop, look and listen before you marry that lady's son.

Here are two letters from daughters-in-law. One is about the Heaven-sent, and the other about the account her son's wife gives of her, apparently belongs to the deadly-nightshade, a mushroom as poisonous no antidote is possible.

Mr Mother-in-Law Is Ahead.

"Dear Miss Fairfax: My husband is overseas. His position in the service cost us plenty. He had to give up a profitable job, sell his equipment and his allowance is not sufficient to cover the expenses of my daughter and children. I decided to take a job, and fortunately I was a good stenographer and typist before my marriage. But who was to look after my home and see to the children?

"Without a moment's notice my mother-in-law offered to do everything in her power. She gave up her delightful little apartment, moved into our house eighteen months ago and has been an angel ever since. She helps with the meals, sees the children off to school in time, darns their stockings and has a time her youngest arrives when I come home from the office tired beyond words. What every soldier's wife have a mother-in-law as good as mine!

Here's the Reverse of the Medal.

"My problem is that Mr. My mother-in-law has a superiority complex. She has never appreciated anything I have ever done for her. Think my sister-in-law and I are doing no more for her than we ever did. I have been pulling up with these impossible conditions for seven years, and it has impaired my health. She has had a number of operations, but they all knew. She's had long illnesses in which I have had to take care of her. She told me to leave the home a number of time, but I always put up with it for my husband's sake. Can you offer some suggestions? (Signed) TRY ME.

My suggestion is to move. Apparently you've tried everything, and nothing works out well. As your husband is willing to put up with his mother, and you're at the end of your rope, you and he, however, will have to adjust these differences concerning the breaking up of your present domestic arrangement.

WEDDINGS

FARWELL—FRANCIS

Wynnwood in Toronto, was the setting for the marriage on June 7th, of Miss Jean Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Francis of Stuart McGill Farwell, son of Mrs. Farwell and the late F. Farwell, K.C., of Toronto. Rev. Morris and Canon Sterr. Dr. J. E. Beaton officiated.

The bride was a turquoise georgette gown with hand hat, white flowers, and carried a cascade of shellar roses. Attending her were Miss Mary Francis, H.M.C.W.S. Wren, Mary Francis, H.M.C.W.S. Montreal, bridesmaid.

Miss Elaine Goodsell, Trenton, as maid of honor, wore pink net with matching bracelet helps frock, large black straw hat with beige veil, and carried pink roses.

Mr. Harold W. Keyes was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Jonathan Francis and Lieut. Grant Farwell.

After the reception the couple left on a trip. They will live in Toronto.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Double Name of City and State.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

To settle an argument we had at our family dinner-table last evening, will you please answer this question: When addressing a letter to be delivered in our own city, where the name is it proper to omit the name of the city and state and write "City" or "Town" instead?

Mildred.

This isn't a sensible or practical way to address an envelope, particularly these days when the postoffice attendants have enough troubles. Through some error, your letter might get into the wrong sack at the postoffice and end up, homeless, in another city or town. Also, in these days of changing addresses, your letter may have to be re-addressed to another city or town, and it's very easy for a postoffice attendant to change the street-address and overlook adding the name of the city or town. So again a fruitless wandering for the carelessly addressed letter. In my work, with its many self-addressed envelopes, I am often confronted with these wandering letters. . . so I would especially like to urge all readers to include the name of the city and state on their self-addressed envelopes.

Furlough Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Here I come back . . . with a question about my furlough wedding. We're planning to be married in July, at a 10.30 Nuptial Mass. I know that the bridegroom is going to serve a wedding breakfast after the ceremony, but for various reasons, principally expense, I'm not in favor of this. But I do so very much want to have some kind of gathering of relatives and friends at my home, and with your help I would like to know what most simple menu I could serve. Also, since our hours together will be so few, how long would we have to plan to stay at this gathering?

Wrens.

Invite the relatives and friends to come to your house directly after the ceremony, and don't even attempt to serve a "breakfast". Hot coffee you should serve. Then I'd like to have you have a bridal cake, for its lovely memories, to cut the first piece and share it with your bridegroom, and have someone take over the serving the rest of coming along! Sun baths, sun tan, passing notes! Every summer it's the same: she will be flirting with Old Sol, maybe she will do a bit of reclining, having been aware of the house-bound during winter and spring. Or maybe only feminine lingerers when she shops for summer dresses.

She'll get cool colors, if she is wise. She'll keep clear of reds and dark shades, select various tones of blue, moss-green or yellow. In the green she will be startling, and as intense just out of the refrigerator. In yellow she will be like a ray of sunlight. Her cotton draperies will be ready for anything—tramping over golf links, playing at archery, walking in the green and sheer twilight, relaxing at the country club.

A pretty girl, with a pretty figure that she carries with splendor, is always pretty, no matter what she wears. But a pretty girl who does not give her clothes a thought, or wearing them with grace, misses the style target, and looks dowdy even if she were arrayed like a queen for her coronation.

We can't complain about wartime clothes, or fashion. Designers have given us charming, simple effects that have grace and distinction. Yes, even the so-called mannish numbers have smart lines.

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

Casual Clothes Make the Grade.

Women are really beginning to look human. It isn't so much what they wear as how they wear it. No frock, no matter how expensive, looks like much on a hanger. Let it grace the pretty feminine shape and it is a creation; its fine lines are displayed, its smartness is accented.

The popularity of cotton fabrics has been far-reaching. Fancy evening gowns of gingham! Our great-grandmothers would be startled at their fashion stuff in silks, satins and brocades, would be horrified could they see us thus arrayed. To them, it would be like hurling a brick at an established style institution. What has happened is this: edging away from fussiness, ruffles and fluff, discarding the charm of simplicity, the newly, over-dressed woman is disappearing from the face of the earth.

The frump got that way because she fancied her fine material carry every kind of decoration for which there was space. She believed that if she paid a high price for a dress, it was bound to be right by her, make her a lady of fashion. As if the art of dressing were as simple as that! One must dress to type. One must know one's lines, find flattering colors. If all women cultivated a knowledge of line and color, there wouldn't be any orphan frocks hanging in clothes closets—duds you can't bear to look at after you have worn them once.

The perfect day of the year is that on which a girl sheds her woollen dresses and sweaters, takes to pretty wash materials. She feels cleaner, looks fresher. She knows then that summer is really at hand and that the swimming season is

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

Health Director

Overweight in Middle-Aged Persons

Overweight is a condition anyone can recognize. We know the usual cause—eating too much of the wrong foods; we know the usual cure— eating less of the wrong foods. But many people who really should do something about their overweight, do not do it, nothing except maintain it.

Doctor Jean Gray, of Stanford University Medical School, thinks that the habit of overeating, like overdrinking and over-smoking, cannot be broken except by sudden stopping. If the person just has not enough willpower to do this, he must have the aid of a specialist in diseases of the nervous system. It does not do to try to taper off according to Doctor Gray.

In a study of a large number of patients he found that by diet alone he could bring about an average loss of about fifteen pounds in three months. After that time he could not bring about any more reduction except by giving the patients thyroid. But in the doses they could stand. Then, in another three months, an average loss of about twelve pounds occurred.

In carrying out this program, Doctor Gray explained to the patients that their cue must be they must eliminate from their diets all bread, crackers, cake and cereals of all fattening foods. At the end of a month most of the patients stopped missing these foods and felt better and more without them. But about one-third of the patients failed to go through this first month period satisfactorily. Doctor Gray also had the patients bring a written list of all the foods they had eaten the day before. If the patients tried to evade bringing these lists, he knew that it was due to some resistance on their part to the reducing program.

With these patients, Doctor Gray found that drugs such as belladona and amphetamine were not of much value. Others, however, have found these drugs useful to some degree. Treatment with glandular extracts, other than thyroid extract, was not of value. In those patients who seemed to have a low blood sugar, the giving of sugar-containing tablets was found helpful.

It is important to remember that in many persons who overeat certain types of mental disturbances lead them to the habit of nibbling or eating to make up for their craving in other directions.

Doctor Gray concludes that the treatment of overweight depends more on the diet than on the body. No amount of medical knowledge will be of much value unless the patient's own willpower can be stimulated enough so that he can resolutely makes an effort to follow the dietary plans given to him.

CORN FLAKES REFRIGERATOR COOKIES

1-2 cup shortening
1-2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
2 cups Corn Flakes
1 3-4 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup milk.

Blend shortening and sugar together thoroughly; add orange rind. Crush corn flakes fine; mix fine crumbs. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; mix with crumbs. Add to first mixture alternately with milk and mix well.

Shape dough into rolls about 1 1-2 inches in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper; store in cool, damp and chill until firm. Slice and bake on ungreased baking sheets in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F) about 12 minutes.

Yield: 4 dozen cookies.

Note: Dough may be chilled, then rolled and cut into fancy shapes, if desired.

SAW CANADIANS SWEEP BEACHES IN DAYLIGHT

Mortar Fire Said to Have Been Main German Weapon on Beachhead

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aboard H.M.C.S. Prince Henry off the French Coast, June 8 — (delayed)—Canadian Army Men who helped take Canadian troops ashore from this ship today returned to report that the Canadians swept across the French beaches in broad daylight in the face of considerable opposition.

Hundreds of the Canadian landing force were taken ashore in Canadian-manned craft from this parent ship and men who ferried them reported anti-directed mortar fire was the main German weapon on the beachhead and it was surprisingly strong despite a fierce bombardment of the area.

Crews of the assault landing craft returned to report the beach already had been won when the Canadians they carried waded ashore just minutes after their H-Hour. Many soldiers became seasick as the small craft bounced in the heavy seas.

Enemy Mortars Concealed.

The enemy mortar fire from concealed positions beyond the beach and in the shelter of a cliff caused many casualties and knocked out several tanks before their carrying craft landed, these crews reported.

Heavy seas also swamped some tank landing craft miles from shore, they said.

One flotilla of eight landing craft failed to return to the Prince Henry after its troops got safely ashore. The flotilla had been knocked out by the enemy on the beach and a few crew members suffered minor injuries from shrapnel.

Lieut. Jack Davie of Duncan, B.C., a flotilla leader from this ship, said that as his craft, carrying crack soldiers, approached the beach in broad daylight, it looked as if the landing would be almost unopposed.

When Enemy Opened Fire.

"It wasn't until we almost touched down that they opened fire from mortar, well back on the beach," he said. "The beach seemed clear of enemy guns but close in shore were many mines and anti-tank pockets which holed my craft as the troops touched down they ran across the beach, ascended a small cliff about 100 yards up and disappeared over the other side.

"I saw some men lying on the beach, apparently dead, but there weren't many. On the way back I saw several dead being buried at sea from returning craft of other ships."

Davie said the flotilla sailed through many beach obstacles to reach shore. In addition to rustic-looking mines and concrete pickets, there were strip wire stretched nearly along the water's edge.

Craft Taken in Tow.

Davie's holed craft was taken in tow by two other craft and brought back to the ship. The crew hailed curiously because they didn't think they could make it.

The crew took the precaution of transferring to another vessel a wounded Canadian soldier whom Davie had picked up from a beached craft.

A craft commanded by Lieut. Claude Mollard of Calgary was holed by machinegun and shrapnel fire but returned to the mother ship on one engine for repairs.

Mollard's craft then went back to the beach and took a special load. The crew included Able Seaman "Bert Barrel Pulks" whose things got hot 50 yards off the beach.

"It was wonderful," he added, "because some of the soldiers were deathly ill of seasickness. It heated their minds so they could see it in their faces—and while the firing went on all around us they all joined in. So did I."

Hendery said all the soldiers in his craft reached the beach unwounded. He was too busy to notice much after that because the anchor fouled in a mine trap and had to be chopped off. One engine failed but the craft maintained a steady speed on the other and was the first back to the ship, Petty Officer Beauchemont.

A veteran of both the North Africa and Sicily landings, 36-year-old Walter Darnborough of Toronto, said this operation was the hardest in his experience. A crewmate, Leading Stoker Tommy Grimes of Winnipeg, Man., called Dieppe the toughest. He was there aboard a demolition ship and also took part in the North African and Sicily landings.

From the bridge of the Prince Henry I watched the preliminary shore bombardment through field glasses in the early morning light. One particularly heavy explosion could be heard and it appeared an ammunition dump had been hit.

The Canadians clambered into their landing craft after a short prayer on the quarterdeck. A great cheer went up from the ship's company when the little craft started on their mission. These were echoed by the men in the assault craft as the ships jockeyed for position.

Several hours later a group of Canadian engineers went over scramble nets and were taken ashore in a small infantry landing ship.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the R.C.A.F. in Britain, June 8 — (delayed) — Squadron Leader W. Goodwin of (123 Globeholme Blvd.) Toronto, has been appointed commanding officer of the R.A.F. Mitchell medium bomber squadron of the British Air Commando Air Force.

A flier since 1931, Goodwin formerly was chief instructor with the Toronto, New Toronto, No. 6, and Hamilton (R.C.A.F. flying clubs. He joined the R.C.A.F. at the outbreak of war and instructed in Canada until his posting overseas at the start of this year.

"It has been a long time waiting for the real thing," Goodwin said. "But here I am at last with a fine squadron, a grand bunch of lads and great machines to fly."

The new senior administration officer with the squadron is Sqdn. Ldr. Don McKam of (35 Colledge Ave.) Ottawa. His navy links him again to Group Capt. C. B. Dunlap, C.B.E., of Pine Crescent, Vancouver, commanding officer of the station under whom he served in N. Africa when the group captain was C. O. of an R.C.A.F. bomber wing.

The station adjutant also is a Canadian, Fit. Lt. Raymond (Pat) Patterson of Lindsay, Ont., while the senior flying control officer is Sqdn. Ldr. Owen L. Dutton of (3137 Princess St.) Regina.

W/O. Alec Cliberry, D.F.M., of Regina, has packaged a bit of superstition into a take-off ceremony that his pals would give their oxygen masks to share.

Before every trip he insists on a W.A.A.F. transport driver leaving the imprint of her lips on his forehead. He claims the only time he neglected to have it done he was shot up.

EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNT

New York, June 8 —(AP)— An eye-witness description by George Hicks, London manager of the Blue Network, of an attack by German bombers on the Allied invasion fleet off the French coast was broadcast last night by Major Raclo network. Hicks' account was frequently overtoned by the sound of bombs exploding and the fire of anti-aircraft guns of the fleet. One bomber was downed.

Steady Stream British Armor Rolls to Front

By COLLIN WILLS
Distributed by The Canadian Press

With the Allied armies in France, June 8 — (delayed) — Up at the front while the infantry engages the enemy on a half-dozen sectors in a confused but purposeful pattern, a great armored battle goes on for the last ridge before this target town and for the town itself.

I was up there late yesterday. Our tanks were clearly visible along the near side of the ridge. Our guns were hidden in copses. Our infantry, in little sections in Indian file, were moving up in support.

On the other side of the ridge were gunners and crewmen on the eight anti-tank guns. Six British tanks which had been put out of action were strewn about on the nearer slopes. A tank battle was in full fury there.

On the way back here I passed Canadian engineers with armor-rolling up so rapidly that roads and villages were wrapped in a dust storm.

Villagers lined the roadside to watch and cheer.

These hungry French folk had nothing to give the passing tankmen except gratitude. Grinning tankmen flung out chocolate, cigarettes and sweets. And somehow within a few hours of the landing every French boy had a British badge on his beret and every girl one on her blouse.

Invasion Machine Running Smoothly

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 8 —(CP Cable)— The mighty invasion machine in Britain rolled along with utmost smoothness as great protective air armadas and bomber forces thundered out to France and the movement of troops and supplies to the continent continued on a vast scale.

Huge convoys roared along Britain's roads and the work of loading ships at countless embarkation ports continued uninterrupted.

At the same time ships and landing craft were beginning to return from the beaches, to home ports, some bringing back wounded.

Stewardesses on the south coast, doctors and nurses were on hand at dawn to care for wounded who were taken straight from ships to a waiting ambulance train.

Most of the wounded men had been hit within a few minutes of landing. They were not allowed to talk to civilians or correspondents but many were well enough to wave a cheery greeting.

Johnny 'Fingers' Katan Forces Vern Baxter to Concede Wrestling Bout in Third Fall of Fracas

Winner Secures Step-Over Leglock and Toe Hold in Third Round

AL DUNLOP WINS

The cry has gone up from the wrestling patrons at the Hume arena and it's simply this—"give us someone to beat John Katan."

The order might sound easy, but the Palermo Panther seems to be knocking 'em down with regularity every Wednesday night at the local palace de sport and Wednesday night he added another scalp to his list in the person of Vern Baxter, the Oregon Lumberjack.

Not only did Katan beat Baxter into submission for the initial fall, but he made the elongated Oregon woodsman wish he was back felling Douglas pine in his native haunts when he made Baxter concede the bout. However, the fans got one opportunity to exercise their verbal chords, while all of this was going on and that came, when Baxter turned one of Katan's aeroplane spins into a boomerang and the Oregon lad won the middle session.

Referee Screamed.

Just who was in agony the greater portion of the ring mellee is still problematical but one thing certain Referee Bert Maxwell screamed to the high heavens, when Katan tied both he and Baxter into the ropes with the night's arbiter getting the full value of the combined weights of both the grunt and groan artists. However, it was all fun for the fans and as far as Baxter is concerned Katan can go wrestle somebody else in the future.

On frequent occasions in the initial round Baxter had the audacity to wave Referee Maxwell to the sidelines indicating he was quite capable of taking Mr. Katan apart to find out just what made him such a miserable cuss. However, Baxter lived to rue the time he made such gestures as the Palermo Panther gained one of the famed Katan reverse headlocks that have made him ring famous and that was that for the first session at least. Now don't think Baxter didn't have some faithful admirers of his own. Once during this session "Doc" Wellbanks was of great assistance to the Oregon lumberjack and even in defeat Baxter was escorted to his dressing room by as cute a pair of feminine beauties as ever came out of Hollywood. (Now who says the life of a wrestler is tough?).

In the middle session Katan looked a sure winner in two straight when he gained an aeroplane spin that looked like the end of Baxter. But, wait a moment—what's this—when Katan went for the kill Baxter rolled the Panther over as neatly as ma rolls the top crust of her favorite pie and there lay Katan counted out and bewildered. Oh yes, those two fair lasses again escorted Baxter to his dressing room, but with more glee and gusto this time.

Forced to Cancede Fall.

However, they weren't around when Katan gained a reverse step-over leglock and toe hold to force Baxter to concede the third and final fall and the works, to be exact. Now Promoter Tunney is faced with procuring a more pugnacious opponent for the villainous Katan next week. The problem is—can he do it?

In the semi-final the villainous Al Dunlop took every advantage of his less experienced oponent—Abe Zvonkin—and put on even a rougher exhibition than Katan to irritate the fans, who hurled missiles and what have you at their pet hate up to that point. After Abe lost a head scissors Dunlop applied his back-breaker and press to win this go, that saw Referee Cliff Fox busy most of the night warning Bunny, but to no avail. Tom Collins of Buffalo proved too agile for Soldier Hewitt and won the opener following a series of flying tackles off the ropes and that ends the lesson until next Wedneday night.

OTT'S HITTING HOISTS GIANTS; CHICAGO CLIMBS

New York Manager Hits Two Homers to Raise Total to 14

YANKEES DEFEATED

By JACK HAND

(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Mel Ott continued to lift the Giants by their bootstraps, and the Chicago White Sox began to cast their shadow across the American League standings as baseball swung back into normal stride.

Ott clouted two more home runs, lifting his season production to 14, as the Giants pummeled Al Javery and Boston Braves last night, 6-2, behind the four-hit chucking of Harry Feldman.

Jimmy Dykes' White Sox stretched their win streak to seven by downing Detroit, 3-1, in another night game.

Orval Grove captured his fifth victory at the expense of Hal Newhouser, whose bid for win No. 9 resulted in loss No. 4, when he walked Grove with the bases loaded to force in the tie-breaking run.

Boston sent New York Yankees rolling back under another setback, 8-1, as Tex Hughson grabbed his seventh decision and boss Joe Cronin led the attack with a double and homer.

Rip Sewell ran his victory string to seven by stopping Cincinnati, 4-2, on Vince DiMaggio's single in the eighth, which drove home Johnny Barrett and Jim Russell.

The Phillies came from behind twice to top Brooklyn in the ninth, 6-5, when Jimmy Wasdell, an ex-Dodger, singled home Tony Lupien after Ray Hamrick had scored the tying run on Rube Melton's wild pitch.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

It was in Glasgow, and he arrived home very late. He rang the bell, and the wife popped her head out of the bedroom window, asking who it was.

"Itsh me," was the reply.

"Well, who brought you home?"

"I don't really know. It was either a tall fellow with a sporran, or a short fellow with a beard."

Baseball Booms

Across the bay in Prince Edward County the boys have revived the old county baseball loop with entries from Picton, Bloomfield, Mountain View and the Picton R.A.F. base. Actually there is considerable interest being shown in baseball throughout the rural sections of the province these days. Over in Trenton a group of teen-aged lads wanted to play baseball recently and could find little equipment or adequate grounds. Up popped Harry Moore, publisher of the Trenton Courier-Advocate with sufficient paraphernalia to get the game started and the lads erected a back-stop at the Trenton Dufferin St. school grounds so baseball got a start in Trenton. Incidentally the Trenton kids are coming to Belleville for an exhibition ball game one of these sunny weekends.

Here in town two groups of teen-aged lads have already laid the foundation for the odd ball game and will continue next weekend before meeting the Trenton kids here. Some of the local kids are planning to attend the Pittsburgh Pirate baseball school at the Maple Leaf Stadium in August and the odd ball game at home won't come amiss before the kids make the Toronto trek.

Recently we were in conversation with Group Captain R. C. Ripley, commanding officer at the Mountain View School of Bombing and Gunnery, and upon learning there were two groups of teen-aged lads interested in baseball in Belleville, Group Captain Ripley assured us his "Bombers" would gladly play the local kids exhibition games at Mountain View most any time they desire competition. No doubt Louie Yanover would gladly bring the Picton baseball team to Belleville for an exhibition tilt. In this manner baseball may yet be revived in the Quinte area, so the boys returning from overseas will be assured of diamond entertainment.

Turns Deaf Ear

Seven American League clubs have turned deaf ears to the laments of Ed Barrow, Yankee president, and Joe McCarthy, his manager, for outfield help. Cousin Egbert and Marse Joe approached practically every club in the league, with some kind of a trading proposition, but found no one interested. Despite the fact that the Yanks have been first most of the season, it generally is admitted that the New York outfield of Levy, Lindell and Metheny is the poorest since the pre-World War I days.

Around the Town

Homer Townsend, athletic director at the B.C.I.&V.S., held a modified track and field meet at the Collegiate campus yesterday afternoon just to keep the "collegians" interested in field day programs... Three track and three field events were run off in both lower and upper school brackets... Bill Thompson won the junior championship with 10 points while Leon Spafford captured the senior title with 13 points . . . A repeat performance would meet with much better success next autumn, when the fall semester rolls around and the senior boys return to their studies... Gene LaBonne's Reliance lassie had more offensive staying power and took the long end of a 17 to 12 score over the Mountain View Bomberettes last night, the W.D.'s from across the bay surely missing the services of their ace hurler, Vickie Hillier, who is on furlough . . . Pee Wee Colden hurled for Reliance and helped her own cause with a sixth inning two-run homer far over the Pinnacle St. wall . . . The Bomberettes used two pitchers in a futile effort to halt the slugging Reliance, who now lead the ladies loop softball parade with two wins and nary a loss . . . Tonight at the Fair Grounds a doubleheader is slated in the men's loop . . . Promoter Frank Tu[illegible] had better send out an S.O.S. [illegible] Jerry Monahan or some-such muscle-bender if he hopes to put an end to John Katan's ruffian antics at the local palace de sport . . . Last night Katan not only beat Vern Baxter into submission, but for good measure made him cry "uncle" and concede the whole show . . . However, beating Katan is no job for a novice.

Toronto, June 8 — (CP) — Hold your hat, it looks as though we are going for a ride again. Any fans who remember the hullabaloo over the hockey hall of fame before Kingston, Ont., neatly stepped in and grabbed the plum in caveman style will shudder when they hear a lacrosse fame hall has been proposed now.

The idea was broached some time ago by Dick Brayley, secretary and later vice-president of the Quebec Lacrosse Association. But nothing was done about it, possibly because Dick went into the R.C.A.F. Now Major Sid McLennan, Vancouver Exhibition manager has taken the idea up in earnest. The Major says he took a concensus among boxla officials in the west coast city and they were highly enthusiastic about the idea. Of course, they backed Vancouver's claim as the site of any shrine established.

There is just one mistake the lacrosse men on the coast made. They shouldn't have said a word about the whole thing to anyone, but just established their hall of fame and then announced it. As it is, we probably are in for another series of lengthy, and fruitless, arguments like those that surrounded the hockey shenanigans.

Here and There:

They don't go for running horses in the Maritimes, but harness racing is big-time for them, and the trotters and pacers get keen attention. In New Brunswick now there is a move afoot to form a strong, centralized association to give the sport a boost . . . The suggestion that racing silks be discarded and replaced by solid colors allotted to each position didn't meet with too much favor. Monte Monaco, writing for the race sheet Caliente in Tijuana, Mexico, says that to do so would "drop racing to the status of greyhound clashes." . . . Dick Speer, now umpiring baseball games in Edmonton, was a teammate of legendary Ty Cobb on the 1908 world champion Detroit Tigers. SYRACUSE CHIEFS BREAK LOSING STREAK FOR GAME

Score 6-3 Win Over Buffalo After Losing Thirteen Straight

LEAFS DEFEATED

By the Associated Press

To veteran outfielder Walter Cazen and pitcher Jim Konstanty goes the credit of halting the Syracuse Chiefs' 13-game losing streak, the record for the season. Cazen and Konstanty teamed up to give the Chiefs a 6-3 victory over the Buffalo Bisons in the first game of a twin-bill last night.

Cazen had two hits, a homer and a single, his round-tripper coming in the first inning with two mates aboard to feature a five-run outburst. Konstanty held the Bisons to seven hits.

The Chiefs went back to their losing ways in the second game, when Hank Oana blanked them with five hits for a 3-0 Buffalo victory.

The Baltimore club continued to receive good pitching and defeated Rochester Red Wings in both ends of a double-header, 6-2 and 10-3. Sam Lory hung up his fifth victory in the nightcap against one defeat and Rolland Van Slate won his fourth in the opener.

The league leading Jersey City Giants defeated Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-3, behind the pinch hitting of 19-year-old Andy Hansen, who notched his sixth victory.

The last-place Newark Bears clubbed three Montreal hurlers for 14 hits to defeat the Royals 13-3. Arky Biggs was the batting star for the Bears with a three-run homer plus a trio of singles in five times at bat.

Leon Spafford Senior Winner At Collegiate

Leon Spafford won the Belleville Collegiate Institute Senior championship and Bill Thompson the Junior athletic title at an abbreviated track and field meet held at the Collegiate campus yesterday afternoon. Three field and three track events were contested in both the Junior and Senior boys' series with for IIP winning the upper school championship of the day.

Second to Spafford in the Senior series was Jack Dodson, while G. Garrow finished second to Bill Thompson in the Junior events. The meet was arranged by H. W. Townsend, Collegiate Athletic Director. The events contested were the 75 and 100 yards dashes, a relay race and three field events, broad jump, hop-step and jump and running high jump. Considering the inpromptu field and surrounding conditions some splendid marks were hung up.

The results of the meet were as follows:-

SENIORS

75 yards—L. Spafford, V. Massey and C. Cameron, time 9¼ secs.

100 yards—Vince Massey, J. Dodson, Stew Woods, time 11 2-5 secs.

Broad jump—Spafford, Kikes, 17' 4".

Hop, step and jump—C. Cameron, Rolland, 35 ft.

Running high jump—Dodson, Bankier and Robb, 4 ft. 9½"

Relay race—Dodson, Freeman, Spafford and Rolland.

JUNIORS

75 Yards—Bruce Robbins, W. Pappas, J. Welch, 9 3-5 secs.

100 yards—Bill Thompson, Merle Mossy, J. Campbell, 12secs.

Broad jump—Longman, Garrow and Newman, 16' 2"

Hop, step and jump—Thompson, Barlow and Garrow, 32' 7"

Running high jump—Gibson, McCreary and McIntosh, 4' 9"

Relay race—Massey, Barlow, Garrow and Robbins.

New York, June 8 — (AP)—It's a long way from the football season but apparently it's the open season on football teams and players on the Pacific coasts . . . Reports trickling east so far indicate that Bill Freelove, who broke into pro football as water boy for the Washington Redskins when they first went west, has distributed at least six franchises in his newly-formed American League and three of the cities already were occupied by the Pacific Coast pro league . . . the Airboen "mystery" league, figuring on no fewer than four west coast clubs, will be ready to go after the war Bill (ex-Phillie) Cox reported on a recent visit to Seattle. The National League hasn't quit on the west coast even though actor Don Ameche has decided he likes horses better than footballers (hay, even at $55 a ton, is cheaper than steaks) . . . Well, it ought to be a merry little scrap.

RELIANCE GIRLS YET UNDEFEATED IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Win Slugfest from Mountain View Bomberettes by 17-12 Count

COLDEN ON MOUND

Pounding the offerings of two Mountain View "Bomberette" hurlers far and often to all corners of the Armouries Lawn, Gene LaBonne's Reliance lassies won a slugfest from the Bomberettes in the Belleville Ladies Softball League last night by the score of 17 to 12.

Reliance went out and scored five times in the third inning and added counters in every subsequent frame to mount their score. The Bomberettes bounced back with six big runs in the bottom half of the fourth and after scoring two in the fifth had the tying runs aboard in the sixth when Reliance tightened up to leave three on the runways and cinch the piece.

Pauline "Pee Wee" Colden was Skipper LaBonne's choice for the Reliance pitching chore and the diminutive veteran came through in strong style after faltering in the middle stanzas when a streak of wildness took its usual toll. She came back strong and finished by striking out an even half dozen, three coming in the last two frames, when the Bomberettes threatened. Gladys Webster started on the hilltop for the Mountain View W.D.'s, but was replaced by Helen Bratton in the fourth after Reliance had scored eight. Miss Colden helped her own cause with the game's only circuit blow, a two-run homer in the sixth. I. Semark blasted a pair of doubles and M. McKenna, one two-base smash for the winners, while Mattson, Homes and Mills hit doubles for the Bomberettes.

The line ups:

Mountain View, Webster p and ss, Homes lf, Mills rf, Strachan 3b, Wilhelm 2b, Bratton ss and p, Mattson 1b, Rogers c, Hutt and Edwards cf.

Reliance Industries, Elliott 3b, Stairs 2b, Blaind c, Garrow ss, Colden p, McKenna cf, Coathup 1b, Sanford and Laney lf and Semark rf.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 139

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

And so, we come to the end of the Horse Sense of opening bids of one and their responses. Any resemblance to the cumbersome systems is purely coincidental. As Horse Sense does not endorse any rules that are perplexing.

The next subjects will be opening bids of more than one. If they do not kill you, they will cure you of the many current ills in opening bids of two, three, four, and five.

Maybe you came in late. Maybe you did not get really interested in my column until it dawned on you that Horse Sense was what you always wanted. Or maybe some of your friends palmed early lessons.

So, before launching into higher openings, let's recap. Let's isolate the needful basic rules for opening bids of one and their responses. That will make sure of our backgrounds for the future.

It would not take long to state the few essential rules to date. I could list them all for you in one short column. But the others might not get it so fast. And we must consider them, of course.

Then, there are the prejudiced, the diehards, the moss-backs, and the experts. For their own good, they must be convinced. Sooner or later, they fathom some of it by the process of tryal osmosis, you might say.

For instance, you have a hand like this:

♠A J 4
♥A K 9 4
♦K 10 6 3
♣Q 10 2

Count six tricks; one for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one for each short card in clubs. You may want to ask me: "Dy, I seem a trick for that unprotected club queen?"

The answer is yes. You certainly do. And if somebody says you should not, I would like to know the reason why.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Million Dollar Kid"
(East Side Kids)

An exceptional array of talent was assembled by producers Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz for the East Side Kids' "Million Dollar Kid," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre. Besides the stars, Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell and Billy Benedict, there is lovely Louise Currie who appears as the feminine lead.

Featured in the Monogram film are Herbert Hayes, Noah Beery, Sr., Johnnie Duncan, Stanley Brown, Iris Adrian and Patsy Moran. "Million Dollar Kid" was directed by Wallace Fox, from the original screenplay by Frank H. Young.

"Death Valley Rangers"
(The Trail Blazers)

The popular western trio, in the persons of Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard and Bob Steele, are seen in the featured roles of "Death Valley Rangers," the Monogram film which opens today at the Capitol Theatre. Thus the "Trail Blazers" series for the 1943-44 season brings together three of the screen's most popular cowboy stars.

A funny cartoon and the serial, "The Masked Marvel," complete the big double attraction.

AT THE BELLE -

"THE CROSS OF LORRAINE"

Jean Pierre Aumont's screen adventures are being transformed to reality.

After portraying a French soldier who, following the invasion of his country by Germany, makes his way to uncoccupied territory to join the Fighting French army in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-male war drama, "The Cross of Lorraine," now at the Belle Theatre, Aumont took the same step in real life. He enlisted in the Free French forces and left Hollywood for New York, his only stop before embarking for North Africa where he is now on duty.

A former officer in the French army, Aumont escaped to America after his country fell to the Nazis. He has been in the United States two years, has made two pictures, "Assignment in Brittany" and "The Cross of Lorraine," both are battle dramas.

In Africa, Aumont hopes to rejoin his brother, Francois Villiers, who has been with the Fighting French three months. The Aumont, Villiers enlisted from America after a term in the Canadian service.

Others in the cast include Gene Kelly and Cedric Hardwicke.

"THE FALCON OUT WEST"

Baffling mystery and intrigue provide the plot foundation for RKO Radio's "The Falcon Out West," a tense action drama of New York and Texas in which Tom Conway plays the title role, as the added feature, now at the Belle Theatre.

When the theater detective follows a beautiful girl to the Southwest after her fiance has been mysteriously murdered by cobra venom, he finds himself the target for the same type of death. Despite a conflicting evidence, confusing clews and clevermen of crime, the Falcon solves the mystery and forces a confession from the criminal.

Presented in modern picturesque settings of a large cattle ranch and its surrounding country, the film has sensational chases and really western atmosphere skillfully blended with the tense gripping plot.

Barbara Hale, Carole Gallagher and Joan Barclay play the feminine leads. Others in the cast include Ed Gargan, Cliff Clark, Lyle Talbot, Don Douglas, Lee Trent and Minor Watson.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cover Girl"

Danny McGuire (Gene Kelly), small night club impresario in the story of "Cover Girl" columbia's Technicolor musical now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, is forced to tell his chorus girls, "You got there on your own two feet." Now to get dance is the thing to Danny.

While director Charles Vidor has not taken this too literally and thrown away story for terpsichore, "Cover Girl" with beautiful Rita Hayworth as his feminine star and featuring the beauty of 15 magazine cover girls among others would still get there on its feet. It's a twinkle, glide and tap their way to Jerome Kern's rhythms, from dances by the small night club girls, through ballroom and concerto routines, including production numbers, conceived and directed by Nal Naset and Seymour Felix.

Let's look at one of the most brilliant.

Rita Hayworth stands atop a pedestal. She is enveloped in a white cloud. A narrow path below her leads to the stage of the Broadway sensation in which she is making her debut. Then, down the steep path Rita Hayworth negotiates in ballpin turns and goes into a precision dance with eight chorus boys. It is a dance of lyrical loveliness and is climaxed by a realistic and beautiful snowstorm. Even Danny McGuire himself would have to admit that it's a dance to remember.

But there's another side to the feet question, as the girls often tell their indefatigable boss, Danny. Feet get sore.

That mountain dance of Rita's took days of hard, laborious rehearsal work before it came off so blithely on the screen. All the dances meant work. In that report, of course there's nothing new. However, thinking all the gorgeous and novel dances of "Cover Girl" ran into other difficulties besides sore feet. Take that climactic snowstorm for example.

After the fate of that Rita Hayworth triumph, the special effects men, who had prepped the chiffon simulating snow from up on high, catwalks, had to pick up each tiny piece by hand-even vacuum cleaners refused to do the job for them.

Then again in Gene Kelly's sensational "Alter Ego" dance, there was another type of difficulty.

The main routine of this, in the course of which Kelly dances with his conscience (finally Kelly too) is tied to the third kind, to all intents and purposes. Neither Kelly himself nor director Vidor, nor cameraman Rudy Mate could more than approximate the effect hoped-for. It's the second feature.

This was because the processing of the film negative at the Technicolor laboratories was so complex that it took five days. And since the dance itself took four days, not even the first day's "rushes" could be seen until after the whole thing was shot. No one, therefore knew until it was all over whether or not their assignment in being a man dance with his wraith in Technicolor was a success. They had to be absolute precision in the movement of the two figures-filmed separately-or the whole thing would fall apart.

Invasion Entertainers Await Their D-Day

London, June 8 (CP-Reuters) — Britain's agency of invasion entertainers armed with songs, music, plays and sketches for entertaining the troops is ready to leave for France.

Awaiting their D-Day here are 13 mobile columns each consisting of two concert parties of six and commanded by a lieutenant.

There is an escort of non-commissioned officers for each column all men and women who have worked in theatres in civil life.

Two-thirds of the artists are girls. They will form spearhead of large force of entertainers who will go to Europe, playing in mobile theatres mounted on lorries, equipped with piano and amplifier. The army provides the drivers.

TO-HEAD COMMISSION

Toronto, June 8 (CP)—Provincial Treasurer Frost of Ontario last night announced appointment of Judge Ian M. Macdonald under a Royal Commission to investigate safety conditions in public halls in the province and to make recommendations to the government.

Three Point Manpower Plan To Be Announced

Ottawa, June 8—(CP)—Extension of manpower controls over more women is expected to be the major point in a three point manpower plan to be announced by Labor Minister Mitchell in a nation-wide radio address today.

Wednesday night the 15-minute address, reviewing the country's manpower needed, which now are at their peak, and outlining the action necessary to meet them, was undergoing final revision, it was learned.

Senior Labor Department and National Selective Service officials declined to comment on the announcement the Minister would make, but from Hansonier came a statement from Maj. J. R. Cowell, Regional Selective Service director who said women would be included in transfer orders and a new "dual" system introduced to meet some labor shortages.

Arthur MacNamara, director of National Selective Service, said in an interview with the Canadian Press May 25 that a three-way attack was being planned to meet manpower needs. He said the program would include personal interviews with men who have been selected as physically unfit for military service; an on-the-spot survey of plants to combat labor hoarding, and an examination of compulsory transfer orders.

It is estimated there now are more than 200,000 women in war industries and about 695,000 in civilian industry.

ALL NATIONS MUST PLAY PART

London, June 8 (CP)—King Haakon VII of Norway said yesterday that "all nations, great and small, will have to play a part" in any international organization to assure world security. "As this organization grows, it will require force at its disposal to prevent aggression, it is only natural that the great powers must exercise measure of influence in accordance with their far greater responsibility."

London, (CP)—Once a week General Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill lunch together. It is reported the general always calls the prime minister "sir" and Churchill! Well, like a lot of others who are big in their own right, he calls the general "Ike".

Battle Between Servicemen And Civilians Halted

Montreal, June 8 — (CP)—Dozens of police officers were rushed to an east-end cabaret last night after a battle broke out between members of the armed forces and cabaret employees. Two constables were slightly injured and three servicemen and a juvenile were sent to hospital with minor injuries suffered in the fray.

At least three shots were fired during the melee, two when constable Roger Picard was attacked in a side street by two men whom police said were soldiers. One of the soldiers was arrested. The third shot was said to have been fired by a police sergeant caught in the midst of a hand-to-hand battle.

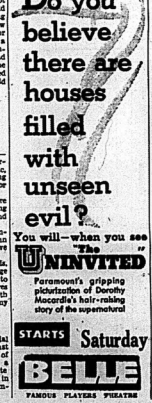
Police officers used night sticks freely and many spectators left the scene with bruised shins when they refused to move on under police order.

One sailor came out the better in the battle when he was attacked by five civilians. When the men closed in on him, he reverted to Commando tactics and dispersed his attackers who fled when the wall of a police siren was heard. The sailor was arrested.

Riots on St. Catherine Street were delayed for more than a half-hour as mistakes sailed across the main thoroughfare.

When the disturbance was settled, police booked 13 men at headquarters on charges of disturbing the peace, including three airmen, a soldier, a sailor, six adult civilians and two juveniles.

Cat on Rail Causes Death of Three Men



Kapuskasing, Ont., June 8—(CP) —Three men were killed yesterday and five others injured because a cat walked on the rails on the smoky line of the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. north of here.

They were among 10 railway employees buried into a heap of rocks and debris when the cat on the tracks caused a railway motor speeder pulling a lorry to jump the rails. Seven men were killed instantly and a third died before reaching hospital.

The dead are George Naitress, married and a railway foreman, Alphonse Lapointe, who was to have been married next Monday, and a married man named Gilbert.

Five others are in hospital here while two members of the crew were uninjured.

AT THE McCARTHY — Phil Silvers, Rita Hayworth and Gene Kelly dance joyfully to Jerome Kern's hit melody, "Make Way for Tomorrow" in the technicolor musical "Cover Girl," now at the McCarthy.

Canadian Navy Well Represented In the Invasion

Ottawa, June 8 —(CP) — Four destroyers, two auxiliary cruisers, some 20 corvettes, at least two flotillas of minesweepers, at least two flotillas of motor torpedo boats and landing craft represented the Royal Canadian Navy in the invasion of Western Europe, Cmdr. Peter MacRitchie said yesterday in a broadcast from the United Kingdom.

He named specifically the destroyers Haida, Huron, Sioux and Algonquin and the auxiliary cruisers Prince David and Prince Henry. "The corvettes, he said, carried "such well-known names as Alberni, Calgary, Prescott and Mimico."

(In addition to the two cruisers MacRitchie mentioned in the broadcast, carried by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, another correspondent with the naval invasion forces said he saw the Prince Robert, an anti-aircraft cruiser of the R.C.N.)

Algonquin. Cmdr. MacRitchie said, was assigned to convoying and protecting the headquarters ship which carried the commanding officers and staff officer of the central force.

There can be little doubt, he said, that the Canadian ships "acquitted themselves nobly." The minesweepers, he added, along with their fellows of the Royal Navy, probably played the greatest — if most unostentatious part in the Allied assault.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 11

Once out of the Inspector's office, our small group broke up speedily.

Dr. Woodill beg to hurry to a consultation. Miss Lake, Mrs. Bremskamer's appointment for hair and hand-care filled in the time between with a shower of personal questions, all cries from the heart, murdered and directed at Aunt Millie exclusively. And I used the opportunity to bundle myself neatly and run up to my room for a telephone talk with Allan.

I was lucky too. Allan was in the office slack and not busy, and I found somewhere on the extensive strip of coast that was to become a golf yard. And hadn't Allan and Dad met at—with him.

The result was a talk that was both long and satisfactory, and full of plans of how we'd meet—an hour together in the evening. For a short drive perhaps, if it didn't rain again.

"Your father thinks he wants to work after dinner," Allan informed me. "But I have the sneaking feeling he'll call it if it'll only cause the beautious Gala to come down—for dinner."

The allusion to Gala made me scarlet.

I had totally forgotten her over the occurrences of the day and, with her as a passing find of the gill helpin.

"All right. I'll do that little thing. I'll ask her for dinner, this very minute," I told Allan before hanging up.

But I didn't have the chance to carry out my intention. Just as I was starting to dial Gala's number —a silly thing to do really, when we lived under the same roof— Nettie knocked and announced another visitor.

"Mrs. Avery calling Miss Kay," she said with a wry face.

Stella Avery had been shown in to the formal reception room beside the front door—a sure sign that Nettie considered the call an intrusion and took for granted it would be short.

Aunt Millie was with her when I came down, sitting stiffly erect under a bombardment of affluent whispers, coming from farther than an ordinary voice, but meant to convey the impression of secret confidences and dire warnings.

The moment I entered, these doubtful attentions were transferred to me.

Practically flinging herself upon me, Stella Avery flooded me with assurances of her "sympathy" in my "dreadful ordeal", and thinks of valuable discoveries she could make.

"Tell me, tell me, both of you!" she urged, fondling Aunt Millie's arm in her bliss. "What really happened? What did you see in that dreadful house?"

"A dead man", I said calmly. "That was all there was no light, you know".

"Oh, yes, yes! But someone told me you heard—a scream. And I thought—perhaps, if I didn't ring, suspended in an expectant pitch.

At first I couldn't imagine what had told her. Then I concluded it must have been Conley Forrestall, via his wife or daughter.

"You'll have to excuse me, Mrs. Avery", I said briefly and coldly.

"But—no dice. Finding the body doesn't give a girl a claim to a murder detection".

She glared at me venomously and I was preparing myself for an answering insult, topping mine. But it came from—

The venom gave way to sly cunning. "Why, Miss Kay, are you shield her?"

"Why not you best from my business? Why do you wait until she's done you dirt?"

"I don't know of whom you are speaking", I assured her curly.

Stella Avery let her head drop, before collapsed significantly. "She had a better chance!" I let it she has a key to every door of that house and has been using it for her unspeakable purposes all along. Neighbors, my hind won't even be a cook by interfere with that. And poor Professor Stoddard—you don't have had enough of the lot. But mark my words: if a man like him tried to break him a walk, it wasn't for himself. She made him do it. For her. . . . She was scared young Burton might come back, and wanted to safeguard herself by stealing what she could. Heaven knows why she murdered Mr. Burton—I'm sure she did. Perhaps he didn't want to do it after all. Perhaps—

I had had enough. And so had Aunt Millie. We exchanged a look and got up, in unison.

"I wish, you wouldn't make my visit and the recipients of all your suspicions, Mrs. Avery". I cut into her ugly tirade icily. "It really puts too much responsibility on us. The proper person to confide in is Inspector Petingell. Will you come with me, to his office, please?"

She got to her feet instantly. "Inspector Petingell's office? But —I have no desire of getting down town to headquarters—"

"Inspector Petingell's Inspector's office is here, in the house. This way, please".

I coolly grasped her arm and steered her diagonally across the hall, with Aunt Millie grin-faced but enjoying herself, following close behind, to prevent a possible contemplated escape.

"But—I don't want to—I have only been telling you what I thought", Mrs. Avery persisted in sickly voice.

I merely smiled at her in answer, kept a firm grip on her arm and knocked on the drawing-room door.

"Please tell the Inspector Mrs. Avery is here and wishes to see him", I said quietly when Sergeant Flynn's head popped out in response to my knock.

He nodded, said, "Okay", and closed the door.

Some moments later he opened it again. "The Inspector will see you", he said, standing aside to let us enter.

Mrs. Avery apparently ended another interview. Roberts was standing at the middle of the room, twirling a cap in his gloved hands and glowering at the Inspector, who was walking up and down in front of him.

"You can go now, Roberts. But think about what I said and don't leave the ground without a head him all".

And then Roberts passed me, on his way out, with a glance of cold accusing hatred that I shivered inwardly. Obviously, what had I done to him?

I must have lost track of what was happening, over my surprise at the caretaker's behavior, for I came to with a start when the Inspector said, with a dry chuckle: "That's only a door you've starting at, Miss Kay. What you think it was—that you were looking suicide of your father's?"

Aunt Millie had stated our errand meanwhile, it seemed, and I had only to confirm what she said with a nod. Then the Inspector's attention was all for Stella Avery.

"So you think Miss Burton killed the Professor! We-all—thinking of the possibility, have you based on her. "And if you can prove it, I'd say you're good. But—if you can't—" The smile suddenly was wiped out. "Don't you realize you can't go around with that kind of murder chairsay? With no foundation a-tall, excepting you hate her and she's in the way? It's against the law, Mrs. Avery. You can be sued for libel for over doing and be convicted too".

"Why, Archie Wentworth has no right to drag me here—" was burned with the second lashed glance in ten minutes—"I only said what I thought. No one can be sued for thinking".

"Plenty, people have been, for thinking out loud", he assured her. "Anyways it's a good rule to be careful with thoughts, sometimes they're plain dangerous and boomerang".

I don't know what Stella Avery might have answered—something stastly and spiteful, I am sure—but at that instant the door burst open and Allen Forrestall sailed in, followed by the considerably less prepossessing Gala.

As usual, they were the reverse of the appropriate in their dress—Gay wearing a sophisticated printed-linen-and-pique ensemble with a smart, veiled flower toque balanced on her curly crown, and her mother in tailored pale-blue tweed and an immense hats hat—as always, as neatly cool and aloof and Mama was grimishly quaking log.

"My dears! How perfectly thrilling! I came down—after her exuberant progress across the room. "They told me, the Inspector had actually moved in on you! How are you, Inspector Petingell? Is glad you are in charge of this awful murder. I'm sure you are going to clear it up in a hurry, and be all over and Mama was grimishly quaking log.

"Mother! . . . and Amy", haggardly and with an exasperated sigh.

"I'm sorry, Miss Forrestall is" Alice Forrestall's chatter, but it did give her pause enough to discontinue Stella Avery's flow.

Her face fell. "Oh—Stella! You have beaten us to it!" she complained childishly. And then turned right back to me.

"My dear Kay—I may call you Kay, may I not? It hates to bother you at noon—make you repeat what you've told Stella, if you're still holding it back. I'm so curious! My husband only mentioned the bare bones of Mrs as unsatisfactory! They always leave out the most interesting details—"

She stepped close to me, half drawing me into her arms. "Please tell us! Unless it distresses you too much, of course. I wouldn't want to distress you for anything in the world—"

I used the semi-embrace for a questioning glance at the Inspector soundlessly forming with my lips: "What shall I do?"

His twinkle broadened. "Tell her", he signalled back in the same manner.

It was a relief.

I gratify disengaged myself and indicated a chair. "Oh no. I doesn't distress me in the least. I'm getting used to—telling it", I assured her sweetly, in a conscious imitation of her manner. "Please sit down. You too, Amy—I may call you Amy, mayn't I?"

Build Up Your System With Syntona Compound

Be Able to Eat Heartily; To Sleep Soundly; End Dizzy Spells, Nervousness, Headaches, Poor Digestion and Tired, Rundown Feeling.

MR. THOMAS BRONSON

If you feel tired, wornout, and nervous; if bowels are constipated and you suffer with indigestion, gas, headaches, nervousness, and if you have dizzy spells and nerves are on edge as that you cannot get sound, restful sleep—take a short treatment of Dominion Herbal Compound and the chances are that you, too, will find this medicine to be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

Here, for example, is the actual experience of Mr. Thomas Bronson, 122 Strand Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, who said:

"For a long time I suffered with stomach disorders and my entire system was run down. I felt that life was poor and what little I did was a drudgery. I decided to try Syntona Compound, and the result was a daily worry to me. I couldn't bear to get my sleep at night, so I always felt tired out and miserable.

"I have been taking Syntona for one week but I can already say that I feel a lot better. My appetite has improved and I am eating heartier meals without so much heartburn and distress afterwards. My nerves seem to be getting stronger and I seem to have more strength and energy. I sleep soundly, get up tired and fatigued as I did. Also my sleep is restful and restful. I am going on to keep on taking Syntona for a while, because I know it is a good medicine."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

ROCKET-FIRING PLANES DESTROY NAZI DESTROYER

Two Others Damaged by R.C.A.F. Pilots in Bay of Biscay

ASSISTED BY R.A.F.

By LOUIS HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
With R.C.A.F. in Britain, June 8 (CP) — Canadian Typhoon fighters of 402 Victoria Sq., Kingston, Ont. squadron, equipped with rocket-firing aircraft, destroyed one German destroyer and damaged two others in two separate attacks on enemy shipping in the Bay of Biscay last night and early today.

All three ships were attacked on the first attack by the Canadian aircraft, who were supported by cannon-firing Beaufighters of an R.A.F. squadron.

Three Canadian aircraft made a second attack and left one destroyer in flames, enveloped in thick smoke.

The last attack was led by FO. Thomas Hamilton, D.S.O., Montreal, who said he saw a heavy explosion immediately after he had released on one of the ships, all of which, almost, were hit. Pilots reported they had scored hits with their rockets.

The second ship of the flotilla also was emitting smoke when last seen, while the third appeared as destroyed was burning fiercely and later became enveloped in thick black smoke.

By their attacks, which the group air officer commanding said in a congratulatory message was the result of the effort of the Canadians and their R.A.F. escort protected the destroyer from interfering the channel to interfere with the continuing Allied landings.

Among those scoring rocket hits were FOS. D. Hamilton, Montreal, and F. H. Waitman, Orillia, Ont.

Trenton and District.

Police Court.

Trenton, June 8 (Special) — Keith Beckwith and Gerald Ellis were given six months definite and one year indefinite in Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate Lloyd in Trenton police court on Wednesday when they were charged with breaking and entering the White Rose gasoline station on Dundas St. East, on a previous charge of theft from the same garage they were given six months concurrent. County Crown Attorney H. G. Donnan prosecuted.

Ross Hogg, a truck driver of Toronto, who was found in his truck in an intoxicated condition, was fined $40 and $16.50 costs. The constable in charge of the arrest swore that the accused was so intoxicated he was unable to drive the truck and fell asleep over the wheel. A further charge of drunk in charge of a car was withdrawn.

Joseph Cray, charged with two similar offences, was given the same fine, default of payment two months. He paid both fines.

Nine charged with breach of the Liquor Control Act were fined the usual $10 and costs or seven days. One fifteen days as he did not want to pay the fine.

Four were assessed $1 each for breach of the traffic by-law.

Two for discharging firearms within the town limits paid $7.50 each.

John Brown, for leaving the scene of an accident, was fined $27.50, after striking a parked car with the rear of his truck.

Five paid $4.50 each for breach of the traffic by-law.

E. Mabee was fined $50 and costs by breach of Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations. Another wartime case was laid over for a week, at the request of counsel.

At the opening of the court, Magistrate Lloyd called on those present to stand and observe two minutes silent prayer for the success of the invasion.

RAWDON COUNCIL

Rosmaire, June 8—Rawdon township council met at the town hall, Harold, on Monday of this week. Reeve W. J. Tanner presiding and all members present.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: Gerald Sanford Bray $8.00 for one cow killed by dog, on completion of affidavit, and valuation $200 for one inspection; H. C. Martin $22.15, premium on Town Hall and dog tax commissioner; Road voucher No. 5 for $454.60; Assessor $3 for attendance on court of revision and $3.00 for special trip.

The road superintendent was instructed to investigate the approach to Edward Todd's driveway to ascertain exactly the type of bridge that is required. It was decided to charge J. G. Vine $4.00 per hour for use of tractor when used for moving buildings.

The Council and assessors were sworn as a Court of Revision and reverted to Assessors' Appeals with the following changes in assessment: (1) Albert Leitch 10 acres on land, (2) Albert Twiddy's lowered $200 on land. The Clerk was authorized to correct all clerical errors of omissions.

As many complaints have been received concerning the disposal of garbage along township roads, by Order of Council, offenders will be prosecuted if this is continued.

Extravagant Claims Regarding Invasion Made by Germans

London, June 8 —(CP)— The German High Command asserted today that the Allies had launched an attack in the southeastern corner of Normandy, west of Cherbourg—from their bridgehead between the Orne and Aure rivers—and heavy fighting was in progress with the Germans throwing reserves into counter-attacks.

The Germans also claimed German counter-attacks on the flanks of the beachhead were making progress, however,

It said the Allies had been compelled heavily to surrender stocks of the river, Orne on the eastern flank, and "pushed away from the coast."

To the west, American troops who had gained a foothold north of Carentan slightly more than 20 miles south of Cherbourg, were declared to have suffered "heavy casualties."

The Allies were trying to reinforce their bridgehead, the broadcast attempted to establish no new ones from the Bay of the St. Martin at the northwestern tip of the peninsula, the communique said. This area, it added, already declared to have been turned back by coastal defences.

A German coastal battery sank Allied landing craft, presumably a cruiser, east of the peninsula, the broadcast declared. It claimed that Allied planes, including 30 four-engined bombers, were shot down during the night over the landing areas.

New Regulations Cover Claims Against Government

Ottawa, June 8 — (CP) — New regulations covering claims against the government for damage resulting from personal injury, accidental firing of artillery, small arms and grenades are provided in an Order-in-Council published in the Canadian War Orders and Regulations.

Previously claimants have had no legal right to recover unless they could establish negligence and in most cases the order said, there is no negligence.

It is estimated cost of the proposal, including back claims, will be $97,500 for the year 1944-45.

County Council Repeals By-law Setting Aside $25,000 for Reserve

Hastings County Council at its afternoon session yesterday repealed, by a 21-4 vote a by-law passed at the January session which authorized the setting aside of $25,000, called a Post-War Reserve Fund, to be used after the war for providing necessary replacements of or improvements to public works.

The amount was to be included in county estimates and levied for at the June session.

The bone of contention in the minds of the majority of council was the fact that certain clauses of the by-law called for out and out administration of the fund, or special permission to use it, by the Department of Municipal Affairs.

Introduction of an idea that the fund would be instrumental in the rehabilitation of returning members of the armed services, wakened a patriotic note in the minds of several councillors and the debate gradually turned toward the theme that the setting aside of the fund was for, more or less, the purpose of rehabilitation. Instantly it was assumed, the fund would do this in providing work for returned men, to accomplishing the purpose for which it was being set aside.

Favored Fund

Reeve Rushard, Deloro, favored the building up of a fund when everyone had incomes. The Department, he said, probably had this in mind.

Faith in the county was voiced by Reeve Jr. Lamb, Bancroft, who suggested the setting aside of the fund and its consequent levy, was levying for a surplus. "This county will always have money," he said, "and if we levy for this money, which is going to spend it? Are we saving it for a future council to spend. It is not reasonable to levy for surplus funds."

Shifting of responsibility to the County Council by the government, was charged by Reeve Wm. Tew, Bangor. "The government is looking after the boys now and if they can do this in wartime they can do it afterward", was his opinion.

"This fund was polished out by the late Reeve R. A. Elliott, a man whom we all loved and respected," stated Reeve Wm. West, Sidney. "I wonder what the boys overseas are thinking and if they think we are doing anything for them."

He suggested that public funds, in most minds, are not being spent as wisely as they should be, but favored the setting aside of funds to be invested in bonds and controlled locally by the council. The Department government, he felt, should be the sponsors of all post-war programs.

Reeve Churcher rose to the defence of future councils. "The men who will follow us are your sons and my sons. They are doing a good job over there now and they will do as good a job here when they come back. They will spend this money wisely and well."

Set Aside In Private Life

"The members of this council in private life have set aside funds for the future by using sound business principles, and I urge them to do the same in public life. They are fortifying themselves and this county by the setting aside of funds and our sons will be spending these moneys in all fairness. It is our duty to set aside the money of today for the boys of tomorrow. Let us prove by them that we are not only doing something for them in the present but for the future."

Reeve Rusbard demanded to know if the fund was for relief for the boys or for the public works. "If it is directly for the boys I am in favor of it," he said.

Reeve Chas. Rush, Rungerford, told the questioner that the fund will provide work for returned soldiers. "I am not in favor of the Department controlling this money but we owe it to the boys to make improvements to the county."

Reeve George West, Madoc, reminded council that the amount to be set aside would not be included in the estimates for 1945 if the by-law was repealed.

The Lamb repeal motion was placed before council and carried by the above mentioned vote.

ARRESTED IN TORONTO

A Toronto, June 8—(CP)—Ambrose McConnery, 19 of Oshawa, who police said was a deserter from the United States Air Forces, was arrested last night for Oshawa, Ont., police on charges of robbery with violence.

The charge was laid in connection with an attack on 62-year-old Fred Von Gunsten in his jewelry store at Oshawa Monday.

PRIME MINISTER MAY VISIT FRONT

Does Not Reply to Member When Asked Question In House

London, June 8 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill warned the House of Commons today he was against "over optimism". In the battle of Europe and against Japan, he said, "the things are going to be settled in a ripe."

"Although great dangers lie behind," he declared, "enormous exertions lie before us."

"The stream of news from invasion reporters temporarily deprives Mr. Churchill of one of his chief instrument, one of the roles he likes best—that of being able to give a first hand account of major developments—and he said he did not plan to make any statement on the invasion battles during the day unless something exceptional turns up."

The Prime Minister said that all points which occurred to him had been fully dealt with in the excellent report furnished by our able and upright press.

"If this is the last time I speak to the House before the weekend," he added, "I earnestly hope that when the members go to their constituencies they will not only maintain morale so far as that is necessary but will also give strong warnings against over-optimism."

Mr. Churchill was asked by Sir Joseph Lamb, conservative, for an assurance "that the reason he is not going to make a statement on the immediate future is not that he is going to make a visit to the coast of France."

There was no reply.

Says Initial Stages Of Invasion no Larger Than Attack on Sicily

London, June 8 (AP)—John A. Morris, Associated Press war correspondent, reported from an invasion port today that although "the assault was widely hailed as the largest in history, it actually was larger in its initial phase than the Allied attack on Sicily."

Morris witnessed both the landings in Sicily and in North Africa. "Weather prophets were the worst flops," he said. FWind and a choppy channel almost caused disaster."

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were talking and arguing around the letter box, and Puds Simkins said, Hey what do you say we go and see if Lucky Leroy Shoester is home and get him to bring his basket ball out and have a game or two?

Which we all went to do, and we rang Lucky's doorbell and he came to the door himself, and we asked him and he said, Nothing doing, I'm not in the mood.

Aw G, heck, why not, why'n us fellows said, and Leroy said, I had a fierce disappointment. This year be my unlucky day, it only happens about once a year, he said.

Well why, gosh, what happened? I said, and Lucky Leroy said, We was going to have ice cream for dinner tonight and now we're not going to have it because my mother claimed I assed her back when all I was doing was arguing with her.

Aw, what's that? I said. Worse than that could happen, I said, and Lucky said, Yeah? how could it?

Sounding like a good time to made one up. Which, I did, saying, Well good night, just the other day I was at a stool at the drugstore soda fountain waiting for a strawberry ice cream soda, and the guy had in more than half mixed and just then I started to feel for the money and there was nothing in my pocket but a hole...So I was even closer to eating my ice cream than you were, because yours wasn't even in sight yet, I said, and did Hunt quick made one up, saying, Sure, look what happened to me last Sunday. We had ice cream for dinner and I had my dessert spoonful in my mouth ready and...had to let it drop out again because just then I got the worst news ass I ever felt. So come on out with your basketball, he said.

Which Leroy did, him having pretty near the most fun of all on account of making up his own rules because it was his basket ball, and the boy from the drug store delivered ice cream at his house just a same, proving he probably couldn't be any way but lucky if he tried.

Luftwaffe Paints Planes Same Color As Those of Allies

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

An R. C. A. F. Station in England, June 8 —(CP) Cables: The Luftwaffe threw an element of confusion into the skies over the Northern France battlefield areas today, returning Canadian fighter pilots, by throwing into the aerial battle aircraft painted with black stripes, similar to that on Allied aircraft.

This, said the pilots, was an obvious move to confuse Allied fighter and ground gunners because the Allied planes were painted with the distinctive Zebra-like markings prior to the invasion so friends could be distinguished easily from foe.

The weather now was "very cloudy" over the beachhead, fliers said.

The Canadian fliers ran into only slight opposition from the German Air Force. Pilots on the first morning sorties said they saw only two Focke Wulfs. Flak was light and inaccurate.

Seventy-five horse-drawn artillery guns were reported moving south in the Cherbourg peninsula "but or doctor?" the magazine asked.

Allied aerial blitz on transport had been so successful the Germans were reduced to using horses rather than motorized equipment.

CAEN UNDER ATTACK BY BRITISH, CANADIANS
GERMANS RETREATING FROM ADRIATIC SECTOR

Germans Report Fierce Fighting Raging in the City

American Forces Within 18 Miles of Cherbourg

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9 —(CP)— British and Canadian forces are jointly attacking the German city of Caen, six miles inland, said field dispatches to headquarters today.

Allied troops are battling fierce German armor counter-attacks in Normandy and French paratroops have been dropped to aid the British, Canadian and American forces in the bridgehead battle, headquarters said.

German reports (unsubstantiated by any Allied source) said hand-to-hand fighting was raging in Caen.

Leonard Moseley, London Daily Sketch war correspondent, said in a field dispatch that British and Canadian forces in the bridgehead area made contact yesterday.

Other Berlin broadcasts asserted American troops in the Cherbourg peninsula area were within 18 miles of the key ports of Cherbourg.

American troops are under personal command of Lt.-Gen. Omar Bradley, it was disclosed. Field dispatches said the American have occupied Formigny, 20 miles southeast of Ste. Mere-Eglise on the Caen-Carentan road.

At least 1,600 Nazi prisoners have been taken since the invasion was launched, reports to headquarters said.

Confused fighting continued over the green wheat fields and orchards of Normandy.

The thrust within 18 miles of Cherbourg was reported by the German News Agency. It said the American forces had driven to within 6 miles from Ste. Mere-Eglise to Carentan-Valognes in the direction of Cherbourg.

A German military spokesman asserted yesterday air-borne troops landed between Valognes and Ste. Mere Eglise had linked up with the Allied bridgehead on the east coast of the peninsula.

Berlin broadcasts asserted there was street fighting in the City of Caen on the Orne River, 30 miles southeast of Bayeux, and reported an Allied push toward Carentan, 40 miles west of Caen and 20 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

Today's Allied communique said the Allied bridgehead had been made progress "in all sectors" despite continued reinforcement of German armor and "our build-up continues".

Front dispatches said the battle was developing into a race for supplies, and "it looks as if we are winning". There was a freshening breeze today over the Anglo-English Channel after a hampering overnight calm.

The Germans rolled up more tanks, dropped parachute troops, and sent more supplies charging to the front behind horses.

Fighting continued on all beaches and by-passed strong points of enemy resistance were being steadily reduced," said invasion communique No. 1.

It was announced that ten German divisions now are in action in Normandy. Earlier broadcasts have asserted between 18 and 20 British, American and Canadian divisions have been landed.

As confused fighting continued over the green wheat-fields and orchards of Normandy, Berlin broadcasts asserted American troops in the Cherbourg peninsula area were within 18 miles of the big port of Cherbourg.

Invasion Vehicles Able to Travel Through Water

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9—(AP)—Every Allied vehicle which landed on the invasion coast was equipped to travel through water under its own power and reach the beaches ready to fight.

Headquarters said last night the job began when Allied military commanders concluded they might have to get their tanks, armored cars and other fighting vehicles ashore without the use of ports. The whole of Britain's sheer rolling stock capacity was required for three months to get the job done.

Engineers began as early as the Dieppe raid Aug. 19, 1942, in which Canadian forces played the major role.

Huns Have Nothing Like Allied Armor Say Frenchmen

By CHRISTOPHER BUCKLEY
Distributed by The Canadian Press

With Allied Forces in Normandy, June 9—(Delayed)—Standing this afternoon beside a group of citizens of Bayeux as tanks, guns, and infantry rolled past, Gen. de Gaulle's representative in the City of Caen and other Allied equipment rolled through the town I found the General commanding gratifying. It can be expressed in the single sentence:

"The Germans have nothing like this."

They were quite clear that the Germans had never mustered and never could muster the strength in armored vehicles which they saw before them. I think they were impressed by the evidence of the sheer quantitative strength which they saw passing before them.

The Germans had told us, seemed desperate for vehicles of one sort of another.

Find No Trace of Concrete Defences 12 Feet Thick of Which Hun Boasted

Roger Greene was one of the first war correspondents to hit the beach in the invasion of France. Under heavy fire, a 60-pound pack on his back and a portable typewriter in hand, he waded 40 yards to shore 48 minutes after zero hour.

Several men were killed on the beach within an area's length of Greene, and his knapsack was soaked with the blood of a fatally wounded man beside him.

With the Canadian Forces, June 8 — (Delayed) — As far as we could see after advancing five miles inland, Hitler's vaunted "Atlantic Wall" is a myth. The thinner belt of steel, the sand-bag and crumbling old brick wall, two feet thick, along an apple orchard where I am sitting deep in the grass writing this story, will be found on a 20-mile front 500 yards away is intense. The Heinies seem to have our range, and we will be sent on to it.

Aside from scattered pillboxes, barbed wire and slit trenches, the German static defences so far have been practically nil, and in the matter of concrete fortifications the first thick which the Germans had boasted they had erected along the coast.

Three-Hour Tank Battle Prevents Nazis Penetrating the Perimeter

TAKE 600 PRISONERS

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Forces in France, June 8, (Delayed). — (CP-Cable)—In a slugging match, with tanks shooting up each other from 200 yards and less and infantry battling over fields and through woods alongside tanks, the biggest armored battle on the front so far is raging.

Several more German pockets within the beachhead have been wiped out by concentrated attacks by artillery and naval guns are being made ready for others.

British warships are being use the field guns as the combined operations team move to a new climax while guns flame and roar along the Juno beach.

Guerrilla War.

Meanwhile, guerrilla war is going on in some towns and farms in the beachhead as scores lurking snipers are found and driven from house to house.

Little towns are in a turmoil as the Canadians go to work with machine-guns, grenades and rifles.

It is a jumpy business roving through the battle area.

Earlier the Canadians met several German counter-attacks with tanks almost at nothing the perimeter. These were sent pouring in in 25 tanks at a time and Canadian infantry, dug in deep on the slopes of the ridges, broke off with strong support from our own tanks and massed artillery.

But in at least one sector front dispatches indicated the Germans had received some check. A dispatch from Ross Munro, chief Canadian Press war correspondent, dated June 8, said: "Today, early today, told of a three-hour tank battle between tanks and infantry "prevented the German tank group from actually penetrating the perimeter."

The dispatch said the Canadians "bracing themselves for a German counter-attack with 25 tanks" that in the preceding 24 hours they had met several German armored attacks, many thrusts with the Nazis sending in 25 tanks at a time. The engagement pushed the total fallen Bayeux where front dispatches said "the fiercest tank battles with desperate hand-to-hand fighting."

Canadian 3rd Division In Action in France

Ottawa, June 9 (CP)—Defence of fallen Bayeux, Headquarters announced today the Canadian 3rd division is taking part in the invasion of France.

A headquarters spokesman said that a cable from Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces authorized announcement of the bare fact that the 3rd division was in action.

German sources had already reported the presence of this division, which is participating in its first operation of the war.

First word of the 3rd's activities was reported last night by the German-controlled Calais radio which said it was among the infantry engaged in the Normandy fighting. The report said the division was fighting along with units of the British 2nd division at Arromanches on the coast northeast ers in London.

Defence headquarters have not confirmed or even commented on another German report that the Canadian 2nd division is also in the action. When the German reports were put up to a Stuart spokesman last night he said no units of the Canadian force could be identified as that time.

In the first action of the 3rd division—one of the best-trained Canadian formations—the Canadians may be led by Maj.-Gen. R. F. L. Keller, 42, Kelowna, B.C. Specialist seven months ago named him as head of the scrappy 3rd.

The 3rd division was originally formed by Maj.-Gen. Basil Price, 55, Montreal. He now is overseas commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society with headquarters in London.

U.S. BOMBERS BATTER PRIME MUNICH TARGETS

All Bridges op Seine River Between Paris And Sea Knocked Out Says BBC

AUGSBURG ALSO HIT

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 9—(AP) American heavy bombers striking from the south 300 to 750 strong battered prime targets in the Munich area of Southern Germany today, in a new pincers attack on the Nazi war machine co-ordinated with disruptive blows at German communications in France from the west.

The bombers, flying into the Munich area for the second time from Italy, and their escorting fighters, fought through clouds of German fighters to reach their objectives.

Swiss dispatches reported explosives in the Munich and Augsburg areas.

The BBC broadcast said the Allied attack from Britain had destroyed all railway bridges on the Seine river between Paris and the sea.)

Other targets in many Germans attacked were Furio Marghera near Venice, and fighter-bombers hatched at three points inland from the Italian Riviera.

Allied planes of all types struck at German shipping in the Channel and in France.

For the first time since D-Day official reports however, made no mention of Allied air-borne operations.

During operations of the past 24 hours 84 German planes were destroyed in the air and 20 others were accounted for on the ground, it was announced last night at fighters and five bombers.

Weather closed down the scope of the aerial operations supprting the invasion, it was said.

But during the night heavy aircraft of the Canadian Bomber Group attacked rail lines at the Pas De Calais coast and lost at the RO B PLEAD BILLIHo a liey,7,7 railway stations up two nights and occupied Tollo, 7 1-3 miles from the provincial capital of Chieti, and the Italian communique said shelling the advance.

The Adriatic sector was held by Canadian troops during the static weather last winter, following the fall of Ortona, Dec. 27. In the regrouping which followed the major Allied push, the Canadian corps—now out of the line—was reported to join in the 8th Army assault on the Gustav and Hitler lines, Moro river sector.

Invasion Ships So Thick It Seemed Birds Could Walk Across Channel

Written for The Canadian Press by Sub-Lt. Wessley Hicks, R.C.N.V.R.

A United Kingdom Port, June 8 —(Delayed) — (CP Cable) — "The birds must be thinking they can walk across the Channel and head for England. Ahead of us, line abreast, there is a destroyer you could be seen still at their work of tidying up the shipping lanes.

As we moved into the coast at 2 p. m. the hills of northern France appeared dim and hazy, like a picture out of focus. Out from the shore came a group of Canadian minesweepers — H.M.C.S. Nina, Malpeque, Wasaga, Blairmore, Milltown — helping the coast, to sweep the sea lanes clear of mines.

A short time later the corvette H.M.C.S.-Drumheller steamed past us with a cheer.

Looking for a place to dump her convoy, the Prescott then signalled her sister cruiser: "Do you know where the port authorities are?"

The answer came back to us: "No. I'm a stranger here myself."

Then the shore came the rattle of heavy machine-gun fire. Heavy cruisers, standing off the coast, the vessel shuddered and lifted with each broadside.

In close to shore, the waters were literally full of enemy mines. The little minesweepers had done their work well.

Then after 8 p. m., our immediate job completed, we put our own house, Prom Middaz' work, in signal: "How are you enjoying it, Middaz?"

And Lt.-Mndr. D. W. Pirie of Toronto, commander of the Algonquin, replied:—

"Everything fine and sound here."

Allied Troops Roll Forward on Entire Italian Front

Fifth Army Racing Steadily North And Northwest of Rome To Contact Enemy

BRACCIANO AREA TAKEN

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 9. (AP)—German forces guarding the Adriatic sector have started to retreat to avoid encirclement and for the first time since launching their offensive nearly a month ago Allied troops rolled forward today along the entire Italian front.

Striving to maintain close contact with the fleeing enemy, who has shown no disposition as yet to make a determined stand, the Allied 8th Army raced steadily north and northeast from Rome.

They occupied the entire Lake Bracciano area and moved on to capture Capranica, 34 miles north of Rome on the east side of Lake Di Vico, and also 10 miles southeast of the highway junction town of Viterbo.

On the northwest Allied units raciag on from Civitavecchia were reported to be shelling Tarquinia, 38 airline miles from Rome and 10 miles inland from the Tyrrhenian coast.

An Allied spokesman said among prisoners taken in the Lake Bracciano area were Nazis from the 26th Panzer Grenadier, Field Division. Came From Denmark.

That division came to Italy from Denmark, which according to the prisoners, it left only a week ago," said the spokesman. The 26th Panzer Field Division differs from the normal infantry division only in the fact that its prisoners have been the Luftwaffe ground staff, as in the case of the Hermann Goering Panzer Division.

The five-month standstill on the line in the Adriatic sector ended with the Germans starting a withdrawal between the coast and Orecchio, five miles inland. Eighth Army troops moved up two miles and occupied Tollo, 7 1-3 miles from the provincial capital of Chieti, and the Italian communique said shelling the advance.

The Adriatic sector was held by Canadian troops during the static weather last winter, following the fall of Ortona, Dec. 27. In the regrouping which followed the major Allied push, the Canadian corps—now out of the line—was reported to join in the 8th Army assault on the Gustav and Hitler lines, Moro river sector.

TALKED TOO MUCH

Major-General Henry J.F. Miller, who until recently was commanding general of the Ninth Airforce Service Command, was identified by the U.S. War Department as the high ranking officer who was "talked" and sent home by Britain, ending in advance the date of the invasion. Miller was demoted from the rank of a general officer to that of lieutenant-colonel.

SOVIET TROOPS CAPTURE HEIGHT NORTH OF IASI

Position of Great Importance to Russians in All-Out Offensive

MAY OPEN SOON

London, June 9 — (CP) — Moscow announced today that Soviet troops have captured a height of "great importance" north of Iasi in Rumania, where a German radio commentator declared yesterday Russian armored forces had launched an all-out offensive on a wide front.

The broadcast Soviet communique made no mention of a large-scale offensive, but said about 200 Germans were killed and several enemy tanks destroyed as Nazi counter-attacks to restore the captured position were frustrated.

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer
Moscow, June 9 — (AP) — All signs point to an early opening of a counter-offensive by the Red army on the eastern front to match the blows against Hitler on the western front.

The Russian people are avidly following the progress of the Allies in France and Italy.

Moscow last year on three recent trips to the Russian front tend to back the predictions of a renewed Red offensive. Preparations are being made for an attack which should shake Hitler from Russian soil and drive the Nazis back to Berlin. Full confidence, Red Army soldiers are anxious to get into the battle.

TOOLS AT SCENE

Attempts to smash open a 350-lb. safe, that had been removed from the counter of the Uptown Hotel, 316 Front St., were frustrated by police shortly after three o'clock this morning when the safe's contents of the firm was found at the rear of the above premises.

Police investigations revealed robbers had entered the billiard room premises through a cellar door and failing to gain the main floor by way of the basement steps, removed a cold air register to climb to the main floor. The safe that was mounted on casters, was rolled to the basement door and lowered to the cellar where it was subsequently pushed to the outside at the rear of the rooms. A few moments later P. C. Johnson found the safe lying on the ground while on patrol. No signs of the would-be safe-crackers were in evidence however.

Later Sergt. Arnott and P. C. Thompson joined the search when a number of railway tools, presumably stolen from a local Canadian National Railways tool house, were found hidden in a clump of bushes nearby where the safe had been abandoned. Police are satisfied, that the robbers were frustrated in attempts to break open the safe.

The tools that included pinch bars, crow bars, sledge hammers and other heavier types of tools suitable for opening a safe, were taken to the police station and today identified as C.N.R. property. The safe was undamaged and not opened.

ALLIED TROOPS

In the last month troops north of Rome, the Invaders moved nine miles to within three miles of Valmontone. Another advance carried the line to Subiaco, six miles north of Lake Bracciano.

The 5th Army continued with the drive for a continuous front to the Tyrrhenian Sea, and Gen. Mark Clark's troops were reported to have already advanced to the outskirts of Cecina, 12 miles southeast of Leghorn.

Associated with the Canadian Chaplain Commando base in Belleville, Lieut. Hart enlisted in the navy in 1940 and saw 3 special naval operations in the Mediterranean. He was wounded in the thigh in the Dieppe raid, and was invalided home. Later he returned to Canada in charge of a landing craft, and was in charge of the craft that carried the King and Queen aboard the Rhinecliff and Rhinemoor on their visit to Canada. After a course at Halifax was promoted, to his present rank. He is now in command of the H. M. C. S. Rhinecliff.

His wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Hart, resides at 124 Colborne Street, Brantford, Ontario.

Two other district servicemen of the Canadian Chaplain Corps, Belleville's Chaplain Commando base, Lieut. W.O. Hart, of Brantford, and Lieut. Rev. Canon Allan Stanton, was awarded the Order of the British Empire in the new year honors list. They have been stationed at Trenton since the establishment of the Belleville district man to receive recognition was Flying Officer R. J. Hendrick who was killed, who was mentioned in despatches.

Obituary

MRS. SARAH JANE GERSTREX

(Special to The Intelligencer)

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Jane Gerstrex, wife of Mr. Ernest H. Gerstrex, Kingston, who died here, took place from her home, 235 Victoria Street, Kingston, on Saturday afternoon. The service was conducted by the Rev. Royal Dean, B. A. B. D., Kingston, Secretary of St. Luke's Anglican Church. Later the same afternoon interment took place in Belleville Cemetery and the committal prayers were said by the Rev. Canon W. H. Ketchum, Rector of Christ Church.

The bearers here were Messrs. Horace Oliphant, Frank Carter, Stephen Aikman, Howard Platter, Lee Mooney and Ernest (Ted) Gerstrex.

The late Mrs. Gerstrex, who died in Kingston on Monday, June 5th, was born in Belleville, where she attended all her life as well in Kingston. She was a member of Christ Church and was held in high esteem by her many friends.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Ernest E. Gerstrex, Kingston; two sons, Melbourne Gerstrex, East York, and Ernest (Ted) Gerstrex, Kingston; two daughters, Mrs. J. F. Carters Kingston, and Mrs. Leo Mooney, Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. Carrie Webster, Belleville, and Mrs. Ida Hall, Paris, Ontario; one brother, James Reeves, Oshawa.

MRS. EMMA (HAROLD) WHITTAKER

(Wanda Reid—Belleville)

Mrs. Emma Whittaker, widow of John S. Whittaker, and formerly of Belleville, passed away in her sleep at her home, Wasaga Beach, on Tuesday, June 6th.

The late Mrs. Whittaker was born in Belleville, and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Harold. Many years of her life were passed here and for some time it has been her custom to live for a large part of the year at Wasaga Beach and the winters she spent in Belleville and Toronto. During her residence here she attended the Queen Street Methodist Church and old friends, by whom she was highly esteemed, will regret to learn of her passing.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. J. E. Burns (Irene), Toronto; Mrs. W. D. Morris, (Marjorie), Cornwall; one son, Mr. Harry S. Whittaker, Toronto; one sister, Miss Addie Harold, Belleville; two brothers, and a nephew, Mr. Harold Sanders, Belleville.

The body will arrive here this evening and will rest at the Belleville Funeral Home, Campbell Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The funeral which will be private, will take place on Saturday.

Vichy Bans Motoring In Four Departments

London, June 8—(CP)—The German-controlled Vichy radio announced a ban on motor traffic beginning at 3 p.m. today in the departments of Haute-Loire, Cantal, Allier and Puy-de-Dome and said anyone using a motor car or vehicle in that area of Southern France would be shot on sight.

These departments, all west of the Rhone river, stretch generally northeastward from Marseille to ward the Normandy battle area.

Pictou and District

Several P.E.I. Boys Serving on Ships In Invasion Area

Pictou, June 8—With units of the Canadian navy in invasion waters are ships of the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve, it has been officially announced today, and in the complement of these ships are many Canadians, including a number from Prince Edward Island.

Associated with the Canadian navy is the Canadian Merchant Service, which has also been in the invasion waters since the big push began. Among the Canadians serving with the Merchant Service are many from Prince Edward Island.

The Defence Minister added that Canada must be prepared for some bad news, some of which may be "shocking."

In the invasion was given in the address by Defence Minister Ralston in the House of Commons. He said: "Canadian troops have been landed with the assaulting forces on the present stage of the invasion."

Raining Allied Airmen.

Meanwhile, German continued property, supplies by day yesterday—in the Balkans, Balkanized by Allied warplanes.

Despite heavy losses of reinforcements, the Germans are luring any vehicles they can lay their hands on. Allied fliers said they observed armored equipment, supply trucks and even horse-drawn vehicles moving toward the front.

A German broadcast declared "it will be a bitter tank battle of Caen that has not yet reached its climax."

Allied airmen said they went after anything that moved in the battle area. Fighter-bombers and medium bombers attacked roads, railroads and bridges in the Caen area, and the fighters strafed and bombed anything that moved.

Four Flying Weather.

An Air Ministry announcement said poor flying weather appeared to be hampering the Germans, but also the British fighter units met fewer enemy fighters than during the previous night.

British airmen had glimpses of the battle below them as they flew at 15,000 feet. Clouds hid the ground most of the time, but there were breaks in the clouds, and pilots could see the fighting.

Tank Battles Rage Unabated.

German Flyer tanks were reported massing in the Caen area, and another tank battle was under way yesterday. Allied airmen said they saw many burning tanks and wrecked vehicles.

Heavy British Tanks Landed.

German Flyer tanks were reported massing in the Caen area, and another tank battle was under way yesterday. Allied airmen said they saw many burning tanks and wrecked vehicles.

Allied reports said Allied troops had driven as five miles beyond Bayeux, captured two days ago by the British forces in a drive to open the Cherbourg Peninsula to the port and rail communications of Cherbourg's dock facilities—described by the Paris radio as the first Allied objective.

The Germans apparently had built up some of their strongest resistance at Caen. A field dispatch filed Wednesday said: "Caen is dead. "We are within hours, perhaps minutes of taking our first main objective, the town of Caen." The phrase obviously referred to the enemy's dock facilities—described by the Paris radio as the first Allied objective.

Towns Well Alight.

These fliers reported Lisieux and Argentan were "well alight" and that Falaise and Thury-Harcourt were visible around Caen all night.

By noon yesterday, Allied armor was reported within 17,000 metres since the invasion began.

Broadcast reports declared that in a previous attack a great six-ton "factory beast" and a 60-ton tank destroyer, a railroad cut near the important rail junction of Saumur, had been destroyed. The Allied armies, forming an obstacle to movement of German reinforcements from Col.-Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz's army group in Southern France.

From H-hour Tuesday until noon yesterday 289 Allied planes had been shot down—barely one per cent of the number of planes flying in the same period 178 German planes were destroyed.

GERMANS REPORT

Tank Battle Near Bayeux.

Transocean said in Berlin broadcast that fierce liberating forces had made their deepest penetration in the area of the town of Bayeux, inland from the centre of the Normandy invasion coast, in the direction of the road between German and British tanks was in progress four or five miles south-west of Bayeux.

Canadian tank formations are also believed operating in this sector.

Reports from the Canadian sector of Normandy said that German parachutists were being dropped on a small area behind the Allied lines.

The Germans conceded they had been hurled back on the left flank in the Orian fighting, a third of the way across the Cherbourg peninsula, as the Allies brought in reinforcements.

It was important that vital roads in this area, leading to the ping port of Cherbourg, had been denied the German High Command.

Definite reports of progress were meagre at supreme headquarters. It appeared the Allies had reached an interim stage where tired troops were again massing and moving slowly to get their second wind and let supplies pile up. The "waiting" period was described as "only fair," and unloading conditions were "only too good."

Battle of Supply Lines.

The over-all battle now has become a race between the Allies and the Germans in building up their forces. The Germans have the advantage of internal communications, close supply depots all over France, and land mobility.

The Allies had sea control and air superiority—but low hanging cloud today were giving the Germans some protection from the far-

CANADIANS MAKE

Previous dispatches from Munro had reported a rapid extension by the Canadian invasion forces in which dozens Normandy villages and 600 prisoners were taken. Reports from other correspondents with the Canadian forces said the Germans had been identified as taking part in the coastal fortifications and reinforcements today named these vessels:—

Corvettes Prescott and Drummondville, minesweeper Mulgrave, Wasaga, Blairmore, Milton, engaged in sweeping mines from the invasion pathways.

In the air, Canada's bomber and fighter airmen wrote glorious pages in the Dominion's military history. One of their latest feats was an attack yesterday on German destroyers in the Bay of Biscay in which fighter planes left one enemy vessel in flames and damaged two others.

A sober review of the part Canada's ground forces are taking in the invasion was given in the address by Defence Minister Ralston in the House of Commons. He said: "Canadian troops have been landed with the assaulting forces on the present stage of the invasion."

U.S. BOMBERS

Several hundred R.A.F. heavy bombers in daylight rain and thick clouds on the railroad yards at Aulnoye, Busigny and Somain, in the Somme and Pas de Calais areas. Aulnoye and Somain are important railroad centres, and Busigny is a junction point.

Also in daylight, Spitfires and Typhoons attacked the coastal batteries at Le Touquet, Boulogne and Calais, and Mitchell bombers struck at the railroad yards at Abbeville.

Night attacks were carried out by Mosquitoes on the railroad yards at Aulnoye, Busigny and Somain, and by Halifax bombers on the railroad yards at Abbeville.

Fighter-bombers and Mosquitoes attacked the railroad yards at Tergnier, Laon and Hirson, and Mosquitoes struck at the railroad yards at Amiens, Rouen and Serqueux.

Canadian Nurses Were Fully Trained For Invasion Duties

Picton, June 8—That Canadian nurses were fully trained and instructed for duties in connection with the opening of the Second Front was revealed here by Colonel Major Leland Bouchier, M. D., with the R. C. A. M. C. Mrs. C. R. Boulter, here.

I have just been addressing the nurses and telling them what they have to be made as conditions likewise will be considerably changed. Of course, there will be a few changes to make a survey of the situation, trying to find out the best conditions for that each department, as well as each and every Nursing Sister officer, and other ranks would have definite and specific instructions as to what they would have to do, would function, or what their duties would be. Mrs. C. R. Boulter, here.

It has taken quite a while to draw up and settle all details, but I believe that everything has been arranged for, as far as we can look forward. We have been exceedingly busy and a lot of us have worked long hours, but I do not suppose that I have averaged more than five or six hours of sleep for some time, so you can see that it is not only the fighting forces who have to work for the invasion. The opening of the so-called Second front. I might add that Mrs. Boulter drew up provide both for reception and evacuation so as to be ready to receive in any present capacity, stated Dr. Boulter whose work had been in an administrative capacity at a Canadian hospital in England.

essential enemy forces apparently are pushing for a spot to launch a major counter-attack.

The Berlin midnight Paris radio said 30 Allied divisions had landed in Normandy. A Berlin broadcast said: "Allied airborne divisions "in many hundreds" of gliders landed yesterday in the liberal area north of Bayeux.

A Berlin broadcast said Allied troops who occupied Bayeux were advancing against the German resistance toward Carentan, some 24 miles westward and 30 miles west of Caen.

Supreme headquarters disclosed that Allied airborne troops, possibly those in the western area of the invasion front, were in a lateral road, but its location was not revealed.

Allied forces have engaged so far in only a few German motorized divisions—one of them Field Marshal Rommel's 21st Division, beaten in the Libyan desert, in North Africa and later reformed. Ten German divisions have been identified thus far.

Two noted Allied divisions made the first landings, it was disclosed yesterday. The British 50th Northumbrian Division and the United States 1st Infantry Division, it was revealed, have made decisive progress on the fields of France after smashing German counter-attacks.

Three times the two divisions have fought side by side. They did it in the deserts of North Africa and then in the mountains of Sicily.

Wellman's United Church Prepares For 75th Anniversary Ceremonies

Rawdon (Special) — Wellman's United Church members are busy preparing for their 75th anniversary which is being held this month. The choir has been rehearsing for the past few weeks and letters are being forwarded to former residents and church members who now live aside as far afield as California, Alberta and Nova Scotia.

One of the few surviving ministers, Rev. W. H. Clarke, Dauntuin, will be in attendance for the morning service and will preach a sermon on Sunday, church thirty years ago.

At the evening service Rev. Dr. James Semple, chairman of Belleville Presbytery and minister of Bridge Street United Church, will be guest speaker.

The following Tuesday after the anniversary the ladies of the church are planning a "sunset supper" and the program will include a pageant depicting scenes of seventy-five years ago, also a birthday cake ceremony when descendants of those who formed the first congregation will light the candles.

The Wellman's Church had its beginning in the misty past along with the earliest settlers of the Bay of Quinte district. Among the settlers members of the faith was James McCarthy who came to Adolphstown in 1784 and Wm. Losee who journeyed from the Dutch Mission below Brockville and travelled west along Lake Ontario. In 1792 the first Methodist Church was built on the Bay and here Reader — as he was then — delivered his enthusiastic message.

Informal Services

Until churches were built— the services throughout this district were held in barns, farm kitchens and closely settled in the forests.

Saddle bag ministers travelled about from one log cabin to another regardless of cold or stormy weather to visit the most distant settlers, to pray in their cabins, challenge them to higher living and to associate with their neighbors. These ministers followed faintly-marked trails all over Rawdon township and in many places revivals were held. These special meetings resulted in conspicuous living, these people had been converted to the Christian religion in the homeland but they had drifted away because of hardship and isolation in the Canadian bush and very often they had forgotten the true way of living and these revival meetings brought forth much fruit.

In the outdoors worship, flaming pine pitch torches on flat stones at four corners of the clearing, provided light for the services. Logs were laid from the corner of the walls and the ministers pulpit was a stump. Still these pioneers carried on despite difficulties.

A Wesleyan Branch.

The Wellman's Church was of the Wesleyan branch of Methodism and it was a branch of a circuit centred in Stirling. On communion Sunday all members from Wellman's and other points in Rawdon township made their way on foot to Stirling to attend the Rawdon church. This church carried on until 1865 when it was named after Rawdon township which received its name from (Francis Rawdon-Hastings) an Irish baron who became governor-general of India in 1812.

Leg Cabin Church.

The people at Wellman's began to worship in a log school house on the farm of David Mack, just across the road from where the present church stands.

All the old records have been lost but in tracing up past history it was found that the late James Vanderwort had in the efforts to have a suitable church erected for worship. His had several enthusiastic supporters in the person of Robert Clancy, the Totten brothers, David and William Mack, Samuel Mayhew, Edward Dracup, John Morton and others. Mr. Silas McFeeters supplied a large number of timbers and the brick came from a kiln at Ivanhoe.

First Brick Structure.

Wellman's church was the first brick structure in the district as the early settlers were ambitioned to have their sanctuary erected from the best material available even though their own homes were of logs and money in those days were scarce. However God prospered them for their efforts and at a later date a large number of lovely brick homes were built.

R. Clancy First S. S. Teacher.

It is thought that Robert Clancy was the first Sunday School teacher and he served several years. Later on Neal Clancy served in this capacity and just recently his grandson Carleton Clancy who resides on the 4th concession was superintendent of the Sunday school and also served as president of the Centre Hastings District.

Mr. Prescott reviewed Mr. R. Clancy as Sunday School superintendent and faithfully carried out those duties about sixty years ago.

For many years the pioneers felt the urge to worship as necessary church furnishing so Robert Clancy, master of the local singing school, led the music.

Wellman's has had an honored history and many fine men and women have received inspiration and achieved Christian fellowship within its walls and have gone out to spread their influence all over Hastings County and beyond.

No Marriages in the Church.

In all its long history of seventy-five years no marriage ceremony has been performed in this sacred edifice.

Two of the young men of the Wellman's Church have devoted their lives to the ministry, namely Rev. John Totten now at Cavan, Ontario, and Rev. Harry Hoover in the United States.

In those days ministers changed stations about every three years and the only services pastors are Rev. W. H. Clarke, Desoronto, Rev. C. G. Jolin, Bowmanville, Rev. W. E. Beckel, Elgin and the present pastor Rev. T. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D.

Several local preachers namely Calvin Williams, Solomon Deville, S. W. Sills, James Scott and John Hartley served in this capacity and all have gone to their reward.

Presbyterian Attend.

Several Presbyterian families who resided on the sixth and seventh concessions of Rawdon attended Sunday School and church quite regularly at Wellman's, instead of driving many miles to worship at the Presbyterian edifice in Rawdon.

County Council To Take No Action Until After War in Financial Contribution to $400,000 Sanatorium

Hastings County Council unanimously decided at its afternoon session yesterday to "take no action until after the war" in making a contribution to the erection of a proposed $400,000 sanatorium, which will be built in or about the city of Kingston.

Decision to build the structure in Kingston was made at a special meeting held in March in which county and other representatives of the area to be served by the building engaged in spirited debate as to the locale of the sanatorium.

Warden Thomas Fleming and Reeve Dr. S. S. Lumb, Bancroft, the Hastings County delegation, fought strenuously to have the project brought to this city but were outnumbered and their arguments proved of no avail. The area to be served by the institution stretches from Hastings to Leed's County, inclusive.

Many Drop Out.

At this meeting Northumberland and Durham delegates dropped out of the picture, while those in the town of Trenton would have nothing to do with the scheme. Since that time the Prince Edward County Council decided to postpone any financial assistance until after the war. It is believed, however, that other counties in the area have signified their intentions of contributing monetary help immediately.

The original financial set-up of the project was $125,000 to be furnished by the Provincial government; the city of Kingston $50,000, and other centres and municipalities to be assessed equally on equalization or on a per capita basis.

Kingston to Supply $100,000.

However, Kingston has declared that it will supply $100,000 which will reduce to a fairly substantial degree, the amount to be assessed on the remaining centres in the area. If the building is erected immediately, as present plans call for, the fact that Hastings and Prince Edward have postponed action will increase assessments on those centres remaining in the figurative ring.

To explain again, the general committee is of the opinion that further financial assistance will be forthcoming from the Provincial government with a strong possibility of Federal help.

Hastings County's share to the financial pool, had it decided to take immediate action, would have been $55,575 by equalization or $39,389 if the contribution was based on the per capita system. If the city of Kingston had contributed its original quota of $50,000 instead of increasing it to $100,000, the county's share would then have been $45,700 by equalization or by population, $39,000.

186-Bed Capacity.

The sanatorium, which will be of one hundred bed capacity will be placed under construction immediately. Dr. Lumb told council in his report on the matter, several days ago, he stated that maintenance after construction, would be entirely in the hands of the government.

Asked if tuberculosis mortality rate was declining nearly as reported, and naturally there was a widespread of the belief, Dr. Lumb told council, "we are finding more cases. The improved diagnostic methods are finding them earlier and the segregation and sanatoria treatment."

Seven Members Bland.

Representatives of seven out of 22 Hastings County municipalities stood, when Warden Fleming requested that those councillors whose municipalities had patients in various sanatoria, indicate so by rising to their feet. These municipalities averaged two patients taking treatment.

Young People's Union Closes Activities

Rawdon — On May 30th, almost seventy people from Mount Pleasant journeyed to the Lake to see the closing meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Young People's Union, Rev. T. F. Townsend conducted a series of interesting games and Mr. Raymond McConnell and Mr. Alex Hoard were in charge of the bonfire. At dusk all gathered around the fire in a circle and Mrs. Carleton Frith conducted a sing-song with guitar accompaniment. Mrs. Burton Hall read the Scripture lesson, Miss Doris Silas read the Bible lesson and Mr. Sid Demorest was in charge of the devotional. Mrs. Percy Prescott favored Mr. R. Clancy as Sunday School superintendent and faithfully carried out those duties about sixty years ago.

For many years the pioneers felt the urge to worship as necessary church furnishing so Robert Clancy, master of the local singing school, led the music.

Army Engineers Had Toughest Job of Invasion

BY L. S. B. SHAPIRO
(Distributed by Canadian Press)

Somewhere in France, June 9— While Allied forces push into France, the vital heroes of this campaign, assault engineers who cleared the beach fortifications long before our infantry reinforcements, and landing craft, are resting.

"I saw them yesterday. They were weary, their eyes red, grit blackened, nerves frayed — and no wonder. In the sticky, desperate hours they faced greater dangers than the average soldier undergoes in the entire war. To them was given the job of moving into the beach, long in advance of zero hour in order to remove underwater mines and clear a path for assault craft and sweep the beach strips free of mines.

All this had to be done under the eyes of German defenders in their pillboxes and while our naval forces were bombarding the same beaches to help them clear.

"It was the toughest job we have ever had," one of them said as his comrades gathered around and inserted remarks. "Some of our plans went just as rehearsed. Others went to pot in a hurry. For instance, we were a little late getting in and the water was higher than expected. We had to work with water up to our necks, sometimes.

"Then there were snipers. They were nipping us off. As I was working with two blokes on a tough bit of element, suddenly I found myself working alone. My two pals just gurgled and disappeared under water."

MR. CHURCHILL'S QUICK QUIP

London, June 8 — (CP) — A statement in the House of Commons today that the British shipbuilding industry suffered after the last war because German merchant vessels were acquired by English shippers for less than building costs elicited a quick quip from Prime Minister Churchill.

"I am sure that mistakes of that time will not be repeated," he declared. "We shall probably make another set of mistakes."

"LEND A HAND" ON THE FARMS

Every citizen of Ontario must face the unpleasant fact that Canada's stockpile of grains, dairy products and vegetables . . . of which we had a great surplus four years ago . . . is almost exhausted.

For four years, Canada has been a "storehouse of food" for her Allies. She must continue to fulfil heavy obligations to them. But the surpluses in the storehouse are gone. They must be replenished. Otherwise, Canadians on the Fighting Fronts . . . and at home . . . are likely to be faced with the prospect of short food rations.

THIS YEAR the crops on Ontario Farms give promise of the heaviest yields of grain, hay, vegetables and fruit in years.

BUT THEY MUST BE HARVESTED AND SAVED . . . AND THIS IN SPITE OF THE MOST ACUTE SHORTAGE OF FARM WORKERS IN OUR HISTORY.

A Churchill Prophecy

The underground of France has been called to action by the United Nations. It has served well in the years of its operation, despite the awful trials and sufferings to which the people have been exposed under Nazi rule. The French people have endured with a hope that did not fade and they now see the rising of the sun of freedom. On the other side that of the enemy is the dark picture of the people of the nation that, when and if it fails to throw off the incubus of crime and Hitlerism but have allowed themselves to be used by the aggressors for the enslavement of men, women and children of the world. The French underground has been active in sabotage and is now to aid in the liberation of their country—this will be their share in helping the Allies' invasion in spirit of loyal and victorious races. Mr. Churchill was able to speak in words that sound like prophecy and yet they were spoken in a time when the world outlook was, anything but bright. France had disarmed months before. The word Hitler "this evil man, this abortion of hatred and defeat, is resolved on nothing less than the complete wiping out of the French nation as a distinguishable entity its whole life and future." To the French people Mr. Churchill used these sympathetic words, so prophetic of the day when justice arrives.

"Good night then. Sleep to gather strength for the morning, for the morning will come. Brightly will it shine on the brave and true; kindly upon all who suffer for the cause; glorious upon the tombs of heroes—thus will shine the dawn.

"Vive la France! Long live also the forward march of the common people in all the lands toward their just and true inheritance and toward the broader and fuller age."

Britain's great leader of so many gifts knew the spirit of France. That spirit now is playing its part. The mighty national anthem of "The Marseillaise" is ringing in the hearts of the people of France. On the dark night of France that is approaching is to receive the first great blow delivered in the west against the tyranny of Germany.

From Britain, the refuge of so many at various times, where Frenchmen and others have found a home in their exile, have come the British, who are neighbors of the French; Americans, who have a deep love of the French people for their desire for freedom, and Canadians, who have a large French element in their population, to liberate France with the aid of the French to restore her to freedom. Frenchmen through their travail of four years, have earned liberty's restoration and it is worthy of the great price peoples are willing to pay for its possession.

Allied Scientific Superiority

Boasts of secret weapons have been made by the German propagandists but nothing of these has been indicated in reports of the Allied landings in Normandy, France, on Tuesday morning. The Germans had been fruitlessly guessing about the time and place of the invasion to which they gave great deal of attention and at last they pretended to believe that it might be possible that there would not be an invasion and that if this were the case, Germany would regret that she did not have the opportunity to show how she could face such an event. Of course Germany dreads the invasion, she did not want a western front and she had prepared as well as she could to frustrate any invasion. Some of her propagandists threw out hints that Germany had secret weapons to use against any invasion.

But none of them has been seen. So evidently the secret weapon they were thinking of was the ordinary brand of lies. Lies have been the method of Hitler from the start as everyone who recalls the days before Munich and after Munich can remember.

But the Allied Powers have secret weapons and these have been used with great effectiveness against the enemy.

Really Allied scientific gifts have been superior to the Germans' achievements in science. Allied weapons of a secret character have been able to render invaluable aid against the Germans. Anyone can mention some of these which Germany has not been able to solve or to meet with counter measures. On the other hand, everyone recalls how quickly Britons solved the magnetic mine which Germans and produced defence against it.

British, American, Canadian and Russian engineering and scientific achievements have attracted Hitler's Germany has not been able to prove itself equal to the Allied Powers in invention.

Readers have only to run over lists of discoveries and inventions as well as new discoveries in drugs made by scientists of the United Nations to see how much more these have contributed and are contributing to progress than the Germans have ever done.

One-Track Utility

Our favorite hardware store says that a boom in wheelbarrows is one of the encouraging signs of the times. It's a boom which has been growing since people gave up pleasure riding and began to discover the joys of working around one's' home. A years ago a wheelbarrow

A wheelbarrow is a simple piece of equipment: a box with removable sides, a wheel in front, and two shafts. But one can sense the epochal achievement of that simple invention when one first has possessed a single wheel to his use. It's always been a standard part of farm equipment, but now that some 20 million city, suburban and town dwellers are cooperating in the Victory Garden program, the wheelbarrow is coming into its own as an important adjunct to home-centred urban living. It's quite the fun of giving Betsy and Bobbie a ride to the garage when the work's done.

What is a Jitterbug?

(Detroit Free Press)

A Daniel comes to judgment on the jitterbug. Says a lexicon: Los Angeles Superior Court Judge, in awarding damages to a girl for injuries sustained at a jitterbug "dance:"

"The word 'jive' is defined, among other meanings, as a 'crazy person, scheme or idea.' The word 'jitters' means 'extreme nervousness.' This combination, therefore, approaches the description of one witness who said the jitterbug dance was 'crazy' and that the dancers became 'crazy.'"

His Honor gets around. His Honor is observant. His Honor has lived where he sees it. His judgment will be sustained in the Supreme Court of public opinion. To put an older judgment into the case's context, he is suggesting that you don't have to be crazy to cut a rug, but it helps.

Indian Division's Record

Up until the time of the battle of El Alamein in October 1942, one Indian division, the redoubtable Fourth, had suffered 15,000 casualties but had captured and made prisoner over 100,000 Germans and Italians in the Middle East. The "Fighting Fourth" crowned its achievements by capturing the Nazi General von Arnim; and now it is in Italy together with the Eighth Division, says United Kingdom Information Office.

JUST FOLKS

COUNSEL FOR CANDIDATES

My boy, if office you would seek
Acquire a pleasing way to speak,
For if you have a rasping voice
You'll never be the people's choice;
And should you growl in public, the ear
You'll finish sadly in the rear.
For folks who hark to radios
Won't vote for talkers through the nose.

Time was but few could hear or see
The men who would their favourites be.
They read about them in the press;
Disputed of them, more or less,
And oft mistook for common sense
What then, was flowery eloquence.
So fluency, ugly, gaunt and thin
Upon his merits had to win.

But things are different today.
'Tis not so much what statesmen say,
But how they say it. Do they look
Like pictures in a fashion book?
Have they the sort of chin or nose
Which pleases folks at picture shows?
And have they glamor? Will they go
On film and disc and radio?

Get glamor! Glamor, such as can
Attract the moving picture fan.
At work or at your favorite sport
Remember you must make a "short."
And if you are not good to see,
At ballot time you'll beaten be.
Not all the wisdom you enjoy
Will now outrun a glamor boy.

Miss Gwen Lasler has completed her task of presenting an invitation to attend the United Empire Loyalist celebration here this month to President Coolidge and other important people. She is now in Kingston and will return home shortly. A representative of the Intelligencer had a talk with Miss Lasler in Kingston and she said the President and the British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, received her very nicely and were very kind. Dr. Hicks glad to hear that the horse "Pip" had arrived home safely. He enjoyed eating grass on the White House lawn, but he was "naughty" when he "chewed" some vines. Miss Lasler will be tendered a reception on her return home and will represent "Miss Belleville" in the pageant at the time of the celebration.

The Belleville Hospital and Home for Friendless is one of those city's greatest institutions and its existence was inaugurated when a noble band of self-sacrificing women met at the call of that now sainted woman, Mrs. (Dr.) Jacques, for the purpose of formulating a scheme by which the poor, suffering and aged people could be sheltered and fed. The band of women was without cash, but they had faith in the charity of their fellow beings and in that abiding faith they proceeded to rent a small house and their work of mercy was commenced. Overcoming opposition and with unsatisfying labor they "builded better than they knew", and these the original band and those who labor with them have the proud satisfaction now of viewing as a fruit of their labor, the present beautiful Hospital and Home for the Friendless. The corner stone of the structure was laid on Sept. 9th., 1891, by Mrs. Walter Roblin. Gradually as funds permitted, the interior arrangements have been finished and embellished, until there is complete in every detail. The gift of Mr. Bidwell, who died in the hospital some time since, has made the present management to make many needed improvements. When the proposed men's ward is completed it will be called the Stoddart Ward. The rent for patients varies in proportion to the accommodation, up to $7.00 per week, and since October last 146 patients have been cared for. Fourteen patients are now in the hospital. To date the cost of the hospital and home has been over $25,000. The institution if free of debt and has $1,300. in the bank.

Ailments of Stomach and Intestine Aggravate Heart Ailments

A patient consulted the physician because of a severe pain under the breast bone. The patient feared he had heart disease because the pain was severe as it was under the breast bone, and the heart must be greatly enlarged. After careful examination, the physician told the patient that his heart was normal, that it was gas in the stomach that was causing the pressure. To relieve the patient's mind a fluoroscopic test (X-rays) was taken and the patient was able to see by the aid of a mirror and fluid in the form of a meal size (as large as his fist) but underneath the diaphragm and the bloodvessels supplying the heart itself could be partially seen because the pain under breast bone—angina pectoris.

According to the Number, Medical Clinics of North America, Drs. Clarence D. Brown and Ralph H. Dolkart, Northwestern University Medical School, state that coronary occlusion (heart stroke) was formerly called angina pectoris and was accepted as a cause of death. They point out that various ailments of the stomach and intestine or digestive tract cause this pain under the breast bone and a real attack of angina pectoris. Among these ailments are gall bladder inflammation, part of stomach protruding through rent of abdomen into the chest (hernia) and irritation of the bowel (narrow indigestion).

The fact that these ailments may cause heart symptoms should be remembered and also that their treatment is as important as treating the heart itself.

Bending exercises, moderate meals with little fat, and an occasional enema should help control the symptoms caused by the disturbances of the digestive system.

WHO SOLD JOSEPH?

The popular impression is that Joseph was sold into slavery in Egypt by his brethren.

This popular belief is incorrect.

According to Genesis 37, when Joseph's brethren saw him afar off they conspired to kill him.

However, upon the suggestion of Reuben they decided to save his life.

Reuben told the brethren that he would return and return him safe to their father, Joseph was stripped of his coat of many colors and cast into a pit to die.

Then the ten brethren sat down at some distance from the pit and did eat bread. Reuben was absent.

While the brethren were so engaged "a company of Ishmaelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt."

In the meantime Judah suggested to the other brethren that instead of killing their younger brother they should sell him to the Ishmaelites.

Whether the majority agreed to this proposal is not revealed by the Biblical narrative.

However, the suggestion could be accepted and acted upon "there passed by Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver, and they brought Joseph into Egypt."

The Bible statement is clearly that it was the Midianites who kidnapped Joseph from the pit and sold him to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver. The brethren never got the money.

That the Midianites and not Joseph's brethren sold him is made clear by Genesis 37:36-39, which says that Reuben returned into the pit; and behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and he rent his clothes. And he returned unto his brethren, and said: The child is not: and I, whither shall I go?

That it was the Midianites and not his brethren who sold him is borne out by Genesis 40:15, where Joseph in prison tells the chief butler that he was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews."

Joseph's brethren entered somewhat by the fact that Genesis 37: 28 says "Then Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar." This, however, is probably only a telescoped way of saying that the Midianites sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites which would fix Egypt.

The Ishmaelites and Midianites, however, were intermixed, were clearly different peoples.

GRATITUDE

D-DAY was the most critical day of our generation. We are deeply indebted to the press, radio and newsreels which, since the beginning of the invasion, have kept us fully informed as to the movements of the Allied forces.

This, the greatest achievement in the gathering and dissemination of information ever recorded, makes us realize what our men faced when they landed, and more fully understand the depth of our obligation as individuals and organizations in backing up our armed forces.

Our prayers are with all who are participating in the liberation of Europe, and our sympathy goes out to the families of those who have made the supreme sacrifice.

Three to Four Billion Dollars Worth War Equipment for Sale After War

Hon. C. D. Howe Says That Articles Will be Sold in Line With Values and Business Practice

PARTY CREDITS

By FRANK PLANKETT

Ottawa, June 8.—(CP)—Between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 worth of war equipment and supplies may come up for sale when the war is over, Minister Howe told the Commons last night.

With many of their constituents interested in buying jeeps and other items from government war stores members perked up their ears when Mr. Howe introduced a bill to give statutory incorporation to the war assets corporation already in existence by order-in-council.

The corporation will have the job of getting rid of the things the government does not want when the war is over, Mr. Howe gave definite indication he does not plan a summer sale. The articles and materials will be sold in an orderly way and at prices in line with their value and with business practice.

"The practice is to price the material reasonably having in mind the value of similar material newly manufactured," said the Minister.

He also told the House the material would be sold either as surplus or reconditioned machinery. It would not be put on the market in a condition of disrepair.

Warns of Danger of Competition

John P. MacNicol (PC—Toronto Davenport) said he was concerned about the danger of surplus war materials causing competition with new goods and so injuring employment in manufacturing industries, but Mr. Howe gave him only a partial reassurance.

"I would not like members to believe that the sole duty of this disposal corporation will be to prevent surplus material interfering with the manufacturers of this country," he said.

"That will be one duty, but it must be remembered that the surplus material from this war is the property of the people of Canada and must be disposed of in the interests of the people of Canada having due regard to the situation of the manufacturer and the effect on employment."

Birthday Greetings to His Majesty

After starting the day with a motion of birthday greetings to the King and a donation to all Wednesday days for the balance of the session to speed up business, the Commons made rapid progress with items on the order paper.

Mr. Howe's bill advanced through first reading. The annual bill authorizing the Canadian National Railways to borrow money went through second reading, and bills providing for farm credits and service voting in Canada and overseas went through the resolution and 1st reading stages.

On the Farm Credit Bill, which authorizes a partial guarantee to banks on loans made to farmers for development and improvement of their farms and stock, Finance Minister Ilsley said the government hopes it would have the effect of lowering the price of farm machinery.

Several members referred to evidence before a pre-war farm implements inquiry to the effect that the price of machinery was influenced by the costs of implement companies in financing credits to farmers and in collections. They suggested the implements company would be relieved of these costs if farmers financed their purchases through the banks on the five per cent loans contemplated in the Bill.

Direct Voting by Members

The War Service Electors Bill provides for direct voting by members of the forces in Canada and abroad at general elections held during the war or within six months after its ending. It also makes provision for next-of-kin of service personnel who are prisoners of war or interned in neutral countries to vote for the absent men by proxy. Its provisions are based on recommendations of a committee which reviewed the question or a service voting this session.

The naval service bill, which received second reading, was sponsored by Navy Minister Macdonald. The bill is designed to simplify and consolidate the law and regulations relating to the Navy.

The War Today—

Weather's Relation to Invasion, Importance of Cherbourg Port

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

This is a difficult and dangerous stage of the invasion of Cherbourg peninsula.

The airborn Allied forces already landed are getting ahead with their job in Northern-like fashion, but the operation has been handicapped by bad weather. The Allies are not at it see it, as far stated in the initial drive as they would have been with smooth seas and fair skies.

This means, of course, the enemy has gained precious time in getting set for his all-out counter-attack which is in the making. It means the Allies have their work cut out for them to get ready for this crucial onslaught, which Rommel is likely to speed up in view of circumstances.

The first phase of the landing is completed, surprise, Allied headquarters has it. This is the "securing of a foothold and the defeating of the initial German reserves." The invaders now are engaged in the second stage, which is a swelling battle with reserves that are being rushed from neighboring stations. The third phase will be Rommel's major attack.

Handicap of Bad Weather

Right from the start Allied forces have been handicapped by the weather. Troops and supplies have been loaded on the beaches with great difficulty because of high winds. In short, they should have had a fair spell of weather but instead they got the weather been good.

What has been said most of all is a port through which could be poured the endless forces and the mountains of supplies which are vital for the breaching of Hitler's Atlantic wall. By the same token the main defences of that Atlantic wall are not, as a rule, on the beach, they think, along the shore. They are well inland and the Allied high command has said they are formidable.

Importance of Cherbourg

The great port of Cherbourg—one of the world's best—would be a godsend to the Allies right now—and the signs are they are aiming at its early capture.

Here, of course, the element of time is a big way. The Allies will have to move fast in order to get set for the Nazi attack. They will come as soon as Rommel can figure out just what he's up to and what he thinks are their advantages that he's bedeviled by the fact that the Allies are not able of flinging armies ashore elsewhere. He dare not concentrate all his strength for anything like it in any one point under such conditions.

Canadians Gain Solid Ground, Push Forward in Invasion

Col. Ralston Tells Commons

Casualties "Moderate," Says Ralston, Who Warns Against Over-Optimism

Ottawa, June 8 (CP)—The Commons yesterday received with noisy cheers thumping a report that Canadian invasion forces were as far forward as any other Allied landing troops and then sat in sober silence to hear of heavy fighting but not unidentified some in which casualties might be considerable.

Defence Minister Ralston, outlining the general situation, said reports showed that good progress was being made with casualties "moderate."

He added that the most precarious phase of the operation was passed and "the outstanding fact is that they (the Canadians) have gained solid ground and are pushing forward."

Then he warned against "being lulled into a sense of false security because the first vital phase has succeeded more quickly and with less cost than we dared expect."

He added: "We must always be prepared for bad news and perhaps shocking news."

Front-Service Praised.

Col. Ralston paid tribute to the work of the news agencies, including The Canadian Press and The Associated Press, and to war correspondents. He said Canada was "extremely well served" by war dispatches.

He continued:—

"The press and radio provide such speedy facilities that very soldiers at headquarters have news by way of situational reports or reports from commanders which are earlier in point of time than what is gained from the press or radio."

He said that for this reason he wanted to tell the House there was very little point in his making statements to the House unless there were some details affecting particularly Canadians, because which are not exerted by the government or radio and which we fail might be announced without prejudice to security."

He urged that encouragement be given the men with whom and messages of "unfailing interest" and "our fervent prayers."

London Knows Nothing Of Lt.-Col. Tom Churchill Mentioned by Germans

London, June 9 — (CP) — The German High Command, in its communique broadcast today, claimed that Lt.-Col. Tom Churchill, a British Army officer described as Commandant of the Island of Lussino in the Adriatic, had been taken prisoner. Forth with described Churchill as a nephew of Prime Minister Churchill.

Maj. Randolph Churchill, son of the Prime Minister, is in Yugoslavia, but he was last reported on the mainland. Nothing was known here about a Tom Churchill.

Last March the German radio reported British Commandos had landed on Lussino — or Lisza Island — and were fighting under "a British general by the name of Churchill."

Aid to Russia 'Linen Shower' Runs June 12-26

Our Russian allies are still in great need and an appeal is again being made to the generosity of Belleville and district residents. This time they are being asked to spare a sheet out of their abundance for the aid of an ally which has borne its full share of the battle and has suffered to a degree which citizens of Belleville cannot begin to realize.

Huge areas of Russia have been fought over, captured and occupied by enemy and in addition to the destruction and devastation of war itself the country has been systematically pillaged by the Germans. The inhabitants have been stripped of the things which we regard the necessities of life; their beddings have been covered by war and we are now being asked to help supply their needs and so assist in relieving their suffering.

Articles Needed.

This time the special is for linens with four particular articles, sheets, pillowcases, towels and blankets being asked for.

It is quite true that the above articles are not now so plentiful, even in Canada, but all can spare something. The citizens of Belleville have responded generously to all appeals in the past and it is expected by the committee in charge of collections in this area that the response will again be generous.

Sponsored by the clothing division of the Canadian Aid To Russia Fund, the collection of linens in Belleville will be under the direction of the local committee of the Canadian Aid to Russia. Service organizations and churches are being asked to co-operate to the fullest extent. Those wishing to volunteer are asked to phone Mrs. Neale at 1475-M or Mrs. A. E. Wonnacott at 2905.

Period for the collection of articles will be the "Linen Shower" will be from June 12 to 26 with Loblaw's Groceteria on Front Street being the collection point. Volunteers will also be needed to assist at the receiving point to accept donations of linens and to distribute tickets on a donated pink coat and many other prizes which will be drawn for at the conclusion of the campaign.

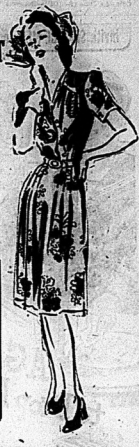
THAT LEADS TO POPULARITY

MANY who were once lonely and friendless, are today popular as a result of the "B.O." horrie that stands between its victims and the good times they long for!



Anyone can offend, because everyone perspires. So play safe! Bathe daily with Lifebuoy—it stops "B.O." Its special purifying lather makes you feel extra clean. And its fresh, invigorating scent vanishes before you're dressed.

Lifebuoy is a grand complexion soap, too! Tests prove that it is actually milder than many so-called beauty soaps.

Albert College Graduating Class Told They Will Need to Make Many Adjustments to Achieve Greatness

Rev. A. E. MacLennan, Of Toronto, Gives Address at Convocation Exercises

AWARDS GIVEN

Reminder that the world was no longer the narrow sphere as known by their forefathers, that they were going out into a world marked with disturbance and a world that must adjustments were needed if they were to achieve greatness, was the gist of the message given to the graduating class of Albert College as they were addressed by Rev. David A. MacLennan, B.A., B.D., LL.D., of Toronto, at their annual convocation exercise, held in Memorial Hall Thursday afternoon.

Speaking with that rare touch of humor which had made him popular as minister of Bloor Street United Memorial Church, Rev. MacLennan instantly won the hearts of the student body as he demonstrated the close knowledge of the college life of students. The speaker also paid tribute to Dr. Rev. Bert Howard Ketchum, B.A., B.D., (Hon.), as Albert College and in the Church.

Adversity Faces Graduates.

Although admitting that there were many difficulties in the new world today, Mr. MacLennan nevertheless felt that adversity was in many cases character building. No one today lives a charmed life, he claimed, while in emphasizing the need for character strength he quoted the ancient Greek proverb that yet 'cannot carve rotten wood.'

The speaker urged students to be patient with those with whom they live, indicating they may not relate to the disadvantages others are hiding. He stressed the need for achieving their lives and a sense of self, reminding them when doing this not to forget their sense of country. "Admittedly Canada is a country of limitations," he said. "But it is your country and it has been bought with a price—a price which is still being paid."

Miss Mary Bunts, Valedictorian.

Miss Mary Bunts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Bunts, recently repatriated from China, was the valedictorian for the graduating class. She emphasized the fact that students of today are graduating at a critical period and urged that they place their destiny in the hands of God. Touching a patriotic note she asked if those on the home front were worthy of the sacrifices

School Inspector And County Council Argue Over Transportation Costs

A quiet spot of Hastings County nestling on the borderline of Tudor and Madoc townships is now the focal point of arguments of education and county government.

The tiny settlement harboring a few souls, is having difficulty in providing school for its eight children of school age.

It's the old story, finances.

Four miles away from this peaceful nook is School Section No. 6, Madoc.

For years children of this Tudor hook have been attending Madoc Township School, so the wise ones say.

This part of Tudor is assessed to the amount of $2,800. One hundred dollars of that lazze go to the Madoc school trustees.

So far, so good.

But, four miles is a long way to walk for young children in order to attend this school at Cooper.

At present, as was stated before, there are eight children of school age. By the end of the year there will be thirteen.

The question, argumentative bone of contention between School Inspector McGuire and Hastings County Council, is providing finances for transportation of those children from home to school.

At present a man driving an assisted Ford is doing the job for $1.50 per day.

The money came from a $140 grant from the Department of Education which must be paid back. Madoc and Madoc Township loosened their purse strings and gave the little settlement $90. But this money is almost gone.

Tudor Township Council says it is Madoc Township's share, School trustees say they will have nothing to do with it.

Madoc Township ratepayers refuse to foot the bill. They, as Inspector McGuire puts it, look on Tudorites as "foreigners."

In his appeal to council for funds the Inspector in a dramatic address told council "We are not dealing with roads and bridges, or other minor things. We are dealing with human lives."

But this did not please the men of the north. They told the Inspector in blunt language that the same situation exists in their townships and they are footing the bills for their transportation.

"I expected co-operation from the township," said the Inspector, "if this is the situation I shall write the Department of Education and tell them that these children cannot be educated."

He asked council for a grant of $160. This will be augmented by a like amount by the Department and the total sum will suffice for transportation costs.

But the members were not really impressed.

They could not see why county funds should be spent on one isolated section of Hastings while other places are being financed by its municipality.

So there the matter stands.

Tudor Council will not pay the $90. It claims it is Madoc Township's responsibility since the union school is in its confines and Madoc collects the school tax.

Let "the boys fight themselves," is the cry of Madoc Township ratepayers and council.

Council will look into the matter before the session closes, but there does not appear to be a ten cent prospect of the Inspector getting his grant.

LETTER RETURNED FROM SALVAGED PLANE

Receipt of letters which have made the round trip from Belleville to Italy and return after being salvaged from the wreckage of a mail plane, seems to be getting a common occurrence. Mrs. E. G. Weeks, 5 Sanford Street, recently received from her grandson Lance Corporal K. A. Butler, a letter which she had written to him some weeks ago. The letter had been aboard a mail plane which crashed in the Mediterranean war zone and was later salvaged. Lance Cpl. Butler went overseas in 1939 with the H. and P.E. but later transferred to the signal corps.

11,900 Acres Contracted For By P.E. Canners

Prince Edward County has 11,-900 acres of peas, corn and tomatoes contracted for this year according to figures released yesterday by a local canner. These include 8,100 acres peas, 2,900 acres corn and 1,000 acres tomatoes.

Acreage contracted in Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Ontario, Durham and Northumberland Counties, is estimated at 27,000 acres, an increase of 3,500 acres over last year.

Growing conditions to date have been almost ideal and should they continue, a record yield can be expected.

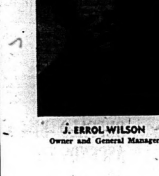
This brings up the problem of labor, already acute. Local canners are of the opinion that it will be necessary to bring in outside help, and if necessary to use some of them in uniform.

Delegrateville Children.

James O. Grey, provincial supervisor, National Salvage Division, yesterday extended thanks of the division to Picton school children, who in their campaign last week collected 27 tons of paper. Arrival of D-Day makes the need decidedly more urgent, said the supervisor who asked for continued support.

North Myitkyina Airfield in Burma Captured by Allies

Kandy, Ceylon, June 3—(CP)—Allied troops have captured the northern end of the North Myitkyina airfield in Burma, and British troops, trying to close the Myitkyina gap to the south, have driven 16 miles southward from Mogaung to the road town of Tingkai, Allied headquarters announced today.



Are of the opinion that it will be necessary to bring in outside help, and if necessary to use some of them in uniform.

Bucky Walters May Help Ruin Cards' Chance for Third Straight Pennant in the National League

Hands Team Three Straight Setbacks to Win Ninth Victory of Year

YANKEES DOWNED

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Leave it to Bucky Walters and the Cincinnati Reds will ruin the St. Louis Cardinals' dreams of a third straight National League pennant. Leave it to the home run and New York Yankees will wind up in the American League standing.

Up to 1944 Walters had beaten St. Louis only 18 times in 42 starts but now he has handed them three straight setbacks by scores of 4-0, 3-0 and 2-1. Not until the ninth game of last night's 21st did the Cincinnati wets the Cards able to break a string of 20 scoreless innings against Walters' effective hurling. Walters thus became the first big league hurler to notch his ninth victory.

Since 1935 the Yankees have been home run kings of the Hastings loop but their weapon has been ineffective against the world champs. In 42 games only 20 Yanks have homered as to 27 by the opposition, the latest being Roy Partee's first round clouter of the season the last of the ninth yesterday to give Boston an 8-7 twilight edge.

Washington pulled out of the cellar on George Myatt's triple scoring Johnny Sullivan and Milo Candini in the 11th for a 7-6 mastgh over Philadelphia after the A's had tied with three in the ninth.

Connie Mack's men trailed all the way into the basement when Cleveland batted three hits in the fifth to down the St. Louis Browns, 4-3, in a night game.

Shortstop Eddie Stanky, recently acquired from the Cubs, bowed in as Brooklyn shortstop to lead the Dodgers infield in a double triumph over the Reds, 3-2 and 8-1. Les Webber, who relieved Hal Gregg in the opener and Hugh Casey in the next all the way in the nightcap were the winners.

Bill Voiselle grabbed his sixth victory in 13 starts as the New York Giants shaded Boston, 6-4, and Chicago rioted with eight runs in the second but had to keep pressing to trim Pittsburgh, 13-8.

Veteran Manager Signs With Notts At Record Figure

Maj. Frank Buckley Leaves First Division Club for Third Division Team

$18,000 A YEAR

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 9 (CP) — A lowly football club with a five-figure debt accumulated in a small city in fifth year of the war by signing a 61-year-old football manager at a record figure.

Nottingham County, signifying faith in an unspeakable post-war surge towards sports entertainment, made the first move in basic fealty by obtaining the services of Major Frank Buckley at an estimated annual fee of $18,000 a year, probably the highest ever paid a soccer manager.

The most-talked of football deal in years brought Buckley, who has staged more outstanding football transfers than any other manager, from the richest club in Britain—Wolverhampton Wanderers—to a team which in the last peacetime season finished halfway down the Third Division table.

Buckley, who signed with Notts after, according to a Wolverhampton statement, "earnest and persistent requests for release" from a life contract which annually netted him $6,750, will tackle a job he always relished in attempting to put Notts County to the post-war First Division.

"I ever I leave Wolverhampton," he once said, "it will be to start at the bottom somewhere else with my ambitions—and the money to pay for them.

Developed Youngsters

One-time $18-a-week footballer, Buckley during his 18 years management-ship at Wolverhampton built his club from obscurity and enriched its coffers by $675,000 in transfer fees through the sale of players he had developed. One of his biggest transactions was the purchase of Ryn Jones to Arsenal Gunners for approximately $6,000.

Of the "strong, silent" type, Buckley always has sought by backing talent rather than purchase the ready-made article. During the war, with many first-string footballers abroad in the services, he has rallied almost entirely on youngsters for Wolverhampton, which during the winter made such a residence showing in the wartime Southern League North.

Buckley once attempted to procure "bigger and better" players through the medium of "grand capacities." The treatment, however, failed to win what some fans called the "Grand Final" of 1939 when Portsmouth downed the Wolves 4-1 at Wembley.

Buckley rose to managerial duties from the professional ranks. He played for Aston Villa, Birmingham and Derby County and was capped in 1914 as centre-half for England against Ireland. When a Derby team member. Prior to his term at Wolverhampton, he was manager of Blackpool for four years and Norwich City one season.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, June 9—(CP)—With the big slice that federal and provincial taxes are taking out of the betting loot at the race tracks these days, horse and more loose money is being turned in the way of the bookmakers. That's the opinion floating around the ovals, and it's a logical one.

When nearly a quarter of all money bet is going over on the taxed, that cuts into the eventual winnings of any lucky punter. But with the bookies, who bilkery permits without benefit of taxation, there's a chance to get a little more of your money back.

All of which has stirred up no end of discussion about the problem, with the suggestion that the entire system, from the "legalized" take and placed on a firm foundation with licenses and taxes and all the other impediments of an established business.

Bas (Montreal Star) O'Mears suggests there is little hope of any better take being along those lines for years to come, adding that he thinks the bookie would welcome such a change, since it would allow them to come out in the open instead of operating on their present furtive methods.

Strictly Ersatz:

Baseballs aren't any too easy to get these days, which makes a recent incident in the Vancouver Senior League a minor tragedy. During a game between arrows and St. Regis, the batter sent a high infield pop fly into the shortstop's campsite under. But when still four or five feet above the fielder's head, the disintegrated, sending its cover like a snake its skin, and the ball got safe.

Incidentally:

The R. C. M. P. have taken over duties testing of race horses at Vancouver tracks this summer as a result of representations by the B. C. J. A. There had been no complaint by anyone else under the old system, but with it in the hands of the police, members fear probably will feel more at ease . . . Sheppertson, Frank Schebler's lanky hurler, will carry 142 pounds in his next start in the little Saratoga A Dufferin Saturday. And everyone is waiting to see how he will make out with the added impost. P. F. Pitzgerald in the Toronto Telegram predicts he weigh won't stop the big fellow, but that when he finally is beaten it will be the accidents of handicaps in the racing game that do the trick . . .

BUFFALO BISONS ASCENDS TO TOP OF INT. LEAGUE

Hold Half-Game Margin Over Jersey City, Who Led for Week.

LEAFS SPLIT

(By The Associated Press)

For the sixth time in the weeks, a new team occupies first place in the tightest international league in years, as Buffalo Bisons having a half-game lead over Jersey City. Miller record when defeated twice by Montreal, last night, 8-2, and 6-5.

Outfielders Walter Chipple and Elmer (Red) Durrett were the local heroes. Chipple batting a home run and driving in three runs in the opener and Durrett getting three for three, scoring twice, batting in a run and stealing a base in the nightcap.

Newark and Toronto divided their double-header. Alex Mustakis blanking the Bears in the opener for the Leafs, 6-0, and Floyd Bevens winning the afternmath for Newark in 11 innings, 5-4. Bevens hurled scoreless ball for eight innings, but Toronto tied the score in the ninth with a four-run rally. Joe Dwyer's single in the extra frame scored the winning run.

Buffalo won a slugfest from Baltimore Orioles, 12-8, though out-hit, 16-12. Cuttaridge hit his seventh homer for the Bisons, and Blas Monaco hit three safeties. Orlando Monaco also hit three singles. Rochester Red Wings, behind air-tight pitching by veteran Kemp Wicker, defeated Syracuse Chiefs, 5-2.

INFANTRYMEN GRAB BASKETBALL TITLE

Somewhere in England (CP) — An infantry reinforcement unit defeated a mid-air-aircraft factory 62-30 in a two-game basketball series billed as for the Canadian Army (U.K.) championship. Both winners took the first game 34-32 but dropped the second 37-28. Scoring powerhouse of the series was Pte. Ken Wheeler of Edmonton, Alta., who counted 25 points for the losers. Pte. Sam Brandes of Toronto, led the winners with 17 points.

Northern Team Takes Garrison 9-6 While Marines Take Sprafford 5-1

HUNTER HURLS WELL

Tweed and Stephens Adamson Marines were the opposing ends of a twin bill in the City Softball League last night, the Marines beating the Columbia Squire kids and Tweed trouncing the local Garrison. George Leonard pitched route to their first win in four starts, winning 9 to 6 decision. Jim Hunter knocked in nine Kiddie runs with the last frame coming 8-1 to put the Marines well to the fore as league leaders with three wins without a loss. Incidentally Hunter is the first pitcher in the league to win his initial two starts this season. The C.M.H. Philadelphia" are second with two wins in as many starts. Incidentally, Hunter fired a one-hitter against the Squires.

Baseball In England

Admitting that the speed of the game is fascinating, the Times of London, opening its famous "last" editorial to baseball, voices in a semi-humorous, semi-serious tone a fear the British National Game of time might supplant cricket in the public mind, if the British sport is not brightened up.

Commenting on the report that baseball equipment had been issued to British units in the Middle East to meet the ever-increasing interest in the game, the Times says:

The first reaction to the news will be that of gladness over another point of friendly contact between the two armies. That is the rational and pleasant view. There may be some prophets of evil to take another.

They may declare that this is the writing on the wall, that since the authorities in London think it opportune to have their game brightened by 'stunts', cricket is in the weakened condition of public opinion and found wanting; that to a taste vitiated by ice bowling and greyhound racing, the speed of baseball will make an appeal with which the leisureness of cricket cannot compete.

There is surely no greater fore-cast; there is room for both games and he is but a poor-hearted lover of sport who thinks that it needs a protective wall built around. Baseball, though superficially it looks simple, is in fact in its subtleties and finer points the summer of cricket to understand.

"It may be that in a few years we shall find," adds: "The Babe Ruth's of baseball, rig in a body to stretch canvas at the deep end of cricinth and write of the game in a language as palpably spirited as it is incomprehensible."

Understands one of the Grand League is owned by 350 stockholders, ranging from Joe O'Neil, softball all star, to the pitcher of the club, down to street car conductors and laborers, who bought in for $50 apiece . . . Don't try to tell members of the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball club they're in an unlucky number . . . When they defeated the Cubs on May 13th it was the 13th game in which they had not made an error . . . something really worth crowing about when you consider that they've played the New York nines by other teams in both the American and National Leagues.

A Good Idea.

Although it was of an abbreviated nature, because of the continuance of a modified track and field meet at the R.C.A.F. station at Mount Hope, Athletic Director Townsend is at least keeping the Junior "Bellefleur" conscious of the fact that track and field events will someday again be continued in inter-collegiate circles. These modified meets are a good idea and will be followed to a certain amount of interest in this section of the school's athletic program.

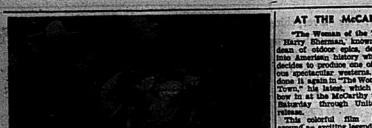
Ruth May be Back Is Pinch-Hitter Before Year is Out

New York, June 9—(AP)— Babe Ruth, Jr., may be back in baseball as a pinch-hitter before the season ends, though the Bambino is entering a hospital today for a knee operation.



Jack Schaefer, a New York hbbal man acting in an advisory capacity to Ruth, said: "The Babe will tell me he could sure hit the pitching he served this year. If this operation fixed up his legs he'll want to get into the game, not as a regular player, but as a pinch-hitter."

"And don't think," Schaefer continued, "the managers aren't interested in him. That's one of the reasons why Ruth's former employers, Dykes of the Chicago White Sox and Clark Griffith, of the Washington Senators."

The sullan of swat said for publication, however, "I haven't given a thought to playing again."

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 606

By SAM GORDON
The Ribbster

Comparisons may be odorous. But some bridge rules are better than others. To learn which is which, it seems logical to compare.

Two standard slam conventions are The Ribbster's and Blackwood. Each starts with four no-trump and to ask for wholesale aces and kings.

The Ribbster's replies are: Five clubs to show no aces; five diamonds, one ace and no king; five hearts, one ace and one king; five spades, one ace and two kings; five no-trump, two aces and three kings; six clubs, two aces and no kings; six diamonds, two aces and one king; six hearts, two aces and two kings; six spades, two aces and three kings.

Blackwood replies are: Five clubs to show no aces; five diamonds, one ace; five hearts, two aces; five spades, one ace and five no-trump, four aces.

In both The Ribbster's and Blackwood, to ask for kings only, bid five no-trump. To which replies are: Six clubs to show no kings; six diamonds, one king; six hearts, two kings; six spades, three kings; six no-trump, four kings.

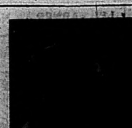
See the difference? As a response of five, Blackwood can show only aces. To show kings, he must always be in a bid of six. The Ribbster's way, he can show kings at a bid of five.

If partner has an ace and not enough kings, he may want to stop at a bid of five. You can do that with The Ribbster's. But by the time you find that out in Blackwood, it is too late. You are already in six.

You can see how that works in a pair of hands like these:

SOUTH
♠Q 9 5 7
♥A Q 7 6
♦A 7
♣K 10 6
NORTH
♠A K J 10 4
♥K 5
♦Q 8 4 2
♣7

After exchanging bids, south says four no-trump. Using Blackwood, north responds with five diamonds to show one ace. But if north has three kings, there is still a slam. So south bids five no-trump.



To this, north responds with six hearts to show two kings. And south bids six spades, which is declared. South could not learn all about the kings in time to stop at five spades.

Using The Ribbster's answers to four no-trump, north bids five spades, to show one ace and two kings. Opponents must have an ace and a king. South learns that in time to bid six five spades.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Woman of the Town" Hazel Sherman, known as the dean of outdoor epics, delves deep into American history, whenever he decides to produce one of his famous spectacular westerns. He has done it again in "The Woman of the Town," his latest, which is due to how hi at the McCarthy theatre on Saturday through United Artists release.

This colorful film is written around an exciting legend in the life of William Barclay Masterson, known to his friends as "Bat." Bat was born in Iroquois County in 1853 and died in New York City in 1921. In historical records he is mentioned as the hero of "Dobe Walls," Here 28 men and one white woman held off several hundred Indian attackers. According to those fighting for their lives at the time, Bat, who was 16 years old, saved the party by his dead-eye shooting.

"The Woman of the Town" is a romantic visual account of Bat's experience as Marshal of Dodge City, in Kansas, in 1878 where he became known as one of the hardest shooting men ever to carry a six-gun and was famous for the precision with which he eliminated wild outlaws from the territory. At this time he met and fell in love with Dora Hand, a mysterious philanthropist who was also a saloon hostess and entertainer. Dora's outstanding personality, which enabled her to be at one and the same time a thorough churchgoing soul and a glamorous saloon entertainer, captivated Bat's heart, and their strange romance furnishes the theme of "The Woman of the Town."

According to the same historical legend, two of Bat's famous guns are still buried in the grave of Dora Hand, in the well-known cemetery near Dodge City.

Richard Dix receives credit for urging Masterson to drop his gunslinging and adopt a career as a candidate to become a newspaper man. Just before he was murdered he received a gun battle in which Bat and King Kennedy were involved. Kennedy managed through family influence to get him a job on a New York City daily.

Using The Ribbster's answers to four no-trump, north bids five spades, to show one ace and two kings. Opponents must have an ace and a king. South learns that in time to bid six five spades.

AT THE BELLE

"THE CROSS OF LORRAINE"

Jean Pierre Aumont, who plays Paul Dupray in M-G-M's "The Cross of Lorraine," now at the Belle Theatre, is a native Frenchman. Before the war he was one of France's leading actors. When war was declared he joined the tank corps and was awarded the Croix de Guerre for bravery in action. When France fell he made his escape to this country and appeared on the stage with Katherine Cornell. He enlisted with the Fighting French shortly after completing his first American film "Assignment to Brittany." "The Cross of Lorraine" is his last picture for the duration. He rejoined the forces of General deGaulle immediately on completion of the film.

"THE FALCON OUT WEST"

A clever killer commits two murders and plans a third before being brought to justice in RKO Radio's "The Falcon Out West" eighth in the series of popular detective thrillers.

Once again Tom Conway plays the suave, super-sleuth. Barbara Hale is cast as the girl who wins his affection despite his suspicion that she may be the mysterious criminal whom he is hunting.

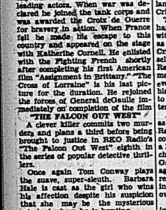
Others in the cast include Carole Gallagher, John Barclay, Ed Carson, Cliff Clark, Lyle Talbot, Don Douglas and many others.

"THE UNINVITED"

One of those spine-tingling melodramas about ghosts, spirits and a haunted house arrives in Paramount's "The Uninvited" next at the Belle Theatre and has as top stars the delightful trio of Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey and Donald Crisp.

The story is a mixture of weird happenings and delightful romance, with Ray Milland and Ruth Hussey as sister and brother and Donald Crisp as grandfather and Gail Russell who falls head over heels for Ray, as who wouldn't? There are many twists along the way, however, before even the slightest semblance of sanity can be attributed to all members of the cast in this tense and exciting story.

A typically English setting is used as the background of "Uninvited." Ray and Ruth attracted by a lovely cottage called Windward House on the cliffs at the ocean's edge, purchase it outright from Donald Crisp. Gail, his granddaughter, protested against the sale for sentimental reasons since her mother while living there, met death in a fall down over the cliff.



It is through this disappearance in a somewhat mystic manner that spirits visit Windward House nightly to haunt all who dare to inhabit the cottage. Through a powerful control of perfect frightening skill and icy blasts, the unseen spirits are ever-present and deadly menacing. Their effect on Miss Russell is most prominent and for that reason, Ray, Ruth and a country doctor, Alan Napier, find it imperative to clear up the mystery.

How they accomplish it is told in one of the most intriguing stories yet brought to the screen. The delicate direction of this Charles Brackett production is by Lewis Allen and in the cast besides the principals already named are Cornelia Otis Skinner, Barbara Everest, Ivan Simpson, Holmes Herbert and Boyd Page.

The Canadian Paramount News, a clever colorfun cartoon, an entertaining sports film and on Saturday matinee the third chapter of "The Phantom" serial will be presented.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 12.

Amy only threw me a glance—the third one this afternoon that would have killed me, if glances had the power to do so—and sat down, a little apart from the rest of us.

I waited till Amy and her mother were seated and then began: "There isn't very much to tell, Mrs. Forrestall. I—just went into the Burton house, a little after half past eight, and—"

That was as far as I got without interruption.

"Yes, yes, my dear. We know you went there. But—why? What made you go into a huge, empty house, late at night, alone, and in the dark? Conley said he didn't know."

Alice Forrestall's eyes glittered in greedy anticipation of I don't know what.

I consulted the Inspector a second time with my eyes, and was told to go on by an imperceptible movement of his head.

"I'd lost a valuable compact during our first visit —when your husband showed us over the house, early in the afternoon—and went to look for it", I told her.

She tittered, and glanced archly at her daughter.

"A compact? How funny! Everyone has been losing compacts yesterday, it seems! Amy among others. Such a lovely one. She just got it, and it was part of a set. Chinese gilt, with the cutest dragon wriggling around on it".

Amy said, "Mother!" again. This time sharply, and full of alarm. But it came too late.

The Inspector's hand had gone into the top drawer of his improvised desk and came out, holding something round and shining.

"Is this it?" he asked with a beatific smile.

"Why—why—how too marvelous! Amy look! Inspector Pettengill has found your compact!" Alice Forrestall simpered and gushed "Why, it's like a miracle! How did it happen, Inspector? How did you get it? Did some honest person find it and bring it—to the police station?"

"Hmm—ayah—a very honest person", he nodded, turning the compact around in his hands. "Know where you lost it, Miss Forrestall?"

Amy had risen to her feet during her mother's raptures and stood staring wide-eyed at the compact, the rouge standing out sharply on her cheeks in her sudden pallor.

"I haven't the least idea", she said coldly.

"Oh?" You don't know where you were yesterday, in the afternoon?"

The Inspector kept playing with the compact—opening it and snapping it shut tossing it into the air and catching it again. I had the feeling he wasn't playing with an inanimate object but with Amy Forrestall's nerves, the way a cat plays with a mouse.

Amy shrugged. "If you wish me to enumerate all the places I've been, I can try. It'll be quite a list, though. I went shopping in about every store on Main Street".

"Hmm, I see. And what did you go shopping for in—the Burton house?" he smiled at her.

Something in the Inspector's manner—or perhaps in Amy's—had momentarily silenced Alice Forrestall. Now she burst out with an uneasy giggle: "Why, Inspector! How silly! Shopping in the Burton house! Whatever do you mean?"

"I mean this compact was found there, ma'am", he told her soberly. "The honest man who brought it to me was my assistant, Sergeant Hatch. What you got to say?" he finished, to Amy.

"Nothing", she told him haughtily.

"Hmm—nothing. Makes it look bad," he mused aloud. "Better come clean. Why did you go there, and with whom?"

Amy stood her ground magnificently. "With no one", she answered the last question first. "I just went there for a rest between errands. I often do".

"Why Amy! Why darling, you never told me!" her mother fluttered excitedly. "Such a splendid idea! So convenient! Just a step and a straddle from Main Street! And sometimes one really doesn't know what to do, waiting for a fitting, or a dentist's appointment—"

"It's convenient all right", the Inspector agreed readily. "What time did you go there—for a rest, Miss Forrestall?"

"Around —half past three or quarter of four", Amy said reluctantly.

"After telephoning your father's office and making sure he was back and—the air was clear?"

"Why, Inspector! What are you driving at?" Alice simply could not be suppressed. "Amy, darling, what is all this? Did your father know you were going to the Burton house, when you didn't even tell me?"

Amy suddenly turned on her mother, her hands clenched into tight fists.

"Please— please shut up, Mother", she said tersely. "Haven't you done enough?"

"Have I —done enough?" The poor woman's bewildered eyes consulted each person in the room separately. "But, darling—I've only asked you a simple question—"

"But not a very convenient one, ma'am. Not half so convenient as the Burton house is for a 'rest'," the Inspector told her pleasantly.

"Why—I don't understand—" Amy's mother complained childishly.

"You wouldn't! You wouldn't 'understand' if your precious Amy was sick to her stomach every morning. You wouldn't understand if the doctor—" Stella suddenly became coarsely vocal. "She was alone in that house! She met no one! If that isn't a laugh—when that house is notorious!"

It was terrible.

I, for one, had completely forgotten the presence of Cliffport's worst scandalmonger, and, I am pretty sure, so had the others. The Inspector concluded.

"Sorry this came out while you were around", he said after a lengthy pause. "You would think—what you do. Your mind is remarkably like a sewer, Mrs. Avery. But—remember what I told you before about libel? That goes for this too. keep a still tongue in your head or, by Godfrey, I'll do something about it. Me, personally!"

His plump hand came down heavily on the table bell Aunt Millie had placed on the desk for his use, as if to substantiate the words. And Sergeant Flynn appeared in the door so quickly he must have been waiting for the sound.

"Take Mrs. Avery to her car, if she has one outside," the Inspector ordered curtly. 'At any rate, see she gets out of the house and stays out. And you better wait in another room till I'm through with your daughter, Mrs. Forrestall. Perhaps Miss Wentworth will be so kind as to keep you company. You stay here, Miss Kay. I need you, for taking notes".

"And now let's get down to brass tacks", he told Amy when the room had been cleared of all but the three of us. "Never mind Miss Kay here. She's my stenog for the duration of this case and knows she mustn't talk or [illegible]. With whom did you have a date in the Burton house?"

"With no one", Amy told him coolly.

"Hmm. Must set a lot of store by the fellow", he commented. "Well, if he's worth it, he'll come forward of his own free will—if he's alive".

"What do you mean?" Outwardly Amy was all haughty disdain, but I could see her knees shaking.

"Oh—only —seems like you was the last one to go in that house, before the Professor was beat to death. So, maybe you had a date with him, and maybe—you killed him".

"Don't be ridiculous. I've told you. I often go there. When I have no place else to go and—and wait. Why shouldn't I? My father is in charge of the estate, and—"

"Then why don't your father know about it?" the Inspector cut into her defence. "And why didn't you let your mother in on what a grand place you'd found—for waiting?"

Amy didn't answer. She stood, silently gnawing her lips and glaring at the Inspector.

"I tell you why you didn't", he went on relentlessly. " 'Cause it wouldn't suited you atall, her using the house too. You didn't go there to wait, excepting to wait for some man you was meeting on the sly. And don't think I won't find out who he is".

"You can't find out what doesn't exist", Amy shrugged arrogantly.

"Aw, come off your high horse!" The Inspector smiled amiably. "I don't like mixing in your private affairs. I'd as lie not. If you have a clear conscience about this here murder, why don't you tell me who the boy friend is, so he'n me can have a nice quiet talk? Most likely do us all good".

"You mean, it would do you good", Amy corrected ironically. "Sorry, but I can't oblige. I met no one".

"Sure, sure! You went from a nice, dry store on Main Street, through the pouring rain to the Inspector's hand pressed the table bell as if by chance. "Now, I just wonder what's no one's name? Flynn, bring Roberts here", he finished, without so much as glancing at the door, when he heard it open.

"Roberts can't tell you any more than I", Amy said defiantly, when Flynn had saluted and gone.

"Can't —or won't?" the Inspector inquired.

She didn't answer, and the room became silent, with the Inspector teetering expectantly in his chair.

I couldn't stand it. I got up and went to Amy. "Please tell him what you know", I begged her under my breath. "He's a decent sort. He won't give you away. And you can rely on me. I'll keep your secret, I promise".

She gave me a strange look, a mixture of surprise, doubt and gratitude, and then shook her head.

"Thanks, but—I have nothing to tell", she said, almost inaudibly.

It was an unexpected glimpse of a different Amy, a girl who was able to feel, to suffer and shield her man. And I was trying desperately to think of some way to win her confidence when Roberts' entrance spoiled everything and changed her back into her usual arrogant self.

The caretaker looked more furtive and shifty than ever as his small eyes went from the Inspector to Amy to me and back to the Inspector again.

"How much did Miss Forrestall pay you, Roberts—for leaving the back door open so she could get in when she pleased?" the Inspector shot at the man without preamble.

"I don't know what you—talking about", Roberts said suddenly, with a stealthy glance at Amy.

"Don't you? Then why did you install a special wire in the small parlor of the rear passage, so it could be lighted without turning on the main switch?"

"I don't know what you talking about", Roberts repeated.

"Quite an electrician, ain't you?" the Inspector pursued his topic calmly. "Pulled the wires through the fireplace and out the cellar window, and from there in a buried pipe all the way across to the garage, so you could connect them with the current there. And for no pay a-tall! Tch, Tch! Must be mighty fond of Miss Forrestall!"

"I don't know nothing 'bout no pipe and no wires", Roberts said stubbornly.

"And of no randyvoos of Miss Forrestall and —er— what's his name?" the Inspector asked.

The trap worked beautifully.

"I don't know no name, and that's God's truth', Roberts said virtuously. "I never so much as seen the feller to reckernize".

"That's all I wanted to know. That there is—a fellow", the Inspector nodded. "But if you don't want me to find it out, why didn't you do a better job on the wires last night, before you turned on the light switch? Should cut 'em and pulled 'em down in the flue, and should picked out the cigarette stubs from the ashes. Two with lipstick and three without, Hatch found".

"Warn't no time", Roberts muttered, with an uncomfortable look toward Amy.

"Warn't any brains, you mean!" she blazed at him. "You—you old fool! Telling on me, after all the money I've given you! Some gratitude you're showing! Some loyalty!"

Roberts' face became ugly under her attack.

"I don't owe you no loyalty. You ain't my boss. I'm a Burton man", he announced. "And I don't owe you no gratitude neither. I done all you paid me for and more. Maybe I shouldn't let you use the house for your monkeyshines. Maybe I got myself in trouble with it, more'n you".

"That'll do, Roberts. You can settle your—er —business differences with Miss Forrestall some other place", the Inspector cut him off sharply.

"Just how long has this been going on? How long have you let Miss Forrestall used the Burton house for a secret meeting place?" asked the Inspector, pressing his inquisition.

"From last fall, offn' on", Roberts reported sullenly. "Sometimes they didn't show up long as a month. She went south with her folks for a spell, and I guess him warn't here all the time neither".

"And you are sure you don't know the young man's name?"

"Cross my heart hope to die", Roberts assured the Inspector. "I never even get a good look at him. They'd allus kinder scoot in, one at a time, through the gate in the back alley by the garage and slick over to the house like greased lightning. Him allus with his collar turned up and his hat pulled down. Couldn't say he was dark or light complected".

The words sent a stab through me, from the top of my head into my toes. They were such an accurate description of Bruce, as I had seen him last Monday night.

Could Amy's secret lover be Bruce? Had he been coming to Cliffport, intermittently, all winter long, to meet her in his own house? And, if he had, had he told Amy about me? Was her knowledge of my transitory marriage the reason for her irrational dislike?

But if all these suppositions were true, why hadn't he told Roberts? Or—was Roberts lying, inventing a mysterious stranger, to shield his master?

"I'm a Burton man", he had said. And Bruce was a Burton, to all people in Cliffport.

I glanceod sideways at Amy, to see her reaction to Roberts' treachery.

She had dropped into an armchair, and was taking it extremely well, I found. There was something very like triumph in her eyes when Roberts assured the Inspector, over and over again, that he didn't know, and wouldn't recognize, her lover.

At last it was over and Roberts left the room.

"Got it all down, Miss Kay?" the Inspector asked laconically.

"Yes", I told him. "Yes, I have. And I think Roberts is a rat. I didn't like him from th e first, but now —I'll see he keeps out of my kitchen".

The Inspector chuckled.

Five Local Boys Are Reported On Invasion Craft

As crew members of H.M.C.M.S. ships which took a leading part in the landing of Allied invasion forces on the coast of France on the morning of June 6th, several Belleville boys are believed to have seen the finest moments of the battle as the troops moved in to the coast. All were members of the Prince Henry or Prince David, both ships which took part in the landing operations, while one other is a crew member aboard the Canadian destroyer Algonquin.

Every member of landing barges from the Prince David is Seaman Jerry Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, 21 Grove Street, while a brother, Ted, is a stoker aboard the same ship.

Aboard the Prince Henry are J. Barnes, son of Mr. Harold Barnes of this city, and AB. Leslie Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cole, 208 George Street. A fifth Belleville boy expected to have been in the action is Mac. Ross, crew member aboard the Algonquin.

WRITER THRILLED AS HE PARACHUTES DOWN INTO FRANCE

Lands at 1 O'clock, Half Hour After First Paratroopers—Is Lost and Meets Paratroop Companions Again

EXCITING INCIDENTS

By LEONARD MOSLEY
Distributed by The Canadian Press

Behind the Atlantic Wall, June 8 (Delayed)—I parachuted into Europe at 1 a.m. today, a half hour after the first paratroopers had landed and 6 1/2 hours before our seaborne forces had their beaches.

The group which went in ahead of the unit with which I jumped was under orders to capture vital bridges before they could be blown up by the Nazis. It was our job to hold them until and forces in the whole area for 100 square miles around to prevent the Nazis from counter-attacking.

I knew the men in my plane well enough to know they realized how grim and tense their task was going to be, but except for a pulsing nerve in a face you got little indication of the conversation, mixed in the formation, pointed for France.

Sees Coast of Normandy

"Hook up your chutes," was the signal from the flight deck. It was 10 minutes to one, when the light snapped off and a hole in the plane was opened. Under it we could see the coast of France below—and a pitch night it was. For risk from the coast defences was spouting anti-aircraft everywhere.

In great globes of red and purple it burst all around our plane as we coasted in and down to the jumping zone. Then we are all madly shuffling down the hole and jumping into space.

As I twisted down I looked for a church I had been told to spy for a landmark. But I came down in an orchard outside a farmhouse and I knew I was hopelessly lost.

I crawled forward through trees, suddenly there was a rip and tear at my jumping frock and I fixing myself to the ground. Machine guns rattled and there were the smashing explosions of hand grenades. I decided to try and get away. I began to run at a crouch. Suddenly there were two more figures coming for me, carrying guns. There was a crash of Sten-gunfire and both men crumpled up not 15 yards from me.

Meets Paratroopers Again

Into the farm field stealthily came five men to challenge me. And it was with our own paratroopers again.

We made our rendezvous at 3 a.m. after two long weary hours of wondering about the Mark-indicted corner, I make my way to the bridge. Here the battle had ceased and both the river and canal spans were in our hands and firmly held by paratroop machine gunners.

We had taken the Nazis by surprise, but they knew what was happening now and we could expect their tanks at any moment.

Hear Bombers Coming

Then at 3.30 a.m. very Allied aircraft behind the Atlantic wall breathed a sigh of relief as he heard the roar of hundreds of bombers coming in slow, lumbers towering ships toward the dropping ground. We watched them in the moonlight and gales of flak unshocking and then diving steeply for the earth.

We are hit by ack-ack catch fire and fly around for three or 4 minutes, a great ball of flame. We heard the crunch of breaking wood as gliders hit the rocks. But it was hard to restrain the impulse to cheer, for out of every glider men were debarking, with jeeps and into-tank guns and field guns, and we knew that scores of Nazi tanks did come we could hold them now.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was making to himself in his favorite chair, saying to ma. What have you got on, a new pair of shoes?

I'd hardly call them that, ma said, and not quite. Well, they're new to me, and in the words of the poet, I'm long on shoes, seen new to me, what care I how old they be? How long have you had them? he said this time without waiting to feel this is the first time I've worn them, ma said, and pop said, Huh? Then they are new?

Not all, ma said, and pop said, Okay I mean then they're not new. Tee gods, you'd better tell me what I do mean, he said.

If you want a strict interpretation, ma said, these are last shoes ma and I got them from Maud Hews, she said, and pop said, How come, didn't they fit her?

Oh yes they fitted her perfectly, ma said. They happened to be one of 3 pairs that she took home from Hoodwink's choose between them in the privacy of her own home far away from the salesman's influence, and she decided to select the other pair so I merely took this pair off her hands at the original price. Well, I'm the brother of returning them and having them credited to her account. You must admit that's not at all the same principal as walking cold bloodedly into a shop and demanding a new pair of shoes, which is something I've fully made up my mind not to do unnecessarily in these war times, at least in the case of a pair of shoes like this. What I mean is, even if Maud had returned them after only a day or two they'd be scratched with all that handling, so Hoodwink would of had to mark the price down as shop worn, so they wouldn't of been new anyway, ma said.

Perhaps I see what you mean, pop said.

CHERBOURG AND CARENTAN TARGETS OF DRIVE
NAZIS FLEE NORTH IN INCREASING DISORDER

Americans Batter Way Toward Two Strategic Points

Canadian, British Forces Stand Firm At Caen Despite Heavy Attacks

5,000 PRISONERS

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 (CP) — American formations battered their way forward in the direction of Cherbourg today and ramrod assaults down southward in a squeeze attack on Carentan, key town guarding the neck of the peninsula at its narrowest point.

British and Canadian armored and infantry forces meanwhile hammered at German armored units in the heaviest tank engagement since the Allied landings in the Caen sector on the eastern flank of the bridgehead.

One German announcement reported fierce fighting in Montebourg, 15 miles from the great port of Cherbourg.

Drive Fans Out

The American drive fanned out from Ste. Mere Eglise, already captured, northward towards Cherbourg, and southeast towards Carentan.

American troops captured Isigny, seven miles northeast of Carentan, today's Allied communique announced.

The Chief communique said British and Canadian forces were standing firm in the Caen area, despite heavy counter-attacks.

German broadcasts asserted 400,000 men were fighting on the Normandy Peninsula, with about 200,000 on each side.

With improving weather, Allied sky fleets Friday night and today stormed at Nazi railways, roads, troop and tank concentrations and positions held behind the battle line, and at airfields in France. Airmen reported Allied shells hammering in Caen, defended by the Nazis as a key point in their protective belt in Normandy.

Supreme Headquarters' ninth communique reported Allied forces were in contact "with strong enemy forces near Conde Sur Seulles," 8 miles southeast of the cathedral town of Bayeux, which fell early in the invasion. Bayeux has been under heavy shelling southwest of Bayeux.

A Berlin broadcast said that "all-led military strength assembled in the Caen-Bayeux area has been thrown in the direction of Cherbourg."

The improved weather led to a resumption of strong Allied air support.

The German high command communique Friday asserted counter-attacks against Tourville, six miles east of Caen, had been repulsed. There was no Allied confirmation of fighting on that side of the river Orne, or inland on the Orne River.

Satisfied With Progress

In the British-Canadian area, the American ground commander, Lt.-Gen. Omar Bradley, told correspondents he was "satisfied" with American progress and expected a German counter-attack shortly in three-division strength.

American air-borne troops and infantrymen have captured more than 5,000 prisoners, half of them Nazi paratroop veterans of Russia and Cassino, seized after they dropped from the skies.

The Allied forces in all have taken more than 5,000 prisoners, Canadian units took more than 600, field dispatches said Friday.

The German Trans-ocean agency claimed 1,500 prisoners had been taken by the Germans and 176 Allied tanks destroyed.

One enemy broadcast said American Canadians in the Carentan area attacked Friday and today with infantry divisions and a tank division, and "new paratroops were landed behind the German lines forcing the Germans to withdraw northward and northwestward.

Resistance Breaks

An official Allied front dispatch, without identifying the exact sector, declared German resistance which had been strong "began to break yesterday afternoon" and the "collapse" was at last in sight. The Germans are having considerable difficulty throwing in reinforcements in-discriminately."

Supreme Headquarters gave no indication of the distances gained toward Cherbourg from St. Mere Eglise, 18 miles from the port, or in the gain to the south toward Carentan.

Berlin admitted some Nazi strongholds of the Atlantic wall had been encircled, but said they were resisting.

"Despite unfavorable weather conditions the disembarkation of further men and materials was uninterrupted," the Allied communique said. There was an overcast sky and humpy sea in the English Channel today.

The improved weather led to a resumption of strong Allied air support.

May Shipping Losses Reach Lowest Point

Washington, June 10 — (AP)—Allied shipping losses from U-boat action in the pre-invasion month of May were "by far the lowest for any month of the war," an Anglo-American statement reported today. At the game time it was noted that a lull in German undersea activity might indicate a possible sign of preparations for a renewed offensive." The joint statement, issued by the Office of War Information, under authority of Prime Minister Churchill, and President Roosevelt, said cargo-ship losses in May were but a fraction of the destruction inflicted on Allied shipping.

Several U-boats are being sent to the bottom every American merchant ship destroyed, the statement noted, whereas "formerly each U-boat accounted for a considerable number of merchant ships before being destroyed."

A hint that new electronic detection devices are contributing to the anti-submarine campaign was given in the statement. It said successful encounters were attributed, not only to the vigorous efforts of the armed forces, but to "the scientific skill which supports them in a brilliant manner.

TWO CANADIAN DESTROYERS TAKE PART IN ATTACK

Intercept Four Nazi Destroyers, one Being Sunk Another Set Afire, Others Hit

FEW CASUALTIES

London, June 10 — (CP) — The exploits of Canadian destroyers that participated in a sharp, successful naval action off the tip of Brittany highlighted today the part Canada's forces are playing in the invasion as a group of ground troops slugged doggedly ahead in Normandy despite fierce German resistance.

The destroyers were the Tribal class Haida and Huron. With six British and Polish destroyers they intercepted four German destroyers apparently bent on attacking the Allied invasion line before dawn Thursday, blowing up one of them, chasing another aground in flames and scoring hits on the two which escaped. Today's Allied communique said the grounded enemy craft later was "attacked with a smouldering wreck."

Freight Off Brittany

This point-blank engagement which cost the Allies damage and a few casualties on one ship, the British destroyer Tetcott — was fought off the Ile de Brehat, north of Ushant Island. The Haida, which last month participated in a similar action, said that cost the Canadian destroyer Athabaskan and the Huron shot down the enemy vessel that was forced ashore. It was beached in flames on the Ile de Brehat.

On land, it was disclosed yesterday, Canadians ground troops had effected a junction with British infantry near Caen and were attacking that vital communications hub like nine miles inland on the Orne River. It also was announced that the Canadian 3rd Division is engaged in the beachhead fighting, action for which men of the division had trained in Niagara Falls. The Germans previously mentioned the Canadians in an attack on action but this remained unconfirmed.

Canadian Infantrymen Avenge Dieppe in D-Day Assault on Normandy

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian Forces In France, June 10—(CP)—Canadian assault infantry, engineers and tank crews avenged Dieppe in their magnificent D-Day attack on a four-mile strip of Normandy coast here.

I spent three hours Thursday walking through German Atlantic Wall defences seeing what the Canadians had to overcome. They crashed this line in a bloody, yet hour battle and won through stern courage, technical skill and careful, long preparation.

Formidable concrete placements were dotted along the stretch of coast covering the beach and approaches with heavy guns and between them were rows of pillboxes well sighted and constructed. There were shelters for troops, command posts, all camouflaged, and observation posts from which German fire could be controlled.

Tunnels ran from one gun position to another, and behind the first rows of concrete gun emplacements and pillboxes were other strongpoints in houses and large buildings which had been fortified with concrete, steel and timber.

The defence strip was about a half mile wide. Behind this coast-related defence system were batteries of 88mms. and 75mm. guns were sighted on the beaches. There also were mortar positions inland which could fire on the beaches.

Hundreds of Obstacles

On the sandy flat beach itself there were hundreds of obstacles to trap landing craft as they came in. Many were uncovered at low tide. First was a row of 12-foot gate-like structures of steel and former Belgian anti-tank fences employed by the Germans in this new role.

They were about 500 yards from the sand dunes where gun positions and emplacements had been built. There was not a solid line of these obstacles as the Germans had intended, however, because allied bombing of the railways in France had slowed up supplies and the enemy was unable to complete this first defence.

Needed Good Navigation

However, there were the about every 50 yards and it took good navigation to avoid them. Many of these obstacles were mined and would have exploded if hit.

Closer in there were what were called hedgerows—four-foot angle iron stuck into the sand, each with an old French mine or fused French shell tied to it. The mines would have exploded if touched and the angle irons were capable of ripping out the bottom of the landing vessels had scraped over them.

There also were the wooden stakes driven deep into the sand with French shells attached as explosives.

Canadian infantry, sappers and tanks sailed in on a rising tide and while many of the beach obstacles were high and dry they had to pass through the gauntlet.

A Terrible Ordeal

It was a terrible ordeal, especially in the heavy sea that was running. Good area could have been blown before they touched the beach. However, the first wave of craft and tanks did get through and infantry and engineers raced down ramps over about 100 yards of open beach swept by machine gun fire and shell fire.

This all was done in broad daylight despite the sea conditions and the necessity of having good observation for the tremendous naval fire that preceded the assault and was directed on a half-mile front through the beach defences.

Into the face of this fire went the infantry in packets next to the navy clearing away obstacles with bangalore torpedoes and bulldozers to enable follow-up craft to come in with some safety. At the top of the beach were lines of barbed wire and while some of this was blown away by the bombardment the infantry had to cut their own gaps through at many points.

Attack Trench Systems

Through the wire the infantry leaped into the dunes and attacked trench systems, pillboxes, gun casements.

POWERFUL FLEETS ATTACK TARGETS IN BATTLE AREA

Airfields in North France Raided To Prevent Building Up Of Nazi Forces

A-A BATTERIES HIT

By GLADWIN HILL
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 11—(AP)—Powerful fleets of Allied heavy, medium and light bombers today blasted targets behind the Normandy battlelines and German airfields in northern France in a thunderous follow up to similar R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. attacks last night.

The day and night blows, which broke a lull in the Allied air activity caused by the weather yesterday, were aimed at keeping the Nazis rail junction 30 miles from Paris, a key troop dispatching point for Normandy.

Bombing enemy targets as close as a mile to the Normandy battlelines, American mediums ducked under an overcast to strike from 2,500 feet, and the tall gunners sil-

Catastrophe Has Befallen German Forces in Italy

Pursuing Troops Of 5th and 8th Armies Unable to Catch up With Retreating Foe

TUSCANIA CAPTURED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 10 — (AP) — The German 14th Army fled northward today with increasing disorder, and the Allied command for the first time declared officially that a "catastrophe" has befallen Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's forces in Italy.

Slashing steadily northward after the retreating foe, the 5th Army captured the ancient town of Tuscania, 13 miles northeast of Tarquinia.

Despite the great speed of Lt.-Gen. Clark's pursuing troops, which have averaged about 18 miles daily since the fall of Rome, an official spokesman declared they are "unable to catch up with any large organized element of Col.-Gen. Herbert von Mackensen's 14th Army which is withdrawing in this area in a completely disorganized state.

The 5th Army also picked up speed in the northward advance near the Adriatic.

Considered a Feat.

Mackensen's flight was considered a feat even by the Nazi 10th Army whose withdrawal has been slower and more orderly, due largely to demolitions, mine fields and the mountainous terrain which made close pursuit by the British 8th Army difficult.

Head of the Tiber river the German 10th Army is robbed of its support of its sister army and now has to provide, out of its own means, tank production and the troops formerly supplied by the Allied advance to the Viterbo area," the spokesman said.

"Here, too, there is considerable disorganization noted and prisoners recently taken include cooks, bottlers, bakers, some no more than 14 years old.

"Losses of the 10th Army continue heavy and the Hermann Goering Division in particular has been rushed to a strength comparable with that which it straggled back from Sicily."

Fanned Out on Broad Front.

With the taking of Tuscania, Tarquinia and Vetralla the 5th Army now has fanned out on a broad front more than 50 miles to the northwest, from Rocca and at the same time has stabbed at least 40 miles north of the capital city in a drive beyond Viterbo, a provincial capital and communications center which was a mediaeval rival to Rome.

The 8th Army captured Montone, 11 miles north of Tivoli and Arcoli, nine miles northeast of Tivoli.

In the Adriatic sector 8th Army troops pushed on to the Pescara to maintain contact with the withdrawing enemy, advancing as much as five miles. The battered towns of Orsogna and Guardiagrele, as well as Miglianico and Filetto, were occupied and the river Foro crossed, front reports.

The German left Guardiagrele Friday night after blowing up bridges in delay occupation.

The continued demoralization of Kesselring's reduced forces was due in a large measure to the Allied air superiority, which destroyed any air force fighter bombers yesterday and more orderly, due largely to smashing 266 motor vehicles and damaging 1,000 others, 20 locomotives and 130 rail cars and knocking out great numbers of horse-drawn vehicles.

Elaborating on the catastrophe which has befallen the German armies in Italy, an official spokesman said the continuous flow of stragglers and deserters from all manner of units "indicating that the only orderly unit encountered in the last few days has been the 15th Division which was sent hastily from Denmark.

Invasion-Springboard Ports On Coastline Like Three-Ringed Circus

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.

A British Port, June 10 (CP) — The invasion-port coastline, along the coastline are like a three-ring circus—something is happening everywhere.

At one pier a LCT (Landing Craft, Tank), its prow open like a whale's mouth, disgorges a column of prisoners. At the next pier a column of tanks and armored vehicles rumbled into another ship.

Navy men, who went through the thick of the assault, are itching to get back. Meanwhile, they watched the loading and swapped yarns about the invasion.

The prisoners—and there are plenty of them—are much like the Germans who had been being installed at a dozen ports. They are the same young lads, many adorned behind horn-rimmed glasses, the same older men, tired and gaunt.

Most of the men were the ilite German troops against whom there were some in the grey of the Luftwaffe, mostly men of 1941 which brought them across said he had been in the battle against them only 10 minutes.

He pointed to the prisoners being marched up the dock. "There's every nationality there," he said. "Russians, Poles, Czechs, Dutch who look like Chinese and Mongols. They're all the same thing.

"I didn't want to fight. We were glad to get off."

Prisoners are Different

The Russian prisoners are different. We had one this trip and we had to keep him by himself or he'd have been murdered.

The officer took us over the LCT and we saw how the Allied assault troops live in the few hours before their first fling themselves against enemy shore. This ship had taken part in sea-borne invasion against North Africa, Sicily, Salerno and Anzio. The officer thought the landing in France was the easiest. He said it wasn't long before the beaches were cleared enough for the crew to have a game of football.

BULLETINS

FOUR NAZI TRAWLERS SUNK

(By ROBERT WILSON, AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10 —(AP)— Light coastal ships of the Royal Navy sank four heavily-armed German trawlers today off the Netherlands coast at a cost of one motor torpedo boat in another of a series of naval clashes, the Admiralty announced.

Four trawlers were engaged southwest of Ijmuiden, and three sent down to the torpedo hits, with the fourth damaged by gunfire and sent heading back for the coast.

Later three more armed trawlers apparently searching for survivors, appeared and one of these was torpedoed and sunk. One British torpedo boat was sunk, but there were only two casualties, the Admiralty said.

RUSSIANS LAUNCH OFFENSIVE SAY FINNS

London, June 10—(CP)—A Finnish communique, quoted by DNB in a Berlin broadcast, said the Russians launched a general offensive supported by heavy artillery barrages and strong tank formations, on the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad yesterday.

"The enemy in the early morning hours of yesterday started a general offensive on the Karelian Isthmus, supported by particularly fierce artillery fire and strong air formations," said the communique quoted by the Germans.

"The attacks, which were launched at various points, were frustrated except for some minor breaches of local importance

"The battle is still in full swing."

Two Elderly Picton Women Lose Lives When Fire Destroys Their Home

Picton, June 10—(Special)—Trapped behind the heavily barricaded doors and windows of their speckled home, Mrs. Rhonna Perry, 80, and Mrs. A. Greene, 70, lost their lives in an early morning fire today, it took a heavy toll of the contents and house that covers nearly half an acre.

Mrs. Owen burned to death in her bed, but it is believed Mrs. Greene suffocated before she could escape from her room.

Mrs. Perry, wealthy widow of the late Thomas Owens, well-known Prince Edward County farmer, had a bustling room when a burning mass of ceiling fell on her bed and she died. It is believed by investigating authorities, that the fire started from a defective wiring in the attic, as there were no fires lighted in the house at the time.

Said to have always entertained fear of fire in her home, Mrs. Owens had heavy glass placed in all windows of the home while at night the doors were heavily barricaded.

Evening Barricaded.

Flames shot into sky from a bedroom window at 2.45 a.m. by Mr. Stanley Pearce, passerby. Racing to the front door, he found it locked and barricaded. Other doors were the same. Windows were heavily screened. Pearce then called Night Constable J. Boyer, and the two tried desperately to effect an entrance to no avail.

Boyer rushed across the street to where Walter Nicholas, Owens handy man lived, after awaking Mrs. Nicholas and Mrs. Nicholas who has been in the Owens service for 40 years, summoned a key and entrance was effected.

By this time fireman had arrived. Downstairs parts of the house were not damaged badly at all but the bedroom and others were driven back by dense clouds of smoke. It is thought Mrs. Perry attempted to mount to the second floor.

Thirty minutes later they crashed through to the bedroom where Mrs. Owens lay. Flames from her body half out of the bed as if she had tried to escape from the fire and smoke. A few minutes later firemen assisted their way to the room of Mrs. Owens. Her body, terribly burned lay in the charred mass of what was formerly her bed. It is believed the burning ceiling fell down on her as she was in a deep sleep or unconscious. Practically all the contents of the room, including a considerable valuable jewelry, were destroyed.

The late Mrs. Owens is a sister of Mr. Edward Pearce, and Mrs. Stanley Pearce. She was born in Birmingham, England. Her companion, Mrs. Greene, was formerly a Miss Allen, and was married a few months ago. Her husband died a month after the marriage.

Constable Boyer suffered severe cuts on the hands, a result of attempting to smash heavily glassed windows with his fists.

Purse of Money Presented To L.C. Percy French

Prankford—A large number of friends from miles around gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy French of Stockdale to welcome home their son, Flight-Sergeant Percy French, home again after four years in the services of the Canadian active army.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Band was present under the leadership of Lieut. W. P. Ketchabaw, and enjoyed a short program of band music and a sing song with everyone taking part. Mr. Ketchabaw spoke a few words of welcome to Earl after which Mr. Ernest Bradshaw read the address of presentation and made the honoree, on behalf of a gift of a purse containing the sum of $301.65.

In a few words Earl expressed his appreciation and thanked all who attended his thanks to the many friends who remembered him at this time.

Lance-Corp. French enlisted on June 29th, 1940, with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, later transferred to the R.C.A.S.C. and the Can Tank Regiment from Quebec. Most of his training was taken at Camp Borden. In June 1941 he went overseas spending about two years in England. In May 1943 he landed in Sicily when it was in the hands of the Axis. He was wounded and ran into Italy where on Jan. 3, 1944 he received the injuries which resulted in the loss of the left leg along with other injuries.

After four months in hospital in Italy he arrived in New York. After a brief stay in hospital in Kingston, Ont. He arrived home about the 12th of May. In his return spoke of "It is grand to be home and the welcome I received overwhelmed me."

On the east flank another Canadian unit found similar obstacles in its way. Here the Canadian force broke into a field fenced, it was said, with barbed wire and studded with mines. Sappers went in under fire to lift the mines and let spectacular soldiers' tanks bounding on the heels of the sappers.

Our troops thrust forward into the enemy and exploited the breakthrough.

Despite the success of this assault was training carried on for months. There was the Dieppe experience, the bombardment program developed by the army and navy to hammer the coast from Ostend to the Somme. The engineers prayed to get specific assignments, had their secret and many methods of clearing beach obstacles, of blasting up concrete emplacements and an old French seawall which ran across some beaches.

The Allied high command took Dieppe as the basis from which to work and built on the experience of that raid two years ago to find an answer to Germany's Atlantic wall defenses.

Tonight only there was no comparison between the beaches which the Allies had to storm and the shoreline in fact with sand dunes stretching for miles in places and above all no heights even inland, no cliffs at all.

At Juno Beach in front of the town was flat but on either side in front of the town were great headlands from which to enfilade fire directed on the beach. Here the Canadians who landed on that mean beach.

Curiously, in a former German headquarters we found a German account of the operations and performance of the soldiers the Nazis were fighting and for a typical German account they had drawn on Saec Scotish private in battledress wearing the balmoral bonnet. Saec Scotish at Dieppe and the clear suggestion was made that the German command had high respect for the Windsor, Ont., unit.

IN MEMORIAM

FISHER. — In ever loving memory of a loving Husband and Father, Robert Henry Fisher, who passed away one year ago today.

Oh, how patient in thy suffering
When no hand could give thee ease,
Only the whisper of the Saviour,
Saw thy pain and gave thee peace.
Sadly missed by wife and Children.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of our father, W. John Anderson, who passed away June 11, 1943. We have only your memory, dear father,
To remember our whole life through
But the sweetness will linger forever
As we treasure the heaps of you.

Several hundred fighters which went out escorting the bombers made daring attacks on the Germans.

Knocked Out Highway

Returning medium bomber crews reported they had knocked out a 1½ mile stretch of highway near Caen, cutting the main road over which the Nazis were pushing ahead with the important ring of getting airfields in operation in captured territory. So far there have been no reports of Allied offensive parties from planes based on the other side of the English Channel.

At intervals or more than an hour medium bombers and fighters passed over Folkestone heading for France today. They were followed by formations of heavy bombers.

Folk song, "Pussy Cat"—Barbara Bonter.

Spinning song, Kilmenrich—Bob Street.

"Bobolink" — Joanna McGarvey, Nellie Dafoe, Audrey Gordon, Minnet, Paderewski—Jean Elliott.

Bonnets, Blue Lucille Green and Mrs. H. Rennie.

National Anthem.

Milk-for-Britain Fund Collection.

Before the concluding number, the chairman on behalf of the audience voiced appreciation of the efforts of Mrs. Rennie in teaching music in his district. A collection taken at the recital amounting to $12.25 is to be devoted to the Milk-for-Britain Fund sponsored by the Rhsamen Club, St. Andrew's.

The June meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Association will be held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. E. C. Prentice, Mrs. Frank Sweet contributed with the devotional period. Mrs. John Bonter read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Sweet read from the leaflet a paragraph on the theme "Prayer" and Mrs. W. H. Hamilton led in prayer pleading solo. Mrs. N. J. Pack gave a reading and a poem was made while the members listened to a broadcast by the King and then they stood at attention while the National Anthem was played by a British band. This period closed with the hymn "Which and Pray" and a dear prayer.

The roll call, "A garden memorial to Mrs. Biller," very well responded to. Reports of the financial secretary and treasurer were received showing the finances of the association to be in a very healthy state.

It was decided to purchase curtains for the parsonage where they were needed.

Mrs. Charles Arthart offered her home for the September meeting.

The association decided to pay the balance on the organ from the association funds rather than pay interest.

The members are holding a "tea" at the church on Wednesday afternoon to wash the dishes.

Mrs. Gordon Jarvis has offered her home at Crowe Lake for a picnic in August and members and their families are expected to attend.

A Normandy Beach

By LEW HAWKINS
Associated Press Correspondent

On a Normandy Beach, June 7 (delayed)—(AP)—This is a picture of a Normandy beach:

The water is a welter of wreckage.

There are derelicts from shore to many hundreds of yards off.

If you had a high line across considerable congestion, accentuated by the flash that ends a narrow strip of beach from 20 to 50 feet wide lies between high water mark and the grass at the beach's end.

Along the sharply riding allee of stones is stacked all of the vast store of American paraphernalia which managed to escape enemy fire during the landings.

Footroom is decreased further by the foxholes which must be dug in the sandy grassy strip on the beach on the side of a little bluff which saved thousands of lives.

There are long litters bearing those who did not escape the fire, but whose wounds stop carefully around the bodies.

The wounded await treatment.

Mrs. Wells, Mrs. Cadigan and Mrs. Prentice gave interesting accounts of the W.A. convention in the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, on May 16th.

Mrs. E. M. Cadigan conducted a short service of intercessional prayer, which was followed with the association prayer.

Plane Out of Gas Maynooth Flier Had to Bail Out

By LOUIS W. HUNTER
(CP War Correspondent)

With the R. C. A. F. in England, June 9 — (CP) — Calling to Pilot Harry Dowding of Sarnia, Ont., a Canadian fighting station in England to have been the first Allied airman to bail out "in his own town" landing on an emergency strip established on the French invasion area.

Dowding did it yesterday, coming down after beachhead flak had knocked out his engine and gas was spraying into his cockpit.

A companion, Fl. Lt. G. Kellie of Edmonton, "beat up" the airfield a few times to warn persons on it that an aircraft was coming in. Everyone cleared off but a French farmer who was pitching hay, and when Dowding landed he ran smack into the load of hay, escaping unhurt. Dowding returned to England by boat.

The previous day FO. Don Goodwin of Maynooth, Ont., baled out but his Spitfire crashed and he was out of gas after his tank was hit by flak. He jumped from 3,000 feet and picked up by a Polish destroyer a few hours later. He returned to England by launch the next day after spending the night on the ship.

Goodwin baled out once last year when his Spitfire and flak was operating from the George Cross island.

Dr. J. C. Ferguson Attends Burial Service of Sister

Dr. John C. Ferguson, formerly of Deloro, Ont., but now resident in New York, was in Belleville today en route to Iroquois, Ont., where he is attending the burial service of his sister, Mrs. Allan F. Sherman.

Mrs. Sherman was for many years resident in Belleville prior to removal to Toronto, where she passed away last winter at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Pearson. The remains were cremated and were taken today to Iroquois for burial in the family plot.

Mrs. Sherman was the youngest daughter of the late Rev. John Ferguson, who was for many years a minister of the Methodist denomination in the Belleville district. He was one of the founders of Albert College.

Dr. J. C. Ferguson is the last surviving member of a family of six children. He is a missionary to China where he founded a university and established an English language newspaper. Later he became adviser on foreign affairs to the Chinese government. A few weeks ago he visited the Empire cities in Toronto. His address occasioned much favorable comment in the Toronto press.
